The annual spring show of the Ops Agricultural Society will be held tomorrow. The showing of stock promises to be a good one, a number of fine animals being entered. Several new horses will be seen. Stock breeders should make it a point to attend.

We are After Bigger and More Lively Business During the Month of May . .

We've prepared for it as never before, with greater quantities of better Merchandise, and with a stronger determination then ever before to give better values, and we feel sure of getting it.

If we could make little fishes talk they would talk like whales about the good quality and splendid assortment of our new Spring and Summer stocks.

Good merchandise means good reputation. That is the reputation we've made and we're building a business for the future by offering reliable, up-to-date goods at our "low profit," "quick selling" method. This is a store, not a museum; a place to sell goods not to hoard them.

If you are not one of our regular customers we kindly ask you to come and visit us during the month of May. We'll endeavor to prove to you that for Fashionable Dry Goods and Millinery at low prices, FORD'S are doing them a little better than the rest.

You know our established policy that is bringing us the business.

General Dry Goods, Womens' Ready-to-wear Garments, and Millinery a specialty.

A strictly-cash-and-one-price-system that nothing can budge.

Buying with eight other good dry good stores in large quantities makes it possible to sell at lower prices.

All goods guaranteed to be exactly as advertised and as represented. We prefer to refund money for any unsatisfactory sale within reasonable time.

You'll do well to buy from our stock which is priced away below the present market prices. Goods are high but they will be higher before they will be lower. See large circular for sale prices. If your name is not on our mailing list, a post card request will bring you a circular containing many extra good values for the month of May.

CORRESPONDENTS' LETTERS

VICTORIA ROAD

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Mr. John McMahon, who has been suffering for the past three weeks from dangerous burns in attempt to put out the fire which broke out in his hotel, is, we are pleased to know, recovering.

Mr. Will Shields, Mr. F. Peel and Mr. Jack Peel, of Lindsay, spent Sunday with friends here.

The Rev. Father O'Sullivan and Mr. Wm. Mitchell left Monday morning for west Home. We hope for them a pleasant voyage and a safe return.

The members of the Epworth League spent Monday evening in a social gathering at the parsonage. Everyone was pleased and took forward with great anticipation to the next meeting.

Miss Josie Gallagher accompanied Father O'Sullivan to Toronto, where she intends spending a week's holiday.

Mr. J. D. Johnston, ex-mayor of Lindsay, was in town on Monday and Tuesday.

Mr. Anderson, sr., of Woodville, spent Sunday with friends here.

The Misses Mary Ellen and F. Graham spent Saturday in Kirkfield.

Miss Annie and Mr. Will Eyekman visited Beaverton friends last week.

Miss Ida Mae Graham returns home after spending the Winter with her sister, Mrs. Robert Robins. Miss Archer will be greatly missed, as she was very popular among the social functions undertaken by the young people.

Dr. Grant spent a few days in Toronto last week on business.

The sound of the new wheelie purchased by W. J. Chipper for his mill, reminds one of the large sawmill days. It is one of the finest in the district.

With the unusually late spring it is wise to investigate the seed with some good tonic. This can be had in abundance at the Victoria drug store.

OMEMEE.

(From Our Own Correspondent)

The weather has been favorable for seeding, considerable being done, and farmers are now anticipating a good spring rain falling.

The boys have a busy time at present catching suckers.

R. J. Courtenay and sons have erected a new sawmill, also a shingle machinery.

Mrs. J. E. Beatty, Mrs. (Dr.) Beatty, J. C. Eaton and Dr. Beatty were the first to spend the season here.

Mr. Jordan and M. Dockover, two Practical School Students, spent their home for a rest, under the parent roof.

The water in our river is unusually high after the spring rains and very pretty. Dr. Beatty's yacht will come up.

Mr. J. O'Neill, teacher, of Mount Horeb, Ont., a former student of Omemee, has invented an improved apparatus to demonstrate the moon, sun, earth and planets.

P. E. Thorburn, a student of Kingston College and Toronto University, is home for a rest after getting his B. A.

The Rev. Mr. Peckover is filling the seats at the Wednesday and Sabbath evening services.

Mr. Dobson, who succeeded Chas. Ivery in business here, has improved his premises, and opened up a 'Regional cash register and a magnificent display of new goods.

David H. Hea is preparing to erect a fine, up-to-date house.

Adj. Geo. Griffin has erected a new dwelling, the finest ever, and, just outside the corporation.

A meeting of the citizens decided to allow the Council to buy the band instruments and system of electric light, as established by J. E. Stevenson.

Mrs. M. Stirson suffered a loss of clothing from men playing with matches, to the value of $25, promptly settled by the Monarch Ins. Co. Edward D. Dodge, local agent. Had it not been for the heroic efforts of Mrs. S. in carrying out the burning clothing, a serious fire would have resulted.

Mrs. Stirson is "the provoking cousin, sly, 'All in a lifetime,'" will appear in the Omemee opera house. Don't miss it.

JANETVILLE.

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Mrs. Samuel McNeil, who recently went to Toronto to consult a specialist, has returned and is improving.

Mr. Edward Bradburn left a mare and valuable foal.

Messrs. John Cherry and Peter Fisher have purchased a new binder and are building a stone wall for Mr. Lynch, P.M.

Mr. Neil Grey and staff are putting up a large barn for Mr. Norman McGill.

We understand that Mr. Thos. Sproule, jr., has been about one hundred gallons maple syrup this season.

Sunday morning Rev. D. Ogden gave us a powerful sermon in the Presbyterian church, and a large congregation, from the text, "The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, the love of God and the communion of the Holy Ghost be with you all." Mr. Ogwald spoke very touchingly of his relation to the congregation which has looked for fourteen years and many weeps as they realized that one who had labored so faithfully and long among them was now speaking to them for the last time. Mr. Ogwald and family left Monday for New Westminster, B.C.

On Sunday evening Mr. David Heasip escaped what might otherwise have been a serious accident. Mr. Heasip was coming to church with his wife and daughters, and in going down Thorpton's hill a hoodblock became loosened, and the horse ran away. Mr. Heasip could not get control of the horse, but managed to keep him on the road till some friends came to his aid. The frightened animal

Next Sabbath is communion Sunday at the Methodist church. Service at 7 p.m. by the Epworth League.

Mrs. Jas. Hobbs recovered from her long illness and is able to be down again. As Mrs. Hobbs is very active in church work, her recovery is a benefit to the community as well as to her own family.

A meeting in the interests of the cheese factory was held in the Orange Hall Saturday night. Mr. Henwick, of Fleetwood, was present and offered to take the cheese under certain conditions. His proposition failed to meet the approval of the people, however, and the meeting adjourned without an agreement being made.

A number from here are talking of visiting the Dublin fair this season, among whom are Mr. Jas Howe, Mr. Bagnell, Mr. Geo. Hutchinson and others.

LIFFORD.

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Mr. and Mrs. Mulligan spent a few days in Cobourg last week.

Obituary

The many friends of Mrs. J. J. Perrault will sympathize with her in the loss of her eldest daughter, Mrs. W. S. Bate, of Toronto. Her death took place at the Wesley Hospital on Friday evening, after a long and suppressed illness. Mrs. Bate is survived by her husband and four young children. The funeral took place Monday at ten o'clock to Mount Pleasant cemetery.

Some Specimen 'Harbor Improvements' Wanted.

Included in the supplementary estimates for harbor improvements in Ontario are $800 for Gallesbur wharf, $1,000 for wharf at Bruce Mines and North Bay, and $2,000 for Beaverton.

Beaverton is on Lake Simcoe, and the largest "ship" that calls there could be shoved along on a long poles at dawn. Gallesburg and North Bay are "harbors" on Lake Nipissing at least. They are the ports of call in a national system of transportation which is Lake Temiscaming. Nor so are in a lively manufacturing and railway centre, but it is not even named on the map known to the men who go down to the sea in ships.

So long as we allow the national treasury to be drawn upon for real petty local works in Ontario, let us at least have the grace to call them what they are—pure and simple pork barrels. Let us be Opening of Jamestown Tercentennial Exposition By President.

BRITISH SHIPS TAKE PART

Naval and Military Review—Great Fleet of Foreign Vessels Present—Much Pomp and Ceremony Marked Function—Weather Was Dull —Many of the Buildings Are Still Incomplete.

Norfolk, Va., April 27.—The Jamestown Tri-Centennial Exposition—a land and water display such as never before has been witnessed in this country or on foreign shores—was opened yesterday with that pomp and ceremony which always attend an event where the President of the United States is in central figure and diplomatic representatives of foreign nations, governors of States and the dignitaries are honored guests and participants.

President Roosevelt received from the deck of the yacht-cruiser Mayflower the war vessels anchored in Hampton Roads. He reached Discovery Landing, having been transferred in a small launch from his yacht, shortly before noon, and amid applause from the thousands gathered to voice their welcome, he was received by the exposition management.

Then followed the program for opening to the public the enterprise commemorative of the 300th anniversary of the first English settlement in America.

Salute of 300 Guns.

At sunrise the ceremonies were begun by the United States artillery firing a salute of 300 guns to usher in the day. This was a grim and the trend of humanity to railroad strains, steamer whistles and lines, which from that moment poured people into the grounds.

Ten more minutes before President Roosevelt could proceed with his address, the people repeatedly greeted them with enthusiasm. As he passed the grand stand, which was to be opened the Exposition, it was the signal for the unfurling of a thousand or more flags on the various buildings. At the same time a signal was given to the warships, and to the Virginian at Fort Monroe, and all fired a salute. When the echoes of the last gun died away all of the bands on the Exposition grounds played the "Star Spangled Banner," the troops presented arms and all persons present baring their heads.

After the review the naval detachment returned to the vessels, and the army detachments went to camp Capitain John Smith, the point at the Exposition grounds.

Pressed the Button.

The pressing of a button in connection with the opening of an exposition was not so important a function in itself as has been expected. On account of the unreadiness of the buildings and the grounds, there was little machinery to be set in motion, and many of the buildings had not been supplied with flags to be unfurled. The coldest and most backward spring in the annals of Virginia, marked by severe rainstorms in the past month, was responsible for the opening ceremonies being marred by incomplete structures and uninstalled machinery. May 15 has been fixed as the day when the directors hope to be able to open the features of the show.

The day opened cloudy, but by 8 o'clock the sun shone forth and a strong breeze from the southeast soon drove the cloud banks beyond the horizon, leaving a clear sky. The breeze sweeping across Hampton Roads also tempered the heat, which had a tinge of mid-Summer in it by the time the President landed on the Exposition grounds.

President Was Early.

Norfolk, Va., April 27.—The Mayflower, bearing the President and Mrs. Roosevelt and party, arrived at the head of the naval review anchorage yesterday morning almost an hour before the usual time for quarters. The American flagship Connecticut, Rear Admiral Evans commanding, boomed out the first guns of the Presidential salute, the other American ships and the foreign vessels immediately followed.

The Mayflower headed toward Norfolk, passing along the outer line of foreign and the crews of warships were drawn up in close order along the forward and aft decks and on the superstructure and stood at attention.

The first of the British ships encountered was the Roxburgh, then the Hampshire, and next the Argyll. President Roosevelt was especially interested in the flagship Good Hope, and exchanged salutations with Admiral Neville, who stood on the bridge.

The Good Hope, together with the German Imperial flagship Bremen, were assigned berths to the right and left of the Connecticut. These three flagships formed a triangle, where the Mayflower at the end of the review dropped anchor. The President received the flag officers of the American and foreign warships, who had proceeded to the Exposition grounds. The President, in a small launch, followed.

POLICE OUTWITTED.

Gained Bunch of Feathers Only as Result of Raid.

Hamilton, April 29.—The police have a tame duck and a bunch of chicken feathers carefully locked up at No. 1 police station. That is all they got out of a Sunday morning raid on a shed on West King street, near the Beckjerk road, which was a gang of about 60 in the vicinity of the shed, but they got away at the sound of the police and got out of the coming of the Premier.

The officers captured a table and some other paraphernalia, and some chicken feathers. They regret to find no prima facie evidence that there had been gambling and a chicken fight in progress before their arrival. They failed to secure any names.

Fatal Storm In Texas.

Fort Worth, Tex., April 29.—One village is totally destroyed, extensive damage done to property and crops at other points, and eight lives are known to have been lost as a result of a storm which was general over this state Saturday.

HOUSE PROROGUED

Governor-General Brings Session to a Close On Saturday.

REVIEW OF LEGISLATION

Congratulation that Country Is Still Prosperous—Earl Grey's References to Work Accomplished—Question of Subsidies Disposed of—Satisfied With Immigrants—Postage Changes and Tariff Revision.

Ottawa, April 29.—A significant feature of Saturday's proceedings was found in the fact that only 45 people were in the Senate chamber, and about one-half of the Senators' seats (always gallantly surrendered) place was shown to accommodate the ladies of the smart set.

Although prorogation was announced for 3, it was 3.55 before His Excellency arrived. His brief speech in both French and English, and, as always, spoke with much musical resonance.

His Excellency said:

Honorable gentlemen of the Senate; gentlemen of the House of Commons:

"In bringing to a close the third session of the Second Parliament of Canada, I desire to express to you my thanks for the care and assiduity you have shown in the discharge of your important duties, the results of which are apparent in the many important acts which must prove of great benefit to this country.

"I am glad to observe that the full period for introduction of the last day of March was, in proportion to its length, the most prosperous in the history of the Dominion, and that the present indications are that the expanded trade and increase in public revenue will continue during the year that we are now entering, a fact that is particularly gratifying in view of the important undertakings to which Canada has recently set her hand.

"The stream of immigrants entering the Dominion from the world's fair is expanding, and it is very satisfactory to find that a large proportion of settlers from the British Isles than in former years. The recent revision of the tariff will, it is believed, meet with the general approval of the trade, removing as it does many previous hardships heretofore existing.

The Matter of Subsidies.

"One of the most important of the subjects which have engaged your attention is that of the subsidies and allowances to be paid out of the Dominion treasury to the several provinces. I trust that the proposed changes in the imperial legislation respecting which you have adopted an address to His Majesty will, if enacted, go far towards removing the grievances of which the Provincial Governments have complained as to the insufficiency of their revenues.

"The substantial aid now offered towards the establishment of cold storage facilities will remove the exception of those necessary adjuncts for the preservation of perishable foods.

"I have observed with gratification the passage of an act having for its object the maintenance of industrial peace in all public utilities. This legislation is already applied with success. It is confidently expected that when the provisions of the act for the settlement of industrial disputes are fully understood both employes and employers will be ready to refer their differences to boards of conciliation and conciliation and thus avoid the evils following strikes and lockouts.

Postal Changes.

"The arrangements lately made between the Imperial and Canadian postal departments, providing for a substantial reduction in newspapers and periodicals coming from the United Kingdom, have, I am glad to know been received with marked satisfaction as a measure likely to promote a freer communication between the mother country and Canada.

"Gentlemen of the House of Commons, I thank you in His Majesty's name for the liberal supplies you have granted for the public service.

"Honorable gentlemen of the Senate, gentlemen of the House of Commons: In now relieving you from your arduous duties I express my fervent hope that when we meet again at the next session of your Parliament the prosperity which now prevail throughout Canada, and in the meantime let us not forget to express gratitude for a year of abundance for the many blessings conferred upon our country."

Mysterious Disappearance.

Belleville, April 29.—E. B. Davis, a well-known mining man, who has been carrying on operations in North Hastings, has disappeared. Some time ago he left Madoc for the Bannockburn mines, and before going gave a valuable diamond to James Cockram, proprietor of the St. Lawrence Hall, Madoc, for safe keeping. Since then he has not been seen. It is feared he has met with foul play.

Lords and Commons.

London, April 29.—According to The Daily Telegraph this Government's plan for dealing with conflicts between the House of Lords and the House of Commons will be a proposal that in case of a disagreement both Houses shall sit and vote together, the majority vote of the combined Houses deciding the dispute.

Sends Out Agitators.

Tangier, April 29.—The bandit Raisuli, who recently captured Ion Humara, have sent out a number of clever revolutionary agitators to foment a revolt against the Sultan, who is accused of having sold Oudja to France. The agitators are likely to result in widespread rebellion.

Must Serve Life Sentence.

Kingstown, April 29.—Frank Miner, who was convicted Wednesday of murder in the second degree for the killing of James A. Toboy, on the night of Oct. 24, 1906, was sentenced on Saturday to Auburn prison for life.

Snow Covers Northwest.

St. Paul, April 29.—An inch of snow Saturday covered the Northwest from Lake Michigan to the Dakotas. Colder weather is predicted.

FIFTEEN YEARS OF ECZEMA

Affected Hands, Arms and Legs—Endured Terrible Itching and was Unable to Sleep—Would Tear the Bandages to Scratch the Skin —In less than One Week

CURED BY THE CUTICURA REMEDIES

"I had eczema nearly fifteen years. The affected part was my hands, arms and legs. They were the worst in the winter time and would then always itchy, and I would not sleep from scratching them. I had to keep both hands bandaged all the time, and at night I would then have to scratch through the bandages and the itching was so severe and at times I would have to tear everything off to relieve the pain of the skin. I could not rest or sleep. I had several doctors and treated me but they could not give me a permanent cure, nor even relief from the itching. After using the Cuticura Soap one hot Cuticura ointment and two hottie Cuticura Resolvents for about six days the itching had ceased, and now the sores have disappeared, and I never felt better than I do now." (Signed) Edward Wendt, March 20th, 1906, 147 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.

The most torturing and disfiguring humors, eczemas, rashes, itchings, irritations and inflammations of the skin, scalp and blood, with loss of hair, with fatal claims, and adults are instantly relieved and speedily and permanently cured by the Cuticura Remedies, when all else fails.

Cuticura Soap (medicinal, the purest of the finest toilet soaps), Cuticura Ointment (the great skin and blood remedy), and Cuticura Resolvent (the new blood purifier), are sold by all druggists and dealers throughout the world. Potter Drug & Chemical Corporation, Sole Prop., Boston, Mass.

HINDOOS ARE RESTLESS.

Race Hatred Fomented In India, Riots Are Feared.

Lahore, British India, April 29.—Rifles and twenty rounds of ball cartridges have been served out to the local volunteers in consequence of signs of marked unrest among the Hindoo student elements.

The publication of inflammatory and seditious articles in the native newspapers, inciting race hatred against the Europeans and demanding native control of the Government of India by means of the Swadeshi movement, has been followed recently by riots in various towns in the Punjab, and by attacks on Europeans.

Professional and political agitators have been seen addressing the rabble roads and the government has considered it its duty to suppress these rioting by forceful means if necessary. The authorities are satisfied that the determined front will speedily end the outward signs of disaffection, especially as the rioters have disapproved by part of the great Mohammedan population, who, at numerous mass meetings, have emphatically condemned the anti-European movement.

Recent events have given a remarkable impulse to enlistment in the volunteers, the commanders and five judges of the supreme court, the director of public instruction, a dozen professors, high Government officials and a number of prominent merchants, all of whom have entered the ranks as privates.

HARBOR SET ALIGHT.

Fire On Pier Endangers Lives of Many Workmen.

New York, April 29.—Fire on one of the export piers at the foot of North River, Brooklyn, on Saturday, set about $100,000 damage and endangered the lives of many hundred workmen, employed in the vicinity. Two men leaped into the bay to escape the flames, and were drowned.

When the fire broke out, the pier contained a large number of boxes of petroleum, and numbers of the employes began to throw them into the river. As the flames spread they hurried to lighters and were towed out of danger.

Burning oil flowed into the bay, and the flames spread over the water for some distance. One lighter caught fire as the oil spread over the water, but was partly destroyed. Several persons were slightly injured.

"COPS" ROUGHLY USED.

Have Exciting Time Arresting Man For Theft.

Hamilton, April 29.—Detectives Bleakley and Miller had an exciting time on Saturday afternoon trying to Charles Crisp, wanted at Windsor on a charge of stealing a horse.

They came across their man in a bar room in the M. and M. Hotel, at King William and Wellington streets. They were about fifty men in the bar and when the officers made for the man to arrest Crisp's brother and about a dozen others interfered.

There was rough house for a time and the officers were mauled considerably, but came out of the scrap with their men, though they were both scratched and bruised.

Stromboli Active.

Catania, Sicily, April 29.—The royal observatory on Mount Etna registers an extraordinary eruption of the volcano on the Island of Stromboli.

The volcano is throwing out large quantities of ashes and cinders, which are damaging vineyards in both Sicily and Calabria.

Naples, April 29.—Frequent slight shocks of earthquake were felt in Calabria yesterday. The populace of Sicilian Italy especially of Naples, is fearful lest there be a repetition of the disaster of 1908.

THE PRICE OF CONCESSION

United States Must Give Up Something in Return for Pelagic Sealing—British Foreign Secretary to Confer With Sir Wilfrid Laurier on Subject—May Effect a Settlement — Modus Vivendi.

London, April 29.—Foreign Secretary Grey is taking advantage of the presence of the Colonial Premiers in this city to obtain the opinion of one of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Sir Robert Bond on the questions pending between the United States and Canada and Newfoundland respectively.

The Secretary already has had conferences with Sir Robert, but it was largely taken up with the discussion of the modus vivendi, which the Unit ed States and Great Britain signed to cover the last fishing season, and to which the Newfoundland Premier strenuously objected on the ground of "interference with the affairs of the colony."

Against Interference.

Further interviews will occur, looking to the permanent settlement of the fisheries dispute, on a recognized that this is not easy of accomplishment, as there is a strong sentiment against any interference of the Imperial Government with the affairs of the colonies.

The Canadian negotiations are giving the Foreign Secretary even more trouble than the fisheries dispute Newfoundland is interested, but every effort will be put forth to bring about a settlement of the Canadian claim. Not more than two days have been spent in the negotiations, and, as it now appears, the Canadian claim, which at first was regarded as a mere formality, has made an appointment with the Foreign Secretary for the coming week when the whole matter will be discussed.

Sir Wilfrid expressed to the Associated Press representatives that the hands in which the negotiations were left, and upon which the claim had come, but from other sources it was learned that the claim for the difference of views between United States Secretary of State Root and the Canadian claim.

Demand Compensation.

In return for the claim the Canadians demand some national compensation in return for the rights they have waived to concede. As an example, to give up pelagic sealing they will ask that the United States to buy out the sealers, but also want a further concession from the United States, which might take the form of a port in Alaska to give Canada an entrance to the Canadian Yukon district without passing through American territory.

At a dinner of the National Liberal Club, Sir Robert Bond took the occasion to vigorously denounce the modus vivendi, repeating what he said in his Newfoundland speech on departure from Newfoundland.

BLAMES SIR WILFRID.

Says Laurier Killed the Imperial Council Idea.

London, April 29.—The Saturday Review says the proposal of an imperial council has been killed by Premier Laurier, Premier Botha and General Botha.

The Spectator says the abandonment of an imperial council was largely due to the line taken by Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Mr. Haldane, referring to the conference speech, Saturday, said he had made a step forward towards the organization of the Imperial forces for the defence of the Empire as a whole.

The Times says the Premier of Premier Bond's appeal for Newfoundland will not go unconsidered amid the greater issues which are at stake.

Dr. Charles Harris is to be admitted to the Presbyterial Co. of Physicians on Tuesday.

Charge Against Minister.

Cayuga, April 29.—The Methodist Church will be asked to take the case of a big trial on Tuesday. The judge will be Dr. Shaw, of London, president of the Hamilton conference, and five pastors of this district will constitute the jury. The main defendant is Rev. J. H. Dyke, pastor of the Methodist church at Jarvis, who for a long time has had a dozen charges, preferred against him by one of his officials, laid the charges. Rev. Mr. Dyke, in turn, has filed a charge against Rev. Mr. Mathers, Hagersville, the district president. The charges against Rev. Mr. Dyke are defamation of character, falsehood, demoralizing conduct, unfair treatment and disorderly conduct in the church.

Traveler In Trouble.

Toronto, April 29.—J. J. Cummings, a Toronto traveler, was robbed Saturday morning at Chatham, Ont., during his visit to Chatham, Ont., charging him with fraud.

Cummings, it is alleged, undertook to sell a quantity of wine on commission for Weimer Bros. of Berlin. He advised the firm he had sold it and he had sold two casks to an Ottawa firm. Weimer Bros. sent him a bill covering the amount of the commission, which he refused to pay. The firm then denied any knowledge of the transaction.

Cummings will be taken to Berlin to-day.

Fraternal Association Officers.

Toronto, April 29.—At Saturday's session of the Canadian Fraternal Association Past Chief Ranger J. H. Emory was presented with a gold-headed cane.

The officers for the ensuing year were installed by John A. Paterson, K. C., of Toronto, president; Robert Millman, M.D., Toronto; vice-president, E. T. Wheeler, London; secretary-treasurer, William F. Montagu, Hamilton; councillor, Lyman Lee, Hamilton; representative, Dr. John Ferguson, Toronto; chairman of medical section, Dr. E. Ryan, Kingston.

CAUSED TREMENDOUS WAVE

Feared Many Workmen Have Perished—Three Dead Bodies Taken From Wreckage — Men Believed to Be Beneath the Ruins—Immigrants In Panic on the Steamer—Vessel Lifted High in Air.

Baltimore, April 29.—With a roar that terrified thousands and a rush that drove a wave six feet high to Canton parts of the superb harbor of Baltimore, nearly half of a new pier under construction at Locust Point Saturday broke away from the shore and and plunged into the water. Three dead bodies have been taken from the wreckage, five men are missing and many bodies are almost certainly beneath the ruins, and eighty men are suffering from injuries more or less serious.

The dead include Howard L. Ellender, civil engineer. The missing are laborers.

It is to be certain why the catastrophe occurred. The new pier was being built by the Baltimore Bridge Co., and the McLean Contracting Co. for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and was to have been used by the steamers of the Johnson Line. It was a two-story structure, 930 feet long, about 500 feet of which was on land.

Plunged Into the Harbor.

The water end was built upon piles, upon which a black bed of concrete was laid and above this rose the superstructure of wood. The inner section of the pier was approaching completion, and was ready for roofing. This section was separated from the land end by a heavy fire wall. Late yesterday Saturday morning crackings were heard, and the workmen were called to places of safety. Just as many of them were struggling through the debris of the fire wall, the collapse, and with 430 feet of the water end of the pier, plunged into the harbor, carrying a number of men with it. Ellender, the dead civil engineer, who was acting superintendent for the McLean Contracting Co. lost his life in trying to warn the men of their danger. His body was recovered. Portions of others were found among the wreckage.

Immigrants Badly Scared.

At the pier adjoining the wrecked structure, was moored the North German Lloyd's steamer Cassel and on board there were a large number of immigrants. The immense wave that followed the collapse of the new pier into the water lifted the Cassel high in the air, dashed the steamer against the pier and was crushed in badly, tore the steamer from her moorings and sent her adrift. The steamer was carried for a short time in a state bordering on panic, but no serious damage was overboard, but were rescued. The Neptune line steamer Bjorn was also torn from the dock, where she was moored, as was also the Norwegian steamer Fortuna, tearing her from rails. Her wire hawsers snapped like twine. The Fortuna's crew, when the accident occurred, and the wave had spread beyond the pier, jumped ashore cast a number of smaller vessels adrift, and caused much confusion for a time.

ENGINE LEAPS BRIDGE.

Falls Into Creek But Passengers Have Miraculous Escape.

Pittsburg, Pa., April 29.—Two trainmen were killed and one hundred passengers had a thrilling escape from greater disaster when the Wabash railroad yesterday when the engine and one passenger coach left the bridge on train No. 27 left the tracks half a mile west of the Ohio River station, near here, and plunged into Chartier's Creek, forty feet below. Scores of passengers were saved by a smoking car which is now regarded as providential. The dead are: Charles Ewing, fireman, Rooks Station; Frank Metcalse, brakeman, Rooks Station. The train was crossing a trestle when without warning the engine suddenly leaped from the rails and dashed into the stream underneath, carrying the first coach with it. Nearly all the passengers were in the other coaches.

Charged With Manslaughter.

Montreal, April 29.—Joseph Savard, accused of causing the death of Joseph Gareppy by striking him on the head with a rickle rod, has been bound over by Judge Choquette to stand trial for manslaughter.

Killed In Prize Ring.

Walsenburg, Colo., April 29.—Thomas Mike Ryan, a miner, died Saturday from the effects of a blow on the head given him in a boxing match in a prize fight Friday night. Irons was arrested.

Miller's mother became delirious when informed of her son's death, and it feared the shock may terminate fatally.

TO PLAY ON MAY 24th.

Secretary R. J. Menzies, of the Wideawakes, informs us that he has completed arrangements with the fast Sellers-Gough team, of Toronto for a game here on May 24. The Sellers-Gough team play clever ball, and defeated St. Michael's just recently.

LEADS THE LEAGUE.

Clarence Currie, once the idol of the Toronto fans, but now with Buffalo, was knocked out of the box by his one-time fellow players on Monday. Toronto won by 8 runs to 5 and lead the Eastern League with 3 wins and no losses. Big Jack Thoney was the star of the Canadian outfit, and the way he landed on the ball made the fans sit up and stare. His fielding was very fast, also. Four hits and two runs were his record for the game.

"KING KEL" GOOD.

Manager Kelly, of the Torontos, is bound to have his bunch of Maple Leafs win if he has to knuckle down and do the needful himself. No, you don't catch Kelly pulling grass. Instead, he's banging out singles, doubles and three baggers and pulling down the high ones at first base. In the recent Rochester-Toronto game, when the Maple Leafs won by 2 to 1, he secured three of the six hits and drove in the winning two runs with two out in the eighth. Moffitt handed Rochester its only run on a wild pitch and a mess of a slow grounder.

Eastern League standing up to Monday:

Clubs	Won	Lost	Pct.
Toronto	3	0	1.000
Montreal	2	1	.667
Jersey City	3	2	.600
Newark	3	2	.600
Providence	2	3	.400
Baltimore	2	3	.400
Buffalo	1	2	.333
Rochester	0	3	.000

Here is Kittredge's opinion of Montreal; "I have a great team this year. Not a weak spot anywhere, and some places very strong. Hill and Shearn at third and short are two especially fine players, and I have a very hard hitting outfield. My pitching staff is first-class; in fact, I don't see how we can lose. We should have had two out of three here, but rain beat us one day when we were three runs to the good."

Ball players, the hardest worked and probably the best conditioned athletes in the world, are the loosest in training rules. Most of them either chew or smoke, a few do both, and none are famous for early hours or light eating.

SWIMMING.

M. Daniels, of the New York Athletic Club, last Wednesday night, in the tank of the East Liberal baths, clipped 3-5 second from the world's 80-yard swimming record, covering the distance in .43 2-5. The record was made in competition, Guy M. Dailey, of Pittsburg, and two New York swimmers participating.

WRESTLING.

CANADIAN WON

Eugene Tremblay, the stout little Montreal light weight wrestler, is the victor of the match between him and Ackerman, the Yankee. The conditions provided for a weight of 138 pounds, the lightweight limit, but Ackerman weighed considerably more and a new match was arranged, Ackerman going in to down Tremblay twice within an hour. The smaller man was too slippery for the big Yankee, however, and his shoulders never once touched the mat.

At Chicago Frank Gotch defeated Beel on the first and third falls for the American championship.

LACROSSE

"NO PLACE LIKE HOME".

So says Pat McDonough, the Beaverton crack, and the Irishman is now safe at home under the wings of Harry Cameron. After tantalizing every lacrosse team of repute in Ontario Paddy thought it was getting near May 1st and went back home. They're riled, too—Peterboro, Newmarket and the rest of them, and predict trouble for the rambling Checker.

RUNNING.

THE BOSTON MARATHON.

They're off, the multitude all shout, and the great race has begun.
More than a hundred runners o'er the dusty road are strung.
Five and twenty miles to Boston ere the trying race is o'er,
Yet each runner hopes to win it, and the record perhaps to lower,
Up hill, down dale, the runners go;
some falling by the way;
But who will be the winner, no one,
as yet can say.
Where, where is gallant Bennett, and oh! where is our LeBarre—
Both men still in the running—from the leaders are not far,
But how the rain begins to fall, mud
clogs their weary feet:
Still onward, ever onward, with the moisture perhaps a treat.
Now, the race is nearly over, for the leader is in sight,
With no one near to push him, yet
he runs with springy might.
Hurrah! a dusky runner wins it!
Oh glorious sight to see,
Our maple leaf is on his breast stamped with Toronto's T.
Tom Longboat, Canada greets you who brought our land renown,
And may there be a hot time when you strike Toronto's town.

THE YANKEES CLAIM HIM

It's always a cinch bet that when a Canadian accomplishes anything out of the ordinary in an athletic sense that the United States papers will claim him as their own. Here's the latest from New York; "Longboat is a Canadian runner, it is true, but it is impossible to get away from the fact that he is first of all an American, with a better claim to that name than any other athlete, and if he enters the Marathon race in the Olympic games next year he is picked as the man who will win for the western continent."

HIS FIRST RACE.

Tom Longboat's very first race was run when he was but twelve years old. It was with a cow belonging to a neighbor. Tom got her by the tail and ran her around a field till she died. He reaped more trouble than glory from that race.

Sherring said: Longboat's performance was really wonderful. With proper handling he ought to win all the distance events at the London Olympic games of 1908. He is the one man in America to run twelve miles in an hour, and on a good track is possessed of speed to break all records from one mile to twenty-five.

A HARRIER CLUB.

Long distance running is the craze throughout Canada and everywhere harrier clubs are springing up and training promising youngsters for future honors. A sport that exercises and strengthens every muscle in the body, it must necessarily be looked upon with favor by lovers of healthful outdoor sports and exercises. The stamina that carries a youngster through the gruelling part of a long run is a desirable quality in every walk of life and the spirit of "stick-ativeness" is one that must be fostered.

Every city, town and village has men of wind and speed, and a harrier club would be a desirable feature. In our own town, as was exhibited at last year's 10-mile race, we have good runners. Then why not form a Harrier club, under the Y.M.C.A. or some independent colors, and indulge in weekly or fortnightly runs? Every athlete in Lindsay would be interested, and some splendid runners developed.

Longboat and Petch will probably be the Canadian representatives in the Olympic games in England next year.

Brockville is the latest addition to the harrier ranks. The new club has some fast men, and intend having a word to say in a few of the big meets.

Peculiar Railway Accident.

A singular accident happened at Claremont, on the C. P. R., one day last week. A freight train was going east, and when a little west of Claremont, a cattle car loaded with ties, situated in the centre of the train, jumped the track and went over the embankment into a farmer's field. The train came together again, coupled up, and went on without stopping.

G.T.R. WRECK AT WHITBY

DRIVER ELMHIRST AND BRAKESMAN FARRELL INJURED.

Double-Header Left Lindsay at 6 p. m.—Wreck Occured at 9 O'clock.

Last evening at nine o'clock a double-header freight from Lindsay crashed into a car lying "foul" on a siding at Whitby.

David Farrell, the front brakesman, was on the engine, and was badly injured. His leg was broken in two places above the knee, and his head badly cut. He is in the Ross Hospital at present. Phillip Elmhirst, driver of one of the engines, had his foot gashed, and a couple of stitches were necessary to close the wound.

The two engines—Nos. 272 and 229—were badly wrecked, the cabs being torn off. The train was in charge of Conductor A. Seaton, of town. Harry Wilson was the driver of the other engine, and was uninjured.

The freight left Lindsay at six o'clock. At Whitby a main line train was in the siding to allow the freight to pass. The siding could only accommodate 27 cars and there were 29 on the train, thus leaving one foul. It is not yet known whether it was through the negligence of employees, or whether others had been tampering with the cars, that they were left in this condition. An engine was dispatched from Lindsay, and returned this morning about 5 o'clock with the wrecked engines and the injured man. Farrell was taken to the Ross Hospital, where he is progressing favorably. His home is at Stirling, and he has been in town only about two weeks, boarding at Mrs. Hill's, Lindsay-st. He is young, unmarried, and has been on the road but a short time. It will be some time before he recovers. Mr. Elmhirst resides on Cambridge-st., south, is married, and has a family. His injury is not serious.

MAKES NEW BLOOD

That Is How Dr Williams' Pink Pills Cure the Common Ailments of Life.

Making new blood. That is just what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are always doing—actually making new blood. The new blood strengthens every organ in the body and strikes straight at the root of anaemia, and the common ailments of life which have their origin in poor, weak, watery blood. Mrs. A. H. Seeley, of Stirling, Ont., tells what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills did for her fourteen year old sister, Miss Annie Sager, after other treatment had failed. She says: "For some years Annie had not been well. She would take spells of dizziness and headaches that would last for several days, and her whole body would become dry and hot as though she was burning up with fever. Her lips would swell until near the bursting point, and then when the fever would leave her the outer skin of the lips would peel off. She doctored with two different doctors, but they did not succeed in curing her, and the trouble seemed gradually to be growing worse. Then we began giving her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and under this treatment she has recovered her health. The headaches and dizziness have gone, her color is improved; her appetite better, and she has had no further attacks of the fever which baffled the doctors. We are greatly pleased with what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for her, and recommend them to other sufferers."

It was the rich, red blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make which cured Miss Sager. That is why these pills cure all common ailments like anaemia and debility, headaches and backaches, indigestion, rheumatism, neuralgia, St. Vitus dance and the special ailments that prey on the health and happiness of girls and women of all ages. Get the genuine Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, with the full name on the wrapper around each box. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

EXCELLS COBBLER'S PLAN

Proposed That the Town's Supply of Coal Ashes Be Used on Parks and Roads.

Meeting of the Council Last Monday Night—Duties of Market and Town Hall Caretakers Defined—The Town Carters' Kick—Other Matters.

A special session of our Town Fathers was held Monday evening, Mayor Vrooman and all members present. The object was to receive the report of the special committee appointed to consider and define the duties of the Market Clerk and caretaker of the Clerk's office, Council chamber, etc., but some general business was also taken up.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Jas. O'Connell, offering to plant trees on the north end of the town park.—Town Property committee.

From James Chambers, offering to cut the grass on the town parks at the same rate as last year—17c. per hour.—Town Property committee.

From Messrs. McLaughlin, Peel & Fulton, with reference to accounts sent in by G. H. Hopkins, ex-Town Solicitor. The claim for refund on sewer connection was an untenable one—many citizens were paying towards sewers which they were not using. The claim for payment for services in case McDonald vs. Chalmers was likely correct. — Laid on table.

From G. W. Essay, of Toronto Crushed Stone Co., with reference to supply of material.—Board Works.

From G. H. M. Baker, protesting against new granolithic walk being placed close to fence. — Board of Works.

From A. W. Cartwright, secretary Board of Railway Commissioners, notifying Council of a session to be held in Lindsay on Tuesday, May 7th, at 10 a.m., and asking that necessary accommodation be provided. Business—to consider the application of the Grand Trunk, re crossings on Kent and Lindsay-sts.—Fyled.

Tenders for cement were received from Messrs. Baker & Bryans, Flavelles Limited and Maunder & Son.—Laid on table.

From Dennis Wire & Iron Works, L'td, quoting prices for expanded metal and beams for walk on west side of St. Paul-st.......Chairman Rea — "I have accepted the offer, it being the lowest."

A number of accounts were read and referred to the proper committees.

From Market Clerk Callaghan, reporting the collection of $67.67 in weighing fees and tolls during the month of March.—Fyled.

From Chief Nevison, presenting report for March and April.—Fyled.

From secretary Board of Health, enclosing copy of resolution passed at meeting of 3rd April, asking Council to appoint a town scavenger who would have full control of the situation; also to appoint a veterinary surgeon to inspect the cattle supplying milk for town dairies. — On table.

PETITIONS.

From Ira Ingle, George Ingle, and others, asking that a ditch be made for storm water on St. Lawrence-st., from Glenelg to Melbourne-st. — Board of Works.

Ald. Rea, chairman Board of Works, presented a petition from E. Crozier, T. D. Staples, Albert Nicholl and others, for a five foot granolithic walk on the Local Improvement plan on north side of Glenelg-st., from Albert to Sussex-st.

From John Hore, Robt. Naylor and Michael Hogan, asking for a granolithic walk on the east side of Victoria-ave., from Colborne to Regent-sts.—Town Clerk, for certificate.

THE BAND'S AFFAIRS.

On motion, Mr. Richard Sylvester was granted permission to speak. Band affairs was his theme—the boys were doing good work and were a credit to the town, but he (Mr. Sylvester) felt they were not getting the support they deserved. The band had been in his firm's debt since organization, and at the present time owed about $250. Now they required new uniforms, the present ones being nearly three years' old, and this item, the salary of a leader, and other necessary expenses, would call for an outlay of $1200 this year. His firm were willing to be at a considerable cost in order to help the band along, but they could not face the whole thing. Unless the Council saw fit to contribute $500 this year, instead of $300, the band would fall to pieces.

The matter was referred to the Finance committee.

THE CARTERS' GRIEVANCE.

A number of town carters having entered the chamber, it was surmised they had a grievance, and they were invited to unbosom themselves.

Messrs. Alf. Robinson and James Hutton were the spokesmen. The former objected to the new rule laid down by the Board of Works that a load of gravel shall measure one and one-quarter yards, and that six loads shall be drawn daily from the town pit by each carter in the employ of the town. It might be possible to do so in good weather, but when the roads became bad in the fall it would be impossible to do so.

Ald. Rea—"Would it make it any easier if we put a man in the pit to help at loading?"

Mr. Robinson—"It certainly would."

Ald. Rea—"I told Mr. Begg to engage last year's carters if they would draw as big a load as the others, and we really have enough now who are willing to do the right thing. Why, the people were making sport of the bits of loads drawn last year by the carters."

Mr. Hutton ventured the opinion that the men who were drawing the big loads now would quit when the bad weather came—then the town carters would have to go on duty."

Reeve Begg—"The carters can haul a yard and a quarter all right; when the roads become bad the street overseer can exercise a little discretion and let them load a trifle lighter. The overseer should see to it that all the boxes are measured carefully and are fit to contain the quantity mentioned."

Ald. McLean—"A yard and a quarter of gravel is not too much to draw under favorable conditions, and if the foreman has any horse sense he will know when to make the load light. We should place a good shoveller in the pit to help load and keep the pit roadway in shape to allow heavy loads to be taken out."

Mr. Hutton—"Give us 50c. a yard and let us do our own loading."

Ald. McLean—"No, that plan will not answer."

Dep.-reeve Jordan—"Isn't a yard and a third a big average load?"

Ald. McGeough—"It is, I can tell you that when I was working for the town on Wellington-st. bridge I had more trouble with the carters than all the rest bunched together. They removed a bottom board and skimped the load by pinching the box sides, and when I caught them at it they asked for a man in the pit to help at loading. Then they began to deliver one load less per day, and when I jumped on my wheel and went to the pit to investigate I found them sitting around while the man I sent to help them was filling their wagons. I then made up my mind that I would attempt no more work for the corporation, and I haven't."

Ald. McLean—"They are willing to do the right thing now if we give them a man to help."

Ald. McGeough—"Well, he'll have to be a big one or else they'll run on him."

Mayor Vrooman—"The plan may be tried, at any rate."

Reeve Begg—"The overseer should make it a point to measure all boxes."

CEMENT TENDERS.

Moved by Reeve Begg, seconded by Ald. McLean, that the lowest tenders for cement—those of Maunder & Son and Flavelles Limited—be accepted, and the quantity required be divided between them.—Carried.

DUTIES OF CARETAKERS, ETC.

The following report of the special committee appointed to define the duties of the market and town hall caretakers, etc., was submitted by Reeve Begg:

At a meeting of the committee appointed to investigate and suggest amendments as to the duties of certain town officials, all the members being present, the following suggestions were unanimously concurred in;

1st.—That in addition to the duties of the market clerk, as already defined under the market by-law, he shall keep clean, or have the public closets kept clean, also the drinking fountain and drinking cup attached.

2nd.—That the market by-law be further amended by placing the market clerk under the control of the chairman of Town Property, instead of under the control of the Town Property committee, as at present.

3rd.—That to the duties of the caretaker, as already defined under the by-law, shall be added the taking care of and keeping clean the large hall upstairs, and to heat the same when required to do so. It shall be the duty of the caretaker to keep clean the lock-up and cells, and these duties to be performed to the satisfaction of, and under the direction of the chairman of Town Property.

4th.—That officials must not purchase supplies without first having an order from the chairman of Town Property.

5th.—That the watering of the streets be under the control of the chairman of Town Property, and that he be authorized to dictate the route and distance for each team.

6th.—That the following by-laws and amendments be repealed: By-laws No. 749, No. 882, No. 964, and that the Clerk be instructed to draw new by-laws in conformity with the above suggestions.

J. B. BEGG,
A. E. VROOMAN,
JOS. G. EYRES.

Mayor Vrooman advised that the by-laws proposed to be repealed be read clause by clause—it was possible that not all of them would have to be interfered with. This was agreed to.

While Clerk Knowlson went on a trip to the vault upstairs for the by-laws required, his Worship took occasion to refer to the open ditch on east side of York-st., from Kent to Peel-st. It turned out that the ditch had been opened by the late John McDonald. On motion Ald. was instructed to have the ditch tiled and covered in.

Some discussion followed — led by Ald Eyres—as to the advisability of transferring the granolithic walk petitioned for on south side of Glenelg-st., between Cambridge and Victoria-ave., to north side of same street.

Alderman Rea, chairman Board of Works, explained that it would not be necessary to do so, a petition being in circulation for the block mentioned.

The by-laws referred to in the committee's report were next read by the Clerk, whereupon a division of [...] [re]quiring the market caretaker to look after the closets. As Dep.-reeve Jordan and Alderman Devitt and McGeough pointed out, the sentiment connected with the thing was not nice, and while the caretaker was known to be a cleanly man, and might look clean, the recollection of his other duties might prejudice buyers and others.

Ald. Weldon was in favor of having the caretakers attend before Council while the question was being discussed, whereupon Ald. Eyres said he was surprised to hear his legal friend talk that way, he having been one of the first to propose a committee.

Finally, on motion of Ald. Weldon, seconded by Ald. McLean, the several clauses of the report were adopted.

TOWN SCAVENGING.

When the appointment of a town savenger or scavengers was before the Council, Ald. Eyres referred to the town's supply of waste ashes, remarking that if they were placed on the town park or streets they would be of more use than when carted away to the dumping ground.

Reeve Begg outlined the cause of the scavengers' strike, and Council agreed that the price for removal of night soil be increased from 75c. to $1.

Mr. Tompkins, caretaker of the dumping ground, was heard. He He favored the appointment of a couple of responsible men.

Dep.-reeve Jordan made a sensible suggestion when he said the citizens should not have to run about looking for a scavenger—orders should be left at the police office or with the sanitary inspector. The latter was agreed to.

Moved by Ald. Weldon, seconded by Ald. McGeough, that two savengers only be licensed, and that the rate be $1 per bbl.—Carried.

Ald. McLean—"To have a load of coal ashes taken to the dumping ground costs 60c., while they could be delivered at the park for 25c. Then again, they could be used on the roads."

Mr. Devitt—"We are losing a lot of money by not using our coal ashes on the roads. They make grand filling."

Ald. W. Jordan—"On a mud road coal ashes make a grand foundation."

Moved by Ald. McLean, seconded by Ald. Weldon, that carters be informed through the press that they may deposit clean coal ashes on the streets or park under the direction of the town overseer.—Carried.

POLICEMEN'S CLOTHING.

Night Constable Short appeared before the aldermen to strengthen his request that he be supplied with a new uniform and helmet for summer wear. The winter uniform he was wearing was 18 months old and was shabby, while the cap was weighty—"heavier than his head", as Dep.-reeve Jordan remarked, in jocular mood. He proposed that the purchase of the clothing for the police be left with the Commissioners, and was backed up by Ald. Eyres, but Mayor Vrooman (a member of the Commission) said the act gave them no such power. Finally Ald. McGeough, chairman of the Police and Lighting committee was empowered to act.

By-law No. 1118, appointing an assistant town teamster, was read a third time and passed, after which Ald. Eyres gave notice of his intention to introduce a by-law regulating fire escapes.

..HOUSEFURNISHINGS..

Was there ever a time when new furnishings were more needed than in the spring? When the glaring light of the sun streams into a room, whose every corner is laid bare beneath the scrutinizing gaze, 'tis then the particular housekeeper shudders at the picture presented; old worn and faded carpets, lace curtains, frescoed with a legion of holes, which at this season look so appalling. The good master of the house, if considerate, will know that nothing will so rouse the flagging spirits of a tired wife as a few new articles of housefurnishings.

We have some fine new goods in these lines :—

New Union Carpets, 1 yd wide, from 25c to .... 50c per yd
New Wool Carpets, 1 yd wide, from 60c to .... $1.00 per yd
New Tapestry Carpets, from 50c and 65c up.
New Brussels Carpets, in stair and body carpet, $1.00 up.
New Union and Wool Art Squares, 3x4 yds, beautiful floral designs, from $6 00 to $14.00
New Brussels, all woven in one piece floral designs, in Brown, Green and Reds, from $16.00 to $20.00
New Floor Oilcloths, 2 yds wide, per square yard, 25, 35, 50c
New Scotch Linoleums, 4 yds wide, at .... 50c yd
New Door Matts, all prices.

In our Curtain Dept. all we can say is we'll maintain our reputation for the best values and assortment of lace curtains in the trade, from 25c to .... $8.00 per pair

Art Muslins, Bobinettes, Spotted Muslins, Madras Muslins, Nets, Tapestry Curtains, Chenille Curtains, Curtain Poles, Roller Blinds, Table Covers, Couch Covers, Cretonnes, etc.

These and a host more of other pretty fixtures will transform a plain room into a "thing of beauty."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

When a dollar a bushel? This is the present, and as a result of the failure in transporting the grain crop from the far west to the east. There may not be a famine and there will be higher prices. That is the prediction.

The conservative press comments upon the large increase in the expenditure of the Dominion government. It could comment, and does not, upon the large increase in the revenue. Canada is growing fast and stagger ament is doing well if it does not own a silver mine of its own.

One of the most interesting items of marine news recorded in the life of the "Suevic", which was wrecked in a fog near the Lizard, a few weeks ago. It was found impossible to get the entire ship off the rocks, and so dynamite was used to break her in two. That done, two powerful tugs were secured, and all hands, the ship, with the help of the "Suevic's" own engines, succeeded in floating three-quarters of the hull upforcing it safely to Southampton. At Southampton a new foregirt is to be fitted on the vessel, and soon she will be in active service again. The salvage of the "Suevic" is classed as a record work under modern conditions, but the salvage of the "Ravenhill" on the St. Lawrence may be classed as a good second to it.

Stratford Beacon: "Col. Sam. Hughes, M.P., having a battle royal at with the Montreal Star, which he accuses of treachery to the party because Mr. Ormond, which is called by a gentleman, having seized his friend Fowler for trying to enter up his grandeur in connection with the Union Trust Company deals by throwing him in Parliament. The Star replies that it is its "own matter," adding, 'We should like to see Col. Sam Hughes put his hand on his head, look a Rosebery fair in the muzzle, contemplate a railway map of Canada, and make the somersault." If Sam Hughes is not the hired man of Mackenzie & Mann in parliament he has been grossly libelled for years by public rumor at Ottawa. It is up to Sam to take the Star man's insinuation by making the observation in the manner prescribed.

Received their Medals.

Evening Post, April 26.

Lindsay Curling Club has a great collection of silver cups, medals and other trophies, which are awarded every spring for one year to winners of the various rink competitions. Handsome the trophies may be, and brave the glittering show they make on mantle or buffet, they are not the most eagerly sought reward of curling skill—that honor rests with the J. D. Flavelle good medals awarded yearly for the members of the rink winning the greatest number of games against all other rinks in the Club. Last year the medals were captured by Dr. Hall's rink, skip G. A. Little's rink being runners-up. This year Skip Little and his men won out, the rink skipped by Mr. Flavelle, the donor of the medals, being runner-up. The medals are arrived from Ryrie's, Toronto, the gift of Mr. Flavelle, and were presented to winners—J. McGillivray, lead, A. Higinbotham, 2nd, A. B. Perry, 3rd, G. A. Little, skip. The medals are attached to black silk watch fobs, and are very handsome, the front being in the form of a gold curling stone surrounded from a good distance cross picked out in blue enamel. On the obverse side appears the name of the player and the words, 'Winning Rink, 1907.'

TRAPPERS REPORT A TIP-TOP SEASON

Catch of Muskrats in Lindsay Vicinity Totals About 5000.

Skins in Prime Condition Command High Prices—Names of Successful Trappers and the Total Catch Reported.

Evening Post of May 1st

With a total catch of about 5000 muskrats in the vicinity of Lindsay, the season of 1907 has been the most successful one in a decade. With rats plentiful, for the good condition, and prices—already nigh—still further raised by the competition of buyers, many trappers were induced to pack up their traps and camping outfit and betake themselves down on up the Scugog for a week or two trapping. With prices ranging from 30 to 50 1-2 cents per skin, their labors were generously rewarded.

As far as can yet be ascertained the most successful trappers were H. Hudson and son, who secured 450 skins. Messrs J. Dickson and F. Brown had their traps near Green Point, goose lake, and secured, in round number, 400 rats, for which they received 36 1-2 cents per pelt. The following is a list of many who have marketed their catches in Lindsay:

W. Hoag, East Creek 95
Geo Jackman, McLaren's Creek 230
Fred Hoag, McLaren's Creek 180
Harry Jackman, McLaren's Creek 45
Alf and Will Ford, Beaverton 96
Robt. Hunter, East Scugog 85
H. Rogers, lower Scugog 180
Adam McCue, lower Scugog 80
Stafford Halpin, lower Scugog 90
Robt. Jordan, upper Scugog 108

Indians—Mellugh, Taylor and Gue, Gores, below 600
Herron Bros, upper Scugog 170
John McMann, upper Scugog 90
Tom Jackett, upper Scugog 36
Cooper & Hutson upper Scugog 300
Merriam Bros, lower Scugog 125
Jackson and son, Fenelon Falls 180
Rogers, Little Britain 189
Whetung Brothers, upper Buckhorn 215
Chilvers, Scugog lake 180
Starr, Valentia 180
Geo Goens, Indian, upper Scugog 100
Hughes Bros hanging and sell 90
Hearn and sons, and others of Gores Landing 120 rats, which may be sold in Lindsay.

Mr. Ed. Armstrong, of Dundas & Flavelles, was the most successful buyer, securing around 3500 pelts. Last year he bought 2200. Messrs Simon Maybee, Tom Pecard, John Fleury, and others, also bought quantities.

Besides the large number of muskrats caught, a number of mink skins were added to the pile by some of the trappers. H. Bisset got one mink, Geo. Jackman and Jack O'Brien got two each, Wallace Brothers got one apiece. Jack O'Brien's single-handed catch of 300 rats, is a record to be envied.

TRAIN WRECK NEAR CAMBRAY.

Broken Truck on Freight Causes Delay—Auxiliary Despatched.

Evening Post of May 1st

A double-header freight from Midland, in charge of Conductor A. Sutton, came to grief this morning near Cambray at 6.30 a.m. A truck on one of the cars broke and the car left the track.

The auxiliary was despatched from Lindsay and soon had the matter right, and returned to Lindsay. The Cobourg freight, due here at 10.10, was delayed one hour and a half.

REFINERY FOR COBALT ORE

A Plant is Being Established at Sturgeon Falls of 300 Tons Capacity.

Rapid progress is reported by Mr. Hiram Cobalt, of the Sturgeon Falls, members of the North Ontario Reduction and Refining Co., which is erecting a refinery for the treatment of Cobalt and other ores at that place. The buildings, which are substantial structures, are just about completed, including the foundation for the factory, and contracts have been let for 20 to 25 carloads of the necessary machinery, which, when installed, will enable the refinery to treat 300 tons of ore every 24 hours. A siding is to be built to the refinery, the Canadian Northern Railway Co. has promised to deliver the refinery expects to be in shape to receive ore in June.

No difficulty is expected in treating Cobalt ore, and the claim is made that $25 ore can be handled profitably, and that there are large ore on the dumps at Cobalt, which run from $20 to $200 a ton. Cobalt, one of the advantages claimed for the refinery, is that the Canadian Northern lost to the mine-owners when shipping the ore to Sudbury, will be in a simple sequipment of one ton of ore from Cobalt to the refinery, and from the refinery at Clarkson's Wharf, which is the model for the Sturgeon Falls refinery (which is in turn by products of $161, of which $81 was silver, $80 cobalt, and $1.50 in copper, all of which would be lost on Sudbury. The Canadian Refinery is organizing keeping heavy profits, independently of the Ontario Government bounty on ores refined in the province, and is paying 12 cents per pound for 99 1-2 cents on copper, half a cent on arsenic. CANADA

(All rights reserved.)

A song for Canada, my lads, come sing with hearty glee.
Hearts of the busy beaver, home of the maple tree.
Of mighty lakes and mountains, of forests vast and grand,
And boundless fertile prairies, and richest mineral land.

(Chorus.)
Hip! hip! hurrah for Canada, land of the maple tree,
That spreads from the Atlantic Coast to the Pacific Sea.

Here dwell in peace and harmony, a vigorous hardy lot
'Bagpiper' John Bull and 'Patrick' the Wolfman and the Scot,
Yet one were bright as they could be.
A Canada Hercules was she.
But when her mother said: 'My dear,
Be good enough to come out here
And help me wash the dishes quickly.'
She said she thought she was too sickly.

All About Spring.

(John Kendrick Bangs)

The crook of the crocus is heard in the land.
The buds are beginning to bubble;
The robin is robbin' on every hand,
The sparrow is sparring for trouble.

I'm easy is sneezing and nosing around.
The worm from its warm bed is scorning;
The raise are all trilling with musical sound;
While forward they're merrily squirming.

ELLEN THE ATHLETE.

Fair Ellen was a golfing maid,
Her work for her was play and game,
She'd do the course three times a day,
Club in a scarlet coat so gay,
And when she got back she would take
She'd go serenely to a "chop."

Fair Ellen was a boasting maid,
She never needed any aid,
She'd hustle tiller, sail and sheet,
Her jibing was supremely neat,
And if twere calm she'd take the oars
And pull for miles along the shores.

She was an exercising maid,
Gymnastic feats of special grade,
She'd "get" a pretzel. The trapping
Hings,
Trapeze and bars and other things
Were all her evergreen delight,
She swung upon them every night.

Her muscles were as hard as steel,
She never missed a single meal,
Her eye were bright as they could be.
A Canada Hercules was she.
But when her mother said: 'My dear,
Be good enough to come out here
And help me wash the dishes quickly.'
She said she thought she was too sickly.

Cart-wheel Shades.

A good substitute for missing shade trees is made out of cheese. Plant a stout post, nine feet high, where you want the shade, setting the post in two feet of earth; then nail firmly to the top of it, at right angles, two seven-foot strips of twelve-inch stuff. The next thing to do is to get two old tires from an old or wagon wheels, have the blacksmith weld them into a ring, and fasten the ring tightly to the end of the cross-spieces. Set a three-year-old grapevine right against the post, and let it to rapin, growth, and the thing is done. When the vine gets up over the rim let the thing down all round it. Seeds may be set underneath.—Delineator.

Midland Won't Stay Dry.

In the town of Midland was waged one of the hottest local option fights of the recent campaign, and the by-law passed by a vote of more than 2 to one, has been better quashed. The vote stood 477 to 234, and the town Council was so eager to put the will of the people into the law that before the final reading of the by-law one week after the vote, introduced in evening, as the statute requires, a clear two weeks between the clerk's declaration of the result, and the final passing of the measure. On this ground the by-law has been quashed by Chief Justice Mulock, of Osgoode Hall, his Lordship holding that the citizens should be given an opportunity to apply for a recount of the votes before the result of the vote became operative. This is the intent of the provision requiring the two weeks to elapse. The town has to pay the costs.

NICOTINELESS TOBACCO

Sold in France as Result of Experiments on Rabbits.

French scientists are discussing the question of whether nicotine can be extracted from tobacco, leaving the latter all the characteristic flavor. The Government, which has a monopoly of the manufacture and sale of tobacco, put on the market last week a variety of Caporal, a common form of pipe and cigarette tobacco, which had been freed of nicotine.

This step was taken as a result of experiments on rabbits. An extension of ordinary Caporal tobacco was injected into the veins of a rabbit, which died five weeks later. A post mortem examination showed that the aorta was covered with large spots due to arteriosclerosis. Another rabbit was treated with a similar test with nicotineless Caporal. This rabbit lived two months and was then put to death. The aorta was found to be perfectly healthy.

From Norman to Norman.

(Montreal Herald)

Eight hundred and forty years ago William the Norman crossed the channel and with his Normans proceeded to give laws to England. His son, William Rufus, built the great hall at Westminster for the lawmakers of his and succeeding reigns. Two hundred and forty years ago there was a humbler Norman migration, this time across the ocean to Canada. The other day the two streams of Norman migration met again when Sir Wilfrid Laurier, whose forefathers came to Canada in 1660, was the principal speaker in the hall of William Rufus. A few yards away from where he spoke, in that hallowed place, the speech is the delight of every visitor. The ceiling and walls are decorated with the gradiron of St. Laurence, that same St. Laurence whose name was invoked by the ancestors of our cows and river from whose banks the ancestors of our Normans farmed back into the wilderness, and then overlapped, like the uplift, hills and valleys and mountains were occupied and conquered.

William the Norman played the role of conqueror, and held by the sword what the sword had won, the right to say how others should order their lives. The conquered Gaul had took long to the task, but the work back from John, and successfully fought for afterwards against Henry and John, the right to live as free men. On that the glory of the state has been based. On what when times had changed, the friendship and alliance of far-off countries were resained. Sir Wilfrid, in his speech, pleading the high quality of attrct regard for colonial autonomy in the hall of the Parliament at Westminster, was surely rounding out an epoch.

The performers in all deserved full credit for their exertions and their pants, and the audience felt at the close of the evening with a sense of having spent a couple of hours profitably and pleasantly. It is to be hoped other concerts of a like nature will be given by St. Paul's before the season closes.

Our High Moral Tone.

(Kingston Whig.)

General Booth, the venerable founder and leader of the Salvation Army, who has just traversed Canada before sailing from Seattle for his visit to Japan, was met at the Union Depot, Kingston by his chief of staff, Commander Nichol, that a higher tribute could not be paid to the Dominion than to say that in no other country on the face of the globe. General Booth said:

"Reviewing the Dominion of Canada, the General destroyed is as a country of great promise. Twenty hundred million people. Great, as the Dominion is, it is capable of a good leadership, become a model nation. The moral tone of Canada and crime in Canada is lower than that of other country on the face of Canada."

"It's chief source of prosperity is the natural resources of the country which only need an honest, industrious population to develop. Canada can be supplied by properly directed immigration with people who will develop themselves, as opposed to people who are looking them for money-making purposes."

"These words of praise for our country are more important because they were uttered by a man who was no more enthusiastic visitor, but who has proved himself to be a statesman of the very best type. General Booth, moreover, has showed his wisdom in coming to Canada, for the mission the objective point of his colossal colonization projects.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Catherine Broad, Lindsay

We are extremely sorry to record the death of Mrs. Catharine Hodgins, wife of Mr. James Broad, of 6 Angline-st., Lindsay. Mrs. Broad had been ailing since about the middle of last year, gradually weakening in the early parts of January. Her advanced age militated against her recovery, and she breathed out Sunday morning, April 28th, surrounded by the members of her family.

Mrs. Broad was one of those sweet quiet, retiient natures, whose chief virtues were centired in her home work. Respice her loss, she is survived by a large family, viz. Dr. J. J. Broad, Wellingford, Ont., Dr. Samuel Broad, Lindsay, Ont., Mrs. S. A. Dr. Wm. F. Broad, Lindsay; Dr. Chas. E. Broad, Lindsay, Ind., Dr. Jas. Dr. Robt. S. Broad, Barrie, Ont.; Thomas Broad, Lindsay; Mrs. Jas. Hodgins, Lindsay; S. Woodbridge, Sonya, Ont.; Mrs. R. Marsh, Brooklyn, Ont.; Mrs. Jas. Chantler, Lorne. The funeral took place from the family residence, Angline-st. on Monday, May 1st, and was conducted by Rev. Dr. Rutledge, assisted by Rev. Mr. Hunter, of Burwell, both of Petrieboro. The pall bearers were the sons-in-law, Messrs. Marsh, Chantler, Hodgins and Broad. The floral tributes were all of a most tender character, and showed the sincerest sympathy to the family in their sad bereavement.

Alfred E. Belcher, Associated With Early History of Trent Canal.

A man who was a credit not only to the profession of civil engineer but to humanity, died at Sydney, which for over forty years has been his home, passed away last Sunday night in the person of Mr. Alfred E. Belcher, C. E., who died at his home, Stewart-st., Peterboro, after a lengthy illness, following complications, which came as a result of contracting typhoid fever, while on a surveying party on the Crows Nest Pass Railway. The late Mr. Belcher was a civil engineer by profession, and during his lifetime was associated with a number of important public works, notably the Trent Canal. He was chief in charge of the section from Peterboro to Lakefield with Mr. Stark as his assistant. Quite early employed on the construction work until the completion of the Trent Canal, he was the Chief Engineer on the Welland Canal, Nelson Falls and Lorneside. Following his work on the Trent Canal he was associated with Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald in the construction of the Stonecut Canal subsequently. After completing his work for the canal, Mr. Belcher went east, with Mr. Hoskin, to San Francisco, where he remained some time.

After his return from California he was appointed to the Crows Nest Pass, where he was engaged in work connected with the building of that branch of the C. P. R. It was here that he contracted typhoid fever, and with seven of his staff, was laid up with the disease. He never fully recovered from the effects of that sickness, which was followed by pneumonia.

The late Mr. Belcher was in his earlier days an enthusiastic oarsman and practically introduced amateur rowing into Canada—in Peterboro, at any rate. He was prior to coming to Canada, stroke for the Cambridge University crew, in England, and after he came there he obtained a crew composed of Messrs. R. B. Rogers, the late Geo. Rogers, and Mr. Shaw, with himself as stroke. This crew won from Toronto and and Hamilton, at Barrie.

The deceased was a son of the late Samuel Belcher, C.E., of Cork, Ireland, and was a cousin of Messrs. Jas. Belcher, of Peterboro. He was the eldest of the family, and the only one who survive. Thomas, who was a member of the staff of Mr. R. B. Rogers, superintendent of the Trent Canal and had charge of the work yorkway at the time the present development was decided on. The other brother, William, died in Sydney. The deceased was married to Miss Bagot, of Peterboro, a niece of Mr. Meesom Boyd. She with a family of three survive, namely, Mrs. Ewingar.—The funeral took place on Tuesday to Little Lake cemetery.

Flag-flying and Patriotism.

Toronto Star: The discussion over the proposal to fly the flag on the Twelfth of July showeshat the flag-flying business is being overcome. In the paper proposed to fly the flag on the schools every day, and the next move will be to introduce the American custom of saluting the flag, converting a symbol into an object of worship.

Patriotism is to be taught in the schools, it should be by means that appeal to the intelligence, not merely to the senses. Let the children know the resources and opportunities of their country, and the duties that will fall to them as citizens, and be sincerely to fight for their country, if need be, and to be ready to die for their country, and then the lesson will be presented faithfully the daily duties of life, and showing justice and kindness to the weak and helpless, and hard work is patriotic and all hard work is treasonable. Patriotism is Christianity, and not into the minds and hearts of children, there good will be done than by unalloyed flag-flying. Patriotism is brought well root upon a rational and solid basis. It will not be a thing of occasions and symbols, but an inspiration for daily work and for the duties of citizenship. It will be woven into the fabric of life, and merely stuck on the outside, as an ornament.

WANT A CERTAIN WINNER?

EVENING POST WANT ADS.

"As Sure as Death and Taxes" Remarkable Success of a Pleasant Idea.

Evening Post of May 1st:

Scarcely a day passes without some interesting or amusing incident concerning the success of aim with which an Evening Post want ad goes home to the mark. Some of the quick boasting formed boastful weave we to publish all the proofs at hand; to excite envy in others.

A few days ago a south wind had lost a valuable pearl pin. The loser, Mr. Brother, William, called at the Post office, and offered the pin to anyone who brought a response—Mr. J. B. Mitchell, happening to be in the office, returning the proffered reward. The owner was over joyed, the brood having been a gift, and the compliments ship handed to over the phone were of the glowing variety.

Last Friday a poor girl lost $8 on Kent-st. between Wm. Baker's store and Bailey's. The facts were set forth in a small advt. in Saturday's issue. The paper was for sale on the street on Saturday morning, when later Mr. Baker called up on the phone and in delighted tones said that the lost money had been left with him by the finder, Mrs. Grills, of Hamilton Street, who saw the advt. in the paper and resolved to put from a moment's delaying the anxiety of the loser.

Try it yourself, reader. If you haven't lost or found anything, go over your stonnuvy goods and make inquiries of your neighbors. The articles fair sale—other citizens want just what you've got, but they not know where to seek the articles.

The Light That Failed.

When the newspapers of Buffalo, Moore, were compelled to suspend publication, the Evening Post experiences trouble last month the withdrawal of advertising opportunities all but killed business. Deprived of the aid of newspaper space in exploiting their wares, the local merchants resorted to handbills and circulars, the most liberal use of which failed to revive trade. It was a most impressive object lesson on the value of newspaper publicity. Advertising opportunities positively indispensable to any merchant who has ones eyes in affair trial.

WOMEN TO THE FRONT.

The woman teachers of New York have undertaken to insert their power. They have united (11,000 of them), in an attempt to raise their salaries. They have appealed to the Board of Education, the employing body, but to a few of the state, says the Kingston Whig. They have apparently convinced the senate that if they do the same work, in quality, and extent, as the men, they should be paid the same salaries, and the lowest stipend in New York is $720 per year.

This will make a difference in the tax rate for educational purposes, and raise from three to four millions on the dollar. It will add four million dollars to the annual expenditure, and increase the total amount for schools, their equipment and management, from twenty-six to thirty millions of dollars. The civic legislature are astonished, for they not see any way of checking the movement. The 'beauty delegation' as it is called, triumphed over senate sense without difficulty, and now it proposes to kick the bill through the assembly.

To the question, Why should the women be paid as much as the men? the answer is, Because they have borne burdened the same. They are either the wives or daughters of men whose abilities have forced their dependants to strike out and provide for themselves. Women everywhere, in nearly every walk of life, are doing the work of men, and doing it well. They do not all pay taxes, but that will be the next contingency.

If there is to be no difference between the men and women, as workers, there should not be any difference as ratepayers and there would not be any complaint from the women if they had the franchise, and could vote for whom they liked and send whom they liked to the council, the legislature and to parliament.

If women are forcing their way to the front it is because they are forced to do it by the inequality or indifference of men.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Kingston Whig: Mr. Amos, M.P., referred to an A. Y. M. C. A. young man, a clerk in a politics, who was mercifully scored by the Montreal Star because of his endorsement of Mr. Fielding's stand. The Star does not regard this as the proper way to purify public life.

Globe: A fine example of private enterprise of the co-operative sort is afforded by the release of the crew of vessels imprisoned at the Detour waiting for the ice to break up in the St. Marys River. The Lake Carriers' Association hired an icebreaker at four hundred dollars a day and it up from Detroit to call a channel to the South, and it succeeded. This happened days before the ice would have come out of the channel by natural process.

Will Canada ever connect Prince Edward Island by a tunnel with the mainland? The scheme is now being agitated again. In 1892 surveys and soundings were made, and engineers and contractors were announced that the work was feasible that there were no insurmountable engineering difficulties in the way. The tunnel proposed by the survey of 1892 would be seven and a half miles long, and would reach a depth of 150 feet below the water level. The official estimate of cost was about $15,000,000. Other estimates range from $20,000,000 to $100,000,000. The money to keep the Island Province in good humor.

Uncle Sam is advertising for interpreters to be kept handy to deal with his new population. Just how cosmopolitan this is may be gathered from the list of requirements. The interpreters are wanted familiar with Chinese language, Arabic, Armenian, Arabic, Bohemian, Bulgarian, Chinese, Croatian, Dalmatian, Danish, Dutch, Finnish, Flamish, German, French, Greek, Hebrew, Hungarian, Italian, Japanese, Lithuanian, Japanese, Lithuanian, Montenegrin, Magyar, Norwegian, Persian, Polish, Portuguese, Roumanian, Russian, Ruthenian, Servian, Slovak, Slovenian (Wendish), Slovenish (Kranish), Spanish, Swedish, Syrian (Arabic), Turkish, Yiddish.

Montreal Witness: The cases against Mr. Sifton and against Mr. Richardson for corruption in Brandon have both been dismissed without costs, neither being prosecuted. Prosecution looks like one of those melancholy annual events some of guilt, called saw-off, which are the most patent disgrace of our Canadian politics. Neither party can afford to expose the other, the people are asked to let bygones be bygones, and the two are both honest, and the people are so accustomed to it that they expect it all as a matter of course. Surely it is time we had some organization, independent of party, to see that corruption was also prosecuted to a finish. Till that is done honest men will lay their very honesty on the altar of party, and political life is a farce.

Leslie's Weekly does not join in general chorus in the United States of derision and denunciation of the Canadian Lord Dundonald. It calls it "a stringent but salutary law", and adds that

It would be well if as exemplary provisions for the protection of the life of our soldiers were made in our own civil throughout our own land. They would effectually eliminate the cruelty or evils the previous abomination of Hanky Sunday newspapers. At the Congress of the United States should respect the sanctity of the Sabbath. For the shameful and and shocking spectacle which the United States offered on Sunday, May 1st, March, and there is no excuse, the work could not be done, and it seems that there should not have been the seeming show of a necessity for Sunday work, much less for a crisis in the name of a season.

Imagine a session of the Canadian Senate held on a Sunday to transact ordinary business! Familiarity breeds contempt, and the common practice of dishonoring the Lord's Day over there makes it easy for politicians and others to run the Sunday into a day for secular labor.

TOGETHER FOR FIFTY YEARS

MR. AND MRS. THOS DANIELS CELEBRATED GOLDEN WEDDING.

Descendants to the Fourth Generation Present—Received Valuable Presents.

Monday, April 29th, was a memorable day in the life of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Daniels, of Deseronto. Then they celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of the marriage of their lives and surrounded with their wives and families gathered at the old homestead to join in celebrating the auspicious date, and a very pleasant time was spent. Forty-seven descendants, among them three children of the four generation were present.

The five sons and five daughters of the family were Dafoe—Mrs. Geo London, Cambray; Mrs. J. M. Cummings, Toronto; Mrs. W. Hull, Canton; Mrs. Arthur Cudwood, and Miss Daniels, Deseronto. The boys—Alexander, on the homestead; Thomas, of Woodville; James, of Lindsay; and Ben and Charlie, of Toronto.

Among the many beautiful and valuable gifts presented to Mr. and Mrs. Daniels was a purse of gold, a magnificent Morris rocker and a gold-mounted gold cane, of Mr. Daniels. The following address was also presented to them:

Dear Father and Mother. — We, your ten children, assembled here on this occasion, surrounded by our husbands, wives and children and your friends and kinsmen, desire to express with this family. We appreciate the privilege of being on this memorable occasion. We cannot help but feel that the divine hand of providence has, for half a century, dealt kindly with this family. We appreciate the fact that it is not a small petcelisse indeed of the married couples who live in wedlock for fifty years.

While we realize also that Providence has been kind in the courtesy of time that you have been allowed to remain united on this earth, we must fully realize and appreciate the fact that you have lived so man and wife together happily together—indeed, so much so, that it is doubtful if the couple in the County of Victoria have spent fifty happier years together.

We can only say, in conclusion, that we hope Providence will spare you for many happy years among us.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniels, though born in the old country, have lived the majority of their years in Canada. They have resided about Port Carrons for 40 years, during which time they have proved themselves to be true friends and kind neighbors, the people are universally respected in the district. Mr. Daniels has exceeded the allotted span of life by three score years, and his wife is two years younger.

Two photographs were taken during the day—one of the entire group of Mr. and Mrs. Daniels' posterity forty-seven children, grand-children and great grandchildren, and one of the family of five girls and five boys, with their parents.

TORTURING RHEUMATISM

Suffered For Five Years—Cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Agonizing pains, sometimes in one joint, sometimes in another, often in other, often in the back or joints—that's rheumatism. Do not delay in taking treatment. Delay only makes the disease worse — increases the torture. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are the remedy. They cured Mr. Horace Plante, of Sorel, Que., of a most aggravated case of rheumatism, and he tells how in this way: "I was laid up with rheumatism. I walked on my heels because affected for upwards of five years I suffered from rheumatism in my feet, and I confined to bed, hardly able to move. I was recommended to help me, I despaired of ever being well again. By good chance Dr. Williams' Pink Pills came to my notice, my attention and I decided to try them. I got six boxes and before they were gone I felt a great improvement. I continued the treatment for two months and I gradually came back, till now I do not feel the rheumatism I was totally cured. It was a surprise to my friends to see me on the street again well and strong after 5 years of torture. They wanted to know what I had taken to make me so. I told them Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, for I took no other medicine. Surely it is time we had some organization, independent of party, to see that corruption was also prosecuted to a finish. Till that is done honest men will lay their very honesty on the altar of party, and political life is a farce.

Leslie's Weekly does not join in general chorus in the United States of derision and denunciation of the Canadian Lord Dundonald. It calls it "a stringent but salutary law", and adds that

It would be well if as exemplary provisions for the protection of the life of our soldiers were made in our own civil throughout our own land. They would effectually eliminate the cruelty or evils the previous abomination of Hanky Sunday newspapers. At the Congress of the United States should respect the sanctity of the Sabbath. For the shameful and and shocking spectacle which the United States offered on Sunday, May 1st, March, and there is no excuse, the work could not be done, and it seems that there should not have been the seeming show of a necessity for Sunday work, much less for a crisis in the name of a season.

Imagine a session of the Canadian Senate held on a Sunday to transact ordinary business! Familiarity breeds contempt, and the common practice of dishonoring the Lord's Day over there makes it easy for politicians and others to run the Sunday into a day for secular labor.

COMMUNICATIONS.

LIQUOR AND ECONOMIC CONDITIONS.

(To the Editor of The Post.)

Sir,—In regard to the question of the "Duties of the Clergy", raised by one who signs himself, "One Who Has Suffered," his proposed panacea is no cure at all; it is on a par with palliation in medication, and has had for many generations. No stronger evidence is needed of the failure of his remedy than the fate of all the reform movements, political, moral and religious, that have sprung up from time to time, of the non success of which he himself furnishes ample proof when he depicts the state or condition of society as it is at present. There is not such progress as desired—the effect, but it is a retrograde, movement—under present conditions and will further retrograde, further they can be taken care of, and at the end of time the supply will be larger, not than at the start.

There is no question as to what he says about misery and suffering—he with the help of all the friends below could not invent a more unjust, unfair, selfish, greedy, grasping, swindling and hideous economic condition than the one under which the people in all so-called civilized countries exist today. He is well just think for a moment he will realize that they are the natural outcome of our present economic failures, and under our present competitive profit system, if there was not one glass of liquor sold, there would still be hosts of women and children starving, and men driven to desperate shocks and tenements. Under present economic conditions, where we you find wealth and wealthy individuals, whatever their profession or belief, christian or pagan, Jew or Gentile, there is also found the fined poverty, and all that goes with it, for the rich as a class, do not agree, will not work, and if all were rich there would be no one to produce necessities, and we would die a miserable death for want of sustenance. We would then have the blessed law enforced—"He will not work (produce) neither shall he eat." Mr. Fred Irwin says that I compared liquor selling with the Mosaic law of murder. I did nothing of the kind, I said: they were all in business with the same object in view, viz., profit; the baker, clothier and grocer supplied the necessities to all my mind first, hence I used them as illustrations, and I ought to have added the liquor and against general business and the liquor seller and many fellows who are all in the same boat as myself, even though they may not realize it.

Our friends says that the baker, clothier and grocer are innocent—they? What about the shoddy goods and adulterated food, and the starving, ragged, and half-starved children of children and shortens the lives of multitudes of adults, make sick and long, and wind upon the vexed nerves, gamblers and profiteers who either or both, are in and outside of the penitentiaries and state prisons? Do not we also says that the tempter passes the way for a thousand years? Do not the bakers, teachers' feet, for no matter what the teachers, professions are to pass as likely, under the present conditions, to pave (unwittingly), the way for a thousand years? Let us talk not one. For instance, the ten-ant thousand "Wonderful Stories" as Harry K. Thaws, who have all passed through the hands of the teachers are fairly well educated. He says, "Gentlemen, I am accurate in the everyman"; it is not necessary for me to interview the Magistrate; I know what I am talking about, I was there, and I also know the cause, and that the cause is not the fault of tonz as greatest economic conditions which I have mentioned, as dawn on the human mind that there is no sure in the future of the rest of the people putting the other part in jail. I have interviewed the people and give in part what one of them says: "We cannot but recognize for ourselves the unfavorable conditions, with all its boasted advance we live in, the struggle for life, put a premium upon selfishness, and discourage a generous and just, and directly incites men to cheating. The world is so constructed we have got to go to the wall; little by little we are driven, the man who is not strong enough to fight his way and keep his footing in the struggle, is trampled under foot, and the strong making war upon each other — man against man, nation against nation, class against class. Nations talk of freedom, but no man is really free, and the free majority of us are slaves to some corporation, or capital, the conditions of things which renders the respect sort of life a continuous anxiety not health or comfortable, and we are driven to prove unequal to the demands made upon us." A man may make his acquaintances will pity him for five minutes, but he is left to fight for himself. There is no help for it—they cannot do anything for him, for their own living to get; they are like soldiers in the heat of the battle, they must succeed or go down over a fallen comrade or they may be trampled underfoot themselves.

There is no blinking the fact that the standard of the commercial world is not the standard of the world, and it is not the same, and to that end we MUST do something to remedy, which means selfishness the ruling complex man to act, which his lower nature is not, and it is not, or better, in its place—we must establish a social order wherein a man can be free to be his best and to give his best for the good of humanity without crushing or destroying anyone else.

Yours truly, NEMO.

Ten Days Later Than Last Year—Lots of Business at Sturgeon Point.

Numbers of yachts were down to the Point yesterday, and report the weather to be more fine. A couple of launches left for the Lake on Saturday afternoon, a few hours after the owners heard the large field of ice breaking out of the north end of the mouth of the river had broken up. Practically part of the lake has been free for nearly a week, although it has been trying to make lindsay from Bobcaygeon, and from Fenelon Falls to Saturday the way had been blocked by the large field of ice.

Great piles of snow-white, glistening ice were seen at different spots along the shore, and hundreds of pretty white gulls still rested about the lake before going further north. Ducks also are abundant, many of them being quite tame.

No damage appears to have been done to the boats, although it was piled high on several wharves and piers and along the bank.

THE Crimson Blind

By FRED M. WHITE

Author of "Tregarthen's Wife," "The Robe of Lucifer," Etc.

Copyright, 1905, by R. F. Fenno & Coy.

"That is what is consuming me at present," Mr. Merrill said.

"Well, we are going to see the man who has it," Chris explained coolly. "I have his address in Moreton Wells at the present moment, and I for one rest he is called the Rev. James Merrill. Because you can be as sure as a reverend than you are."

"And if the gentleman is shy or refuses to see us?"

"Then he will be arrested on a charge of theft."

"My dear young lady, before you can get a warrant for that kind of thing you have to prove the theft, you have to swear an information to the effect that you believe the property is in the possession of the thief, and that you have reason to believe that the property is stolen."

"There is nothing easier. I am prepared to swear that cheerfully."

"But you actually know that the property is in the possession of the thief?"

"Certainly I do. I saw him put it in his pocket."

Bell looked at the speaker with blank surprise. If such was the fact, then Chris's present statement was actually opposed to all that she had said before. There was a specific fault, and a little gleam of mischief in her lovely eyes.

"Do you say that man steal the Rembrandt?" Bell gasped.

"Certainly not. But I did see him put the diamond star sun put in his pocket. I should think I can swear an information on that."

"I see that you have something interesting to tell me," Bell said.

"Oh, indeed, I have. We will hark back over the past before last, when Reginald Henson made his personal attempt to obtain the Rembrandt and then played the trick upon you that was so very near to being a brilliant success."

"It would have been but for you," Bell murmured.

"Well, really, I am inclined to think so. And perhaps Lord Littimer would have given you in custody on a second charge of theft. If he had done so it would have spoiled Reginald with you to marry your heiress. But I am wandering from the point. Henson failed. But he was going to try again, I related all this carefully yesterday and managed to see his letters and telegrams. Then I found that he had telegraphed to James Merrill, whose address in Moreton Wells I carefully noted down. It did not require much intellect to grasp the fact that this Merrill was to be the accomplice in the new effort to steal the Crimson Blind. I came over and saw his chief, with whom he had a long conversation in the grounds. I also forced myself on Mr. Merrill's notice.

"He was introduced to me as a brand plucked from the burning, a converted 'thief' who had taken orders of sacred kind. He is a sorry-looking scoundrel, and I took particular pains to feel, especially the horrible smashed thumb."

"The whole? Bell exclaimed, the thumb like a snake's head with a little pink nail on it?"

"The same man. So you happen to have met him?"

"We met on our way here." Bell said drily. "The rascal sent the dog-cart away from the station so that I should have to walk home, and he attacked me in the road. But I had expected something of the kind, and I was ready for him. And he was the man with the thumb. I should have told you all this before, but I had forgotten it in the excitement of your diplomacy. When the attack was defeated the conversation took the direction of the cliffs. Of course, he was off to Henson at once to report the failure of the scheme and to go on with the plot for getting at the other picture. If he had stolen my Rembrandt for him he would have remained. I couldn't have turned out with a clear-cut story of having starved with the picture and being robbed of it by a local ruffian in the road."

"Very, very clever."

"Well, I marked that thumb carefully. I have already told you that the third pane from the top to the house when he came up the cliff. I was leaning over the terrace when I saw him emerge into a band of light caused by the big arc in the castle tower. I forgot that I was in deep shadow and that he could not possibly see me. I perked my head back suddenly, and my diamond star fell out and dropped almost at the feet of the intruder. Then he saw it, chuckled over it—placed it in his pocket. I was going to call out, but I didn't. I had a sudden idea, Dr. Bell—I had an idea that almost amounted to an inspiration."

Chris paused for a moment and her eyes sparkled. She was watching Bell with the deepest interest and admiration.

"I let the man keep it." Chris went on, more slowly, "with an eye to the future. The man had stolen the thing and I was in a position to prove it. He would be pretty sure to pawn the star—he probably has done so by this time, and I meant to have him in our power. We have only to discover where the diamonds have been 'planted'—is that the correct expression?—to gain sweet an information, and the police will subsequently search the fellow's lodgings. When the search has made the missing Rembrandt will be found there. Mr. Merrill would hardly dare to pawn that."

"Even if he knew its real value, which I doubt," Bell said, thoughtfully. "Henson would not tell his tool too much. Let me congratulate you upon your idea, dear Chris. That diamond star of yours is a powerful factor in our hands, and you always have the consciousness of knowing that you can get it back again. Now, what we go in going to do next?"

"Going to call upon Mr. Merrill, of course," Chris said, promptly. "You forget that I have to address I am deeply interested-in the welfare of the young ladies who are under my care enthusiast. I've looked up the names of one or two people in the directory while I go in for that kind of thing, and I'm going to get up a bazaar at Littimer Castle for the benefit of the predatory classes who have turned over a new leaf. I'm very much anxious for Mr. Merrill to give us an address. Don't you think that will do?"

"I should think it would do very well indeed," Bell said.

The quaint and somewhat exclusive town of Moreton Wells boasted of a few curios and the street where the Rev. James Merrill resided located at length. It was a modest two-storied tenement, and the occupier of the premises was a man of middle age, very gaily in, followed by Bell, before the occupant had time to shut the cozy pipe he was smoking and button the unaccustomed stiff white collar round his throat. Merrill whipped a tumbler under the table with amazing celerity, but no cunning of his could remove the smell of gin that hung pungently in the musty atmosphere.

Merrill dodged his head back definitely as if half expecting a blow, his eyes were strained a little anxiously over Bell's shoulder as if fearful of a shadow. Bell had seen the type before —Merrill was unconsciously looking for the police.

"I am so glad to find you at home," Chris said, sweetly.

Merrill muttered something that hardly sounded complimentary. It was quite evident that he was far from returning the compliment. He had recognized Bell, and was wondering fearfully if the latter was aware of his identity. Bell's face betrayed nothing. All the same he was following Merrill's lamsey eye till it rested on a very dirty paper on the mantelshelf. That roll of paper was Chris's missing Rembrandt, and he knew it.

"Will you be seated in a chair?" Chris asked, in the sweetest possible manner.

Merrill sullkily emptied a chair of a pile of cheap sporting papers, and demanded some too politely that Chris seize the lady had with him. Chris proceeded to explain her considerable length. As Merrill listened his eyes grew gradual and wonderfully expansive over his face. He had done a great deal of that kind of thing, he admitted. Since Henson had taken him in the police had not been anything like so troublesome, and his prospect was fruitful of large predatory gains. The mention of Merrill kept to himself the whole the prospect appealed to his imagination. Henson would like it, but, then, Henson was not in a position to say no to anything.

"I thought perhaps if you came over with us and dined at the castle," Chris suggested. She spoke slowly and thoughtfully, with her eyes on the ground. "Say tonight. Will you?"

Merrill grinned extensively once more. The idea of dining at the castle appealed to his own peculiar sense of humour. He was not like to see seeing that Bell failed to recognize him. To dine at the castle, to note the plate, and get a particular intimate knowledge of the place from personal observation! It was a delicious morsel at the thought.

"They ought to be more careful yonder," he suggested. "There's plate and pictures and—and—"

"Nothing has ever been stolen from Littimer Castle," Bell said, crisply. He rest the law in Merrill's eyes as he spoke of pictures. "Nothing whatever."

"What, not lately?" Merrill asked. "Didn't I hear tell of a—"

He paused, conscious of saying too much. Bell shook his head again. An expression of disappointment came on Mr. Merrill's engaging countenance. At the present moment an art treasure of price would be a little embarrassing. There was a party from the castle utterly unknown to the police, and Merrill glanced at Bell and smiled.

"I know what you mean," she said, "especially the prints That Rembrandt, the Crimson Blind, which I suppose you found a fresh light in it this morning and called Lord Littimer's attention to it before we saw it. I should lock that up if it were mine."

Merrill's eyes fairly bulged as he listened. Had he not half-suspected some deep game he would have been vastly amused. But then he had got the very picture these people were speaking about close to hand at the very moment.

"Tell you what," he said, suddenly. "I ain't used to swell society ways, but I'm always ready to sacrifice myself to the poor fellows who ain't found the straight path like me and I'll tell you up your bazaar, I'll do what I can to help."

"Then you will dine with us tonight?" Chris asked, eagerly. "Don't say no. I may not come over for quite the hours at Lady Roslingham's, and he was so anxious to see you. Will you in an hour's time with the waggonette. Then we can settle half our business."

Merrill was graciously pleased to be gracious. Bell was watching Chris puzzled and absolutely consumed with an overpowering curiosity. Chris also to him to be a sheer waste of prudence to be so confidential after dark. And the plate at Littimer Castle was superb!

Meanwhile Chris and Bell walked down the street together. "He was puzzled at my mentioning the Crimson Blind." "Seeing that he has our picture——"

"No doubt about it. The picture was rolled up and stood on the mantelpiece. I followed Merrill's gaze, knowing perfectly well that it would rest presently on the picture. If it was in the room. At the same time, our interesting friend, in chuckling over the way he has deceived us, could forget the yellow pawnticket lying on the table."

"Dr. Bell, do you mean to say that——"

"That I knew where your diamond star was dropped. Indeed I do. Merrill had probably just turned out his pockets as we entered. The pawnticket was on the table and related to a diamond argrette pawned by one James Merrill—mark the simple cunning of the man—with Messrs. Rutter and Co., 117, High Street. That in itself is an exceedingly valuable discovery, and we owe our selves to keep to ourselves for the present. At the same time I should very much like to see that what Rutter and Co. are like. Let me go down to the shop and make some slight inquiries."

Rutter and Co. proved to be a very high-class jewelry shop, where the fact that there was a pawnbroking branch of the business was quite quite worthy of Bond Street, the stock was brilliant and very valuable, the assistants quite above provincial class. As Bell was turned over some diamond rings Chris was examining a case of silver and gold cigarette-cases and the like. Bell was very much pleased with Chris and asked the price. At the mention of fifty guineas he produced the trifle with a little moue of surprise.

"I look at it I had been used," she said.

"It is not absolutely new, madam," the assistant admitted, "therefore the price is low. But the gentleman who sold it to us proved that he had only had it for a few days. The doctor had ordered him not to smoke in future, and so——"

Chris turned away to something else. Bell completed his purchase, and together they left the shop and stood outside Chris gripped her companion's arm excitedly.

"Another great discovery," she said. "Are you sure we looking at that cigarette—a gentleman's cigarette with diamonds? You recollect that Ruth Cates purchased a cigarette case for Chris—that foolishness we thought of in connection with the Crimson Blind. The case had a little arrow shaped scratch with the initials of the donor scratched on the lady's diamond. Bell told me all this the night before last! Longdene Grange, Dr. Bell, I am absolutely certain that I have had in my hand just such a cigarette case bought by Ruth from Lockhart's in Brighton!"

CHAPTER XXXVI.

Bell was considerably impressed with the importance of the discovery, though at the same time he was not disposed to regard it in the light of a coincidence.

"It's a useful discovery in its way," he said, "but it is not remarkable when you come to think of it. Some-body had given the cigarette case Stead changed that cigar-case. How the exchange affected Stead I know as well as I do. But the cigar-case purchased by Ruth Gates must be somewhere, and I am very much inclined to think Reginald Henson as anywhere else. Remember that he is the author of the whole business. That change was made after he had been in Brighton only at his instigation. Once the change was made he would be anxious to get the spare cigar-case. His ally probably came here to see Henson; the latter sent a letter by the hand of the ally knowing that the fellow would not dare to take it himself. Now, Henson is in Brighton. I am merely speculating, of course, but the circumstances are quite sure of your facts."

"Absolutely," Chris cried, eagerly. "Two long, irregular scratches leading to an arrow-headed shape to the big diamond in the middle, looked just like all about that the very last time they appeared in the waggonette."

"How came Ruth Gates to remembrance the fact?"

"Well, she did it herself. She was ruining her bodily, bodily spare cash at the last moment, and the scratches were made accidentally with the stones in each her fingers."

Bell was fain to admit that the discovery was a remarkable one. "We'll leave it for the present," he said. "In the meantime, I think that as much as article is likely to remain in stock for some time. I'll call upon you tomorrow on the pretence of getting further goods and obtain all the information. Now, I suppose that the lady who sold the case and what he was like. There is a chance for a little lunch before we take up our reversed friend. Where shall we go?"

Chris would like to see the Lion. There was a very excellent lunch there with panelled walls and a cellar by Pugin, and an Ingle-nook filled with rare Dutch tiles. They had the beautiful old place to themselves, so that her voice rang freely. Chris crumbled her bread and sipped her sherry in the easy delightful manner.

"A great idea is forming in my mind," she said.

"What, another one?" Bell smiled. "It is the fault of the place or what? Really, there is a brilliant air about you that is striking."

"Do I look proud. She was full of the joy of life to-day.

"It is the freedom," she said. "If you only knew what it is to feel free after the dull, aching, monotonous existence the last few years. To be constantly compelled to be bright in the grasp of a pitiless scoundrel. At first I rebelled against it passionately, with a longing to do some something that would give way to despair. And now the struggle is off my shoulders, and I feel free to act. Fancy the reward of finding Reginald Henson out!"

"Reginald Henson is the blight upon your joyous life, I suppose."

"Ah, I cannot tell you. It is a secret that we never discuss even among ourselves. But he has the power over us, he has blighted all our lives. But if I can find out the secret the thing the power would be broken. That is what I mean by a great idea I am working on. It is in connection with my endeavor that the new idea came to me."

"Will you let me know some general idea of it?" Bell asked.

"I will. I will make Merritt my friend. I want him to imagine that I am a simple, and a very ignorant one, an adventurer. I want to let him see that I could and have been tempted.

"So you can by telling the police of the loss of your star."

"Merrill would be arrested and sent to gaol where I couldn't make my peace with him. The thing is too vague in my mind at present. I have to think it out. Let me tell you a story; as David Steel would work it out, for instance. All in—

Chris clapped her hands rapturously, and a little cry of delight escaped her lips.

"The very thing," she exclaimed. "If I could lay all the facts before Mr. Steel and get him to plan out all the details! His brain is marvellous and I see a way at once. But he is far away and there is no time to be lost. Is there no way of getting at him?"

Chris appealed almost imploringly to her companion. She made a pretty picture with the old oak engravings behind her. Bell smiled as he helped himself to asparagus.

"Why not adopt the same method by which you originally introduced your self to the distinguished novelist?" he asked. "Why not use Littimer's telephone?"

Bell pushed her plate away impetuously.

"I am too excited to eat any more," she said. "I am filled with fresh ideas. Of course, I could use the telephone to speak to Mr. Steel, and to Reid as well. If the scheme works out as I anticipate, I will have to be bold a large exercise with Reid; a dangerous thing so far as the Reginald Henson is concerned."

"I'll keep Henson out of the way. The best thing is to let him everybody has gone to bed (to-night and call up then. You will be certain to get him after eleven, and there will be a chance of your being cut off at that hour. Reid will be in attendance of somebody else wanting the line. The telephone is in the corridor, of course."

Chris nodded radiantly.

"Practice blessed intelligence," she said "I can get in all I want without committing myself to paper or moving from the spot where my presence is urgently needed. We will give Mr. Merrill a chance of forgiving Reginald, this time I shall get him into my power."

The luncheon was finished at length, and an hurried cab took the pair to find his friends were waiting for him at the Lion. Chris was disappointed at not entering the big Norman porch Henson came down the street driving a dog-cart, at the sight of which she cried

"Our man is going to have his luncheon at the Lion, I suppose," she chuckled. "He has come to interview Merritt. Perhaps we shall see him at the table at dinner-time."

Bell looked at her in awkwardly, obviously suppressing a desire to touch his forelock. There was a sheepish grin on his suppressed features, and the eyes he had been recently shaved and his hair was cut, showed signs of improvements, and despite his clerical dress he looked a different kind of man to meet in a dark lane after sunset.

Chris, however, showed nothing of him in her greeting. Henson, the former Chris was reached she had succeeded in putting Merritt quite at his ease. He had taken the place of the expiolts, he boasted of his cunning. He was not a fool, and Chris had pulled himself up and plously referred to the fact that he was a Christian. Bell was studying him carefully. He read the story of the Crimson Blind book. When the waggonette finally pulled up before the castle Littimer strolled up and Chris introduced Merritt quietly.

"Glad to see the gentleman you were going to bring to dinner" he said, drily. "I thought you had left the company of our dear Reginald. I suppose—"

Chris shot Littimer an imploring glance. Merritt grinned in friendly fashion. Bell was thinking of the good the strange guest to the library before dinner. Chris and Bell had left the hall. The former polished his eye-glass and looked at the ceiling.

"My dear young lad?" he said smoothly, "originality is a passion with me, sometimes I fear it is a passion magnet; but as yet I have refrained from asking Reid to dine with me at the oldest inn. Your friend has 'convict' written all over his face."

"He has been in gaol, of course," Chris admitted, with a sigh.

"Then let me prophesy, and declare that he will be in gaol again. Why bring him here?"

"Because it is absolutely necessary," Chris said, boldly, "and I ask you to help me—help us, Lord Littimer. I am not altogether the fool you think. I is a scoundrel in your house compared with the scoundrel who is the guardian of my child. That scoundrel has blighted your life and lives of your family; he has blighted my life and the lives of my dear ones. I am not at liberty to say more, and I am here to-day to appeal to you to help us to get lost happiness of us all. I cannot say more than that, Lord Littimer, I have my own way in this matter."

"Oh!" Littimer said, darkly, "so you are masquerading here?"

"I am. I admit it. Turn me out if you refuse to be to a party in the new scheme. You may think badly of me now, but I shall be able to explain all to you later on. But I swear to you that I am acting for the good of your family and lives, and in your interest as much as my own."

"Then you are not entitled even to the name you bear."

"No, I admit it freely. Consider, I need not have told you anything. Thing are not quite what they seem to be. Let me try and make them better."

Chris's voice quivered, there were tears in her eyes, and Littimer felt a pulse Littimer laid his hands upon her shoulders and looked long and searchingly into her face.

"Very well," he said, with a gentle sigh. "I will trust you. I feel sure, in fact, I have felt that I could trust you from the first. Go on, try, try your schemes, because if they are successful they will benefit us all. I am in a position to bring a cordial reception to Reginald, and I will try to puzzle the neighbors, and drive them mad with speculation. Go, I trust you."

"And you'll back me up in all I say and do?" Chris asked.

"Certainly I will. On the whole, I fancy I am going to have a pleasant evening. I fancy that Reginald will be pleased to see his friend at dinner. I am sure that I shall be missing. I shall hold you responsible."

"Chris smiled. She felt very well pleased with the turn of events. Bell had gained and succeeded where timid policy might have failed. The dismal failure. And Littimer had refrained from asking any embarrassing questions. From the window she could see Bell and Merritt walk down and down the terrace, the latter talking volubly and waving his arms about as a dog might nuzzle at a bone. Chris saw Littimer join the other two presently and did it with a certain satisfaction. His laugh came to the girl's ear in the hall, and she felt convinced that the eccentric nobleman was enjoying the situation immensely. The dinner had never been fettered by conventional restraint.

The dog-cart came up presently and Henson got out. He had an anxious, worried look; there was an ugly frown between his brows. He contrived to be polite as Chris emerged. He wanted to know where Littimer was.

"On the terrace, I fancy," Chris said, demurely. "I guess he is having a long talk with that person friend of yours—the brand plucked from the burning, you know."

"Merritt," Henson said, hoarsely. "Do you mean to say that Merritt is here? And I've been looking "for—I mean, I have been into Moreton Wells. Why did he come?"

Chris opened her eyes in innocent surprise.

"Why," she said, "I fetched him. I'm deeply interested in brands of that kind."

CHAPTER XXXVII.

Henson forced a smile to his face and a hand from his side as he approached Merritt and the rest. It was not after the two had met immediately since that the mask was dropped.

"I have been to Moreton Wells," Henson said, between his teeth. "How dare you come here? You've done your work to do, I suppose, and the sooner you go back to your kennel in London the better. Do you understand? That you meant any harm I'd crush you altogether."

"I didn't come on my own," Merritt whined. "So know I am to be. That young lady came and fetched me—fetched me as you see, she is. And there's to be high jinks here—a banquet for the benefit of poor criminals as can't get work to do. Fancy! I wonder what he's ship said. And I'm goin' to make a speech, like as I used to gill the chaplains. Lor', it's funny, ain't it?"

Henson was in no mood for humour of the situation. He was uneasy and suspicious. Moreover, he was puzzled by this American girl, and he hated to be puzzled. She had social aspirations, of course, and cared nothing for divorced or reformed criminals, and this silly bazaar was only designed so that the ambitious girl could find her way into the social circle. Henson was not a husband, and nothing more would be required to make the girl's position a vague notion that all American girls are fortune-hunters for English husbands of the titled class.

"Littimer must be mad," he muttered. "Now I understand why I could not understand anything. Which reminds me that I have the letter that I had up to you. Why didn't you do as I told you to-day?"

"Did," said Merritt, curtly. "Got the picture and took it to London."

"You lie! The picture is in the corridor at the present time."

"Have you yourself? Go and the picture on mantelshelf in my sitting-room and bring it to me. It is in a roll of paper and tied with a piece of cotton. It was there when I left the house, and I left about casualties as being less cautious and careful to excite suspicion. But it is at the present moment, and I'll take my hands to it."

Henson turned pale. He had been inside that said sitting-room not two minutes ago, and he had been careful to notice a roll of paper on the mantelshelf. He had seen the cotton round it, tug the truth, and equally obviously tied with Rembrandt's signature on the corridor at the present moment. Henson had solved and evolved many ingenious puzzles in his time, but this was the utterly beyond him.

"Go and fetch it, Dr. Bell's, perhaps," Merritt suggested.

Bell knew nothing. He is absolutely friendly to me. He could not disclose the secret of the Crimson Blind to a word I was never so utterly at sea before in all my life. And as for Littimer, he is as much a puzzle to me as Merritt more in my favor than the old one. But I know one thing. I get to the bottom of this business if it costs me a fortune."

Henson was thoroughly puzzled. He turned the thing over in his mind while he was dressing for dinner, and failed. The Rembrandt had been stolen, and yet there was the Rembrandt! Is there ever such a thing as more amazing and puzzling? And nobody else seemed to know that most remarkable fact, and son was more than puzzled; deep down in his heart he was frightened.

"I must keep my eyes open," he said, "I must watch Reginald. Do you suppose girls see nothing when she called to-day?"

"Not a bit of it," said Merritt, confidently. "She came to see me; she had her eyes on my humble and humble servant. Where did she get my address? Why, she got it from Littimer—me to the lady yourself, and didn't I know that I was going to dine with her for a time? I'm goin' to live in clover for a bit, my pippin. Cigars and champagne, wine and liqueurs. Lor', I'm in clover!"

"I wish you were at the bottom of the sea!" Henson muttered. But he was growled. "You mind and be care ful, or I'll have you back in gaol. Remember that. They don't drink by the tumbler in the mess room, and I'm not going to stay here pretty short."

Apparently Henson was not lost on Merritt, for dinner found him in a frame of mind that Chris thought amusing. He was depressed by the splendor and luxury around him, the moral atmosphere held him down. There were so many knives and forks and glasses on the table, and a footman behind him absolutely strange to him. The butler behind made him nervous. He feared Merritt's investigations into great houses he had been accustomed to rob.

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

The Story of a Medicine.

Its name—"Golden Medical Discovery" was suggested by one of its most important and valuable ingredients—Golden Seal root.

Nearly forty years ago, Dr. Pierce discovered that by could, by the use of pure, triple-refined glycerine, aided by a certain degree of constantly maintained heat and with the aid of apparatus and appliances designed for the purpose, extract from our most valuable native medicinal roots their curative properties much better than by the use of alcohol so generally employed. So the new world-famed "Golden Medical Discovery" for the cure of weak stomach, indigestion, or dyspepsia, torpid liver, biliousness and kindred derangements was first made, as it was ever after, to be quite free from the use of alcohol in its make-up.

A glance through a full list of its ingredients, printed on every bottle-wrapper, will show that it is made from the most valuable medicinal roots found growing in our American forests. All these ingredients have received the Physicians' endorsement, and are recognized by the "Dispensatory of the United States of America" as being approved remedies in the cure of the diseases for which "Golden Medical Discovery" is advised to be used. A full list of ingredients has been compiled by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N.Y., and he will send a copy to any one asking same by postal card, or letter addressed to his Buffalo office as above. From these endorsements, copied from standard medical books of all the different schools of practice, it will be found that the ingredients composing the "Golden Medical Discovery" are advised not merely for the cure of a few, more superficial diseases, but also for the cure of all catarrhal, bronchial and throat affections, accompanied with catarrhal discharges, bronchitis, sore throat, hoarseness, or laryngo-bronchitis, and all those wasting diseases, which, if neglected, or improperly treated, may lead to consumption. Take Dr. Pierce's Discovery in time and nature will do the rest until you give it a fair trial and it is not likely to disappoint you. Improvement will be expected of it. It will not perform miracles. It will not cure consumption in its advanced stages. No medicine will do that. It will cure diseases that lead up to consumption, if taken in time.

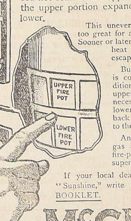
SUNSHINE FURNACE

UNBREAKABLE FIRE-POT

The lower portion of a fire-pot is usually nearly or partly filled with dead ashes, leaving the live, red-hot coals in the upper part. The result is that the upper portion expands much more than the lower.



This uneven expansion causes a strain too great for a one-piece fire-pot to stand. Sooner or later it will split, allowing precious heat and sickening gases to escape.

But the fire-pot of the Sunshine is constructed to meet this condition. It is in two sections. The upper half expands, as much as necessary, independently of the lower. When cool, it contracts back to its original size, fitting to the lower half perfectly.

And this strong, unbreakable, gas and heat-tight, two-piece fire-pot is just one of the many superior features of the Sunshine.

THE LIQUOR ACT AMENDMENT

Illegal for any Person to Sell Liquor to Minors.

Magistrate Jackson has called the attention of The Post to the following amendment to the Liquor Act of 1887, with the request that we publish the same for the better information of the general public. The clause in the old Act and the amendment are given below:

R. S. O., 1897.	AMENDMENT, 1907
78.—Any licensed person who allows to be supplied in his premises by purchase or otherwise, any description of liquor whatever, to any person of either sex apparently or to the knowledge of the licensed person or of the person supplying such liquor, under the age of twenty-one years, shall as well as the person who actually gives or supplies the liquor, be liable to a penalty of not less than $10 and not exceeding $50 besides costs, for every such offence.	78.—Any person who gives, sells or otherwise supplies liquor to any person apparently or to the knowledge of the person giving, selling or other wise supplying the same under the age of twenty-one years shall incur a penalty of not less than $10 and not exceeding $50, besides costs, or imprisonment for a period not exceeding three months, but nothing in this section contained shall apply to the supplying of liquor to a person under the age of twenty-one years by the parent, guardian or physician of such person.

Another Amendment.

It may also be well to point out that the age at which youths are permitted to frequent billiard and pool rooms has been raised from 16 years to 18 years.

A COLD APRIL

So far it has Been the Coldest in Fifty-Eighty Years.

In fifty-eight years there has been no April that has developed weather so cold as has characterized the present month.

All over the province the conditions have been very similar, and as a result farm operations have been greatly retarded.

This is in contrast with the month of March, which was five degrees above the average for thirty-three years.

The meanerature for the first eighteen days of the present month was 35.0, or 3.8 below the average in more than half a century.

In other words, each day of the present month has been, on an average, four degrees colder than a similar number of days in April of all the years since 1849.

The Crafty Farmer's Latest.

The incubator egg is the latest fraud on an unsuspecting public. An exchange says; Some of the farmers put forty or fifty dozen eggs in an incubator. They leave them there about a week, and by that time are able to tell by means of a glass the ones that are going to develop into little chicks. The ones that do not are brought to the market and sold as fresh eggs. Many people have been "stung" on this game.

ASHES NOT A FUEL

Civic Test Shows New Fad to be a Delusion.

Mail and Empire: Experiments conducted by Mr. R. C. Harris, City Property Commissioner, and Engineer Bannon, at the City Hall go to prove that ashes, even when saturated with mixtures of salt water and oxalic acid do not make good fuel. For the test 3,156 pounds of slack were mixed with 2,441 pounds of ashes, the whol ebeing saturated with 51 gallons of water, containing in solution 25 pounds of salt and two pounds of oxalic acid. The fuel was fired by an automatic underfeed stoker with a forced draft, and during the trial the average guage pressure was 73, although it fluctuated rapidly between 65 and 80. The steam was held at the average only by continually driving the fan supplying the draft. In a second trial with straight bituminous slack, the average guage pressure maintained was 83, with scarcely any fluctuation, the fan being driven but a portion of the time.

A percentage of 15.9 per cent. on the treated fuel as compared with ordinary fuel. The whole test was unsatisfactory.

Mark Twain on "Ads."

"It pays to advertise," said Mark Twain at an advertisement writers' banquet. "When I was editing the 'Virgina City Enterprise', writing copy one day and mining the text, I tried to force this truth home in many ways. One day I received a letter from a subscriber saying he had found a spider pressed between the pages of his paper, and he wanted to know if this was good or bad luck? I replied to him in our answers to correspondent column as follows; 'Old Subscriber.—The finding of a spider in your copy of the 'Enterprise' was neither good luck nor bad. The spider was merely looking over our pages to find out what merchant was not advertising, so that it could spin its web across his door and lead a free and undisturbed existence forever after."

NEW POSTAGE PLAN HITS HARD

An Advance in the Price of Papers Sent Across the Border.

The regulations governing the new postal agreement on newspapers passing between Canada and the United States have been received by Postmaster Rogers. They require that postage to the amount of one cent for each four ounces or fraction thereof be paid on all newspapers going into the United States. This will mean that all subscribers of Canadian papers living on the American side will have to pay an additional postage on papers, amounting to about one cent per copy. Lindsay people who are sending The Post to friends in the United States should call at this office and make arrangements for the continuation of the paper. The new arrangements take effect on May 8th next.

These new regulations are the result of the postal convention between the United States and Canada. Under the postal convention which has hitherto been in force, the Dominion, it is alleged, had been at a decided disadvantage in regard to the transmission of newspapers and periodicals passing between the two countries. There is about a ton of matter coming from the United States to Canada to every hundred pounds going to the United States, and most of the former consists of publications of a very cheap order. The convention stipulated that all this matter should be carried at the rates prescribed by the country of origin and according to the United States regulations cheap publications were carried at newspaper rates, which could not be so carried in Canada. Thus the Dominion was in the position of giving privileges to American publishers, which were denied to Canadians. This has now been changed. Hereafter newspapers and periodicals mailed in one country and addressed to the other, will be subjected to a uniform rate of one cent for each four ounces prepaid by stamps

AFFIXED TO EACH PACKAGE

This new arrangement is expected to keep out the trashier periodicals, though it is doubtful. The express companies, whose rates are lower, than the postal rates, will be used more generally, and periodicals will be sold on the news stands.

There is no doubt but that the immediate effect of this regulation will be the advance in the rates for papers sent to subscribers in the United States. Almost every paper in Canada has on its lists names of patrons in the States, to whom the paper is sent. Many copies are sent by relatives and friends to those who have, and wish to retain, personal interest in the locality in which the paper is printed. The postal rate, coming into effect on May 8th, will practically add 52 cents to the subscription rate, the postage having to be prepaid by the publishers. Hence all subscribers who are receiving, and all who are sending the papers across the line, will be required to pay the additional charge. The new rule will have one effect, possibly not contemplated by the framers of the regulation. The publisher, who now often continues the paper to the subscriber after the year had expired, assuming that the subscriber so wishes the paper continued, and will presently pay for it, will not feel inclined to shell out his good money for postage and lose it in addition to the subscription price. Hence a general levelling up will at once ensue, and the probable result will be the falling off in the number of papers sent to the United States.

Our Wedding Customs.

Once in a while one sees a newspaper article on "Korean weddings" or "Marriage customs among the Australian Aborigines," or something of that kind, and says, "Dear me! how barbarous!" What would the Korean bride or the Australian native say if they read in their daily papers of our wedding customs, for instance; "The pair are followed even to the train by merrymakers who pelt them with grains of rice, scraps of paper and cast-off shoes"; "the ring, put on the bride's hand as a sign of her bondage, is often carried on a tray or embroidered cushion by a small child, in front of the bridal procession;" "the marriage ceremony and feast often cost as much as the father's savings for years, but this extravagance is considered in the light of an investment, as the friends invited all contribute to furnish the house of the wedded pair." Really, our customs are quite as unique, in their way, as those of foreign nations, and perhaps some of us would feel no stranger at a Japanese tea-drinking bridal or at an aboriginal ceremony than at the conventional church wedding.—Delineator,

Decrease in Rural Population.

(Weekly Sun.)

Assessors' returns show that the population of Ontario County was nearly six hundred less in 1906 than it was in 1905. Eleven townships out of eight show a falling off. Thorah declined by 80, Reach by 72, Scott by 60, and Pickering, a township famous the world over for the number of well-known breeders located therein, fell off to the extent of 47.

True it is that owing to the increased use of machinery one man will do as much work to-day as three performed a few years ago, but, on the other hand, the increase in stock production, in hoe crops, and in truck farming, has very largely added to the amount of labor necessary. If the farms of Ontario County were producing to their capacity, they would, even with the additional use of machinery, give employment to more people than at any previous time; but this county is not producing to anything like its limit, the main cause being found in the insufficiency in the supply of labor. The drawing power of bounty-fed and tariff aided industries in the cities on the one hand, and the rush to the Northwest on the other, have drawn from Ontario, as from many other fine counties in the Province, much of the population required for their proper development.

STANDARD OIL CO. EARNINGS

Will Likely Amount to Twice as Much as Required.

The earnings of the Standard Oil Co. for some time past have been establishing new high records. The net earnings for the current year are expected to reach a figure between $75,000,000 and $100,000,000, or twice the amount required to pay dividends at last year's rate of $40 a share. The litigation in which the compnay is involved is the only thing that prevents the Stnadard Oil Co. from increasing its disbursements to shareholders. It is said that in the event of a satisfactory conclusion of the litigation in whihc the company is involved, there will be a melon cutting of no small proportions.

That the management of the Standard Oil Co. does not believe the present market price of the securities is too high is evident from the fact that the stock is down on the books at a valutaion of $500 a share. Included in the assets are more than $100,000,000 of government bonds.

As soon as the litigation in which the Standard Oil Co. is involved is out of the way, the question of increasing the capital stock to a figure that will be more in harmony with the market valuation of the securities will be taken up for consideration. The fact that the capitalization of certain subsidiaries of the Standard Oil has been increased over the last few months does not indicate a financial readjustment in the near future. These increases in capitalization have been in compliance with the laws of certain States which provide that the surplus of a corporation shall not exceed a certain percentage of its capital stock. The increase in the surplus of some of the subsidiary companies has necessitated an increase in capitalization.

Although the Standard Oil Co. is making more money than ever before in its history, its dividend payments are not as large as they were several years ago. In 1900, for example, the company paid dividends aggregating $48 a share; in 1901, $48 a share.; in 1902 $45 a share, and in 1903, $44 a share. Based on earnings over the last several months the corporation could easily pay $75 a share to stockholders and be able to report a substantial surplus at the close of the year. Over the last eight years the Standard Oil Co. has paid nearly $375,000,000 to shareholders.

The scarcity of high grade oils is shown by the fact that Pennsylvania field stocks on hand do not now exceed $600,000 barrels. It was not many years ago when stocks of between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 barrels were considered small.

Standard Oil representatives are more confdient than ever that the corporation will come out victorious in the suits instituted against it. Standard Oil representatives are more confident than ever that the corporation will come out victorious in the suits instituted against it. They hold that practically all the charges against the company are based on technicalities.

The Modern Marathon.

Toronto poets got busy recently, as the following will show;

"The hills look out on Boston town,
And Boston looks upon the sea.
Historic harbor of renown;
Gigantic teapot of the free!
The people of the dear old Hub
Will never Longboat's pace forget,
For he was dressed and had his grub
When half the Yanks were running yet."

WILL KISSING BE PROHIBITED

The Osculatory Process Denounced by Scientists as Extremely Dangerous—How the Danger Can be Removed.

A keen discussion is being carried on by some of the best scientists as to the danger and "crime" of kissing, led by Dr. Somers, Health Officer of Atlantic City, and Dr. Nalpasse, of the Medical Faculty of Paris. They charge the kiss with spreading grippe, scarlet fever, measles, mumps, whooping cough, typhoid fever, diphtheria, erysipelas, meningitis, tuberculosis, and many infectious skin diseases. They suggest legislation on the subject, and the posting of notices in railway stations, street cars and other public places, but they say it would be useless to post them on verandahs, in cosy corners, porches, shady nooks, or moonlit lawns. They also propose compulsory legislation for methods of disinfection of the mouth and purifying the breath, especially with a view to the protection of the innocent babies who are particularly subject to infection. The greatest and most effective purifier and germ destroyer known to medical science for the mouth, throat and breath, as well as for the blood, stomach and lungs, is Psychine, that triumph of the medical world that is attracting almost universal attention because of the wonderful results attending its use. One of its recent triumphs is told as a matter of experience in the following brief statement:

Dr. Slocum Co.

I am sending you photo and testimonial herewith for your great remedy PSYCHINE. Your remedies did wonders for me. I was about 28 or 30 years of age when I took PSYCHINE. The doctors had given me up as an incurable consumptive. My lungs and every organ of the body were terribly diseased and wasted. Friends and neighbors thought I'd never get better. But PSYCHINE saved me. My lungs have never bothered me since, and Psychine is a permanent cure.

MRS. LIZZIE GARSIDE,
519 Bathurst St., London, Ont.

Psychine, pronounced Si-keen, is admitted to be the most wonderful of all disease and germ-destroying agencies. For building up the run-down system and curing all forms of stomach troubles and diseases of the chest, throat and lungs or head, it is simply unapproachable. It is a reliable home treatment. Some Remarks on Things in General

By "THE STROLLER."

Those of us living in the back concessions cannot occasionally resist a pity when we read of the enormous and seemingly outrageous bills put in by doctors and surgeons whenever they get the opportunity. It will be remembered that the physician attending the late Marshall Field put in a bill that, if paid, would make him independent for the balance of his life. The operation on Marshall Field had lived, would he have dared gouge such a bill to him? Another way of looking at the matter occurs to you two men, one rich and the other poor, go into a store to buy an article, they both pay the same price for the same article; why, in the day of sickness, should the physician seek to "shear the rich man? Our ideas as regards physician, work have sometimes run along the lines of public utilities. The poor man, who is often much better and more profitable citizen to the state, has to do without medical attendance beside our doctors, and family, while the rich man, who is fattening off the workingman and his fellows, receives all the attendance he chooses to pay for. It has struck us occasionally that medical attendance could, with justice to all, be made obligatory and payment made by the state. We might not have so many young doctors willing and ready to cut and carve at you, but we would have better conditions all round. The exhaustion of the defence Ontario Bank was presented with a bill of $7,500 by his solicitor for other day, which he is disputing as being outrageously large. The solicitor claims he have attended the court some 22 times, and had sundry consultations, etc., as well as having his fees inspired. He would run from about $300 a visit to the court, $50 a consultation may day, $25 a consultation sunny day, and $500 for injured feelings. We would charge forthe it as a clean case of bold-up, and little as we think of the other fellow, we hope he gets the bill cut down manfully. Delmas, Tanev's lawyer, as stated to have been paid $100,000 for his advocacy of Thaw. It is little enough. If there were any way of counting the young scamp out of every cent he had, or is likely to have, and setting him to break stones or pick oakum for the balance of his days, there might be a chance of him getting setto before he dies—that is, if it is decreed he is not to swing.

There is quite a discussion going on in different quarters of our country at present regarding the boundary of the sale of the realm on our school houses and inculcating in the children a reverence for that some people claim is not there. The hot spots just now are Manitoba and Alberta, and the discussion has brought out all manner of opinions regarding the premise. We are pointed to the States as a place where the flag is made much of and whose example we ought to follow. Well has been said with us, as a people, for allowing the visitors who come over here annually, to flaunt their flag before us, as we know they do on any and every occasion. While we think there is a little too much of it on occasions, yet to our minds it is a sickly object lesson that he who thinks may read, that the genuine freedom of action in anything and everything, not license, we Canadians and Britishers are away ahead of the U. S. or any other country in the world. Those of us who remember as far back as the American war will recall the fact that Lincoln was forced to admit that he would carry the American flag from Lundy's Lane to John o' Groats, and he did so. When did it prove? Only that he was a man, and that the British had the good sense to let him alone, looking on the matter as a huge joke. We have often wondered since how far a British soldier would get from the seaboard in the U. S. carrying a British flag. If he landed at New York we doubt very much if he would get as far as the City Hall before he would be torn to pieces. We see a good deal about the "entente cordiale" between the U. S. and the mother country and in some ways there is much; at the same time a British flag in any part of the U. S. seems to act like a red rag to a bull, which would almost go to prove that Mr. Yank and John have much of a nimbleness about them. Our own idea is that the two nations could be compared to members of a family that do not get on very well together at times and yet, if an outsider comes in attacks the other resents it as if it were of themselves.

There is no doubt an unpleasant bitterness on the part of the U. S. on occasions against Britain, but that is on account of the ridiculous and untruthful hints that are reflected in their histories regarding the war of the rebellion. As far as the flag flaunting the occurs in our country, we concerned, we are satisfied that we can afford to ignore it as it means thing, and can not hurt us. Under present management we are rapidly being welded together, government, laws, and the carrying of them out, are so similar that we can say our country under the sun,—not excepting the mother land—has not yet had in the least bit alarmed at our loyalty or affections being called in question by anyone else, especially to such a bragging nation as our south ern neighbors.

According to the news some of the Germans are greatly exercised at the present meeting of our own King Edward and Old Father Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany. There seems to be lots of fun at these meetings of royalty. We read that Edward and Victoria Remained outside of the kind each other several times. We are at a to understand why once was not enough. If we had to do it ourselves once even would be once too often. Now, we would imagine that if we wanting to embrace Queen Alexandra more than once, but, another man, even a king—laugh! We presume this is what rankles in the German's bosom. When Edward met his mother last year he only embraced William once, and here he goes down to Italy and embraces him twice "several times". No wonder they are mad—we would be mad if they talk of war and attribute anterior motives of all kinds to the British nation. It is everywhere, outside the reports of this kind that come from time to time, that there are people who talk that way hardly realize the small part the U. S. plays in British politics. The King is at all times at liberty to give his advice on any matter, but we fancy that in the matter of foreign relations, especially as regards foreign relations, it don't amount to much. If it was a matter of his head or second or the style of hat to be worn, it would be a different thing—for he is absolute, and in saying whether this one or that one of the received into the inner circle of society has need to be whole law.

No, if Mr. German or Mr. Foreigner wants to complain of the King's things that are likely to force events, he wants to watch closely Old H. and his foreign Secretary, Sir Edward Grey. Whatever they say or do goes, and it would be better for the peace of the world if other European nations were guided by the same class of statesmen. This would get out of Nick and Willie, who are rubbing noses as many times as they please without giving a fig what ors to those nations whose ruler did not happen to be there.

There is one feature of public life that makes us chuckle at times, and the present time in this Canada of ours, and that is the amazing number of rips that float to us from time to time concerning the private life and morals of our public men. If a corrupt politician chooses a man to represent them, knowing him to be a hard drinker or a moral leper — and there are too many such men. What are emphasized as these rumors—we don't see what the rest of the members can do except to leave him severly alone, but, if he has to do any respect for themselves or their families. If that were done, the Ottawa hotelmen would give the cold shoulder and let stay instead of the glad hand, we rather think many of them would not find their way into parliament the second time. In the first instance, the people to blame are the people who hold out and then his constituency, which elects him. We make reality out of the social side of the party are thinking of, sometimes, when we see the elected and they pick on for elections to vote for. The next crowd to blame are the people who associate with him—we mean socially. Ignorance is no excuse in this. When one of these men, however, is called into the government, we don't care how many a man is and what sort of a pull he has, the only party to blame is the premier. No man has any business to be premier of a country unless he is a man, and unless he believes in the maxim that circumstances make a man, and believing that, he commits the unpardonable sin of the sale of unsavoury reputation into his cabinet. The members of a government are, in fact, the right hand of the premier and if the premier is a man of right—yes, more, for the sake of example—he can resign rather than be cabinet to live exemplary lives, as any employer of labor, who lost his proper interest of his employees, would expect those under him to do so.

We all recognize the fact that the moment a man becomes a member of parliament he is beset with temptations that he never was before, and a rule he is away from his family. He has more time on his hands than he knows what to do with, and he is unfamiliar with everyone, everywhere, however, is the lobbyist. The moneyed interests will hire the smartest harpies that are on top of the earth to lobby their bills through and they are up to all ways of the male persuasion, either. They have everything at their disposal and up in every particular. They know the weaknesses of the strong points. It does not always take bribes to get a vote, it may be invitation, a little flattery, attention to wife or daughter, any job for a man—there are few men that are worth a sou or buying a man's vote without paying him in the cash of the realm. It is the life's work of the lobbyists to find out what is the man to work and then play on it, so that our readers can see it is not always a man cause to be something out of the ordinary if he is found voting for a bill put in him when he enters parliament. We feel satisfied that any premier would, in the long run stand solid with his party and certainly with the country were he not let it was he certainly known that he would not have anyone in his cabinet family that was a deliberate drinker or adulterer, or even moral in a public, although it has not always been so, in having the two gentlemen preeminently private character leading the two parties to-day, and we sincerely hope that Sir Wilfrid will not stop until he has his cabinet secured of any and all who have the faintest taint of either wine, women or graft about them.

—The estate of the late Nathaniel Dyment, of Barrie, amounts to over $1,600,000.

INTERESTING FARM NOTES

A GOOD MILKER.

One more proof of the value of the Holstein cow is furnished by Boulton & Co. Victoria Dukes, a pure-bred heifer owned by the Ontario Agricultural College. Bred in Michigan, she was carried through to Canada at an early age, and has developed into one of the most remarkable producers in the world, as well as one of the handsomest cows of the breed. Beginning her first calf at two years, nine months and four days, she showed a record equal to most cows and awarded first prize in her class at both Toronto and Ottawa exhibitions. After making the round of the fairs, and over three months after calving, she was officially tested for seven days and yielded 223.3 pounds of milk and 11.52 pounds of butter fat. She gained every day during the test, but it was disappointing to some later to send her to the Provincial Winter Fair at Guelph. There she stood, highest among all the heifers under 36 months, giving in the 48 hours of test 103 pounds of milk, testing 3.08 per cent. fat, yielding 3.19 pounds of fat, equal to 4.42 pounds of butter. She was immediately purchased by Boulton for the Agricultural College herd, and during the next eight months she gave over 9,000 pounds of milk. Calving again in October last she gave 9,000 pounds of milk, averaging 3.5 per cent. fat, or 88.21 pounds of fat, equal to 122 pounds of butter, 85.7 per cent. fat. Her best days milk was 36 pounds, and her best week 643 pounds, testing 3.5 per cent., yielding 22.50 pounds of fat, equal to 26.62 pounds of butter, 85.7 per cent. fat, or 22.50 pounds of butter, 80 per cent. fat.

When one stops to consider that the average Canadian cow, according to the best available statistics, yields only about 3,000 pounds of milk per annum, the significance of the above figures becomes very apparent. If no misfortune befalls the young heifer, she will be a cow equal, if not surpass, any milk and butter record yet made.

G. W. CLEMONS,
Secretary Holstein Breeders' Association.

KEEP TRACK OF HENS.

D. J. Rymer, of West Powell, Mc., offers some practical hints to farmers who are interested in poultry. He says: I believe a great many more farmers would give the poultry an earlier and more selective attention and their stock much better care if they would start a cash account with them and find out just "where they are at."

A neighbor of mine who keeps quite a flock of hens, I am sure, is in debt at the end of the year. He commenced last March with his hens until they are too old to be profitable. Why? Well, he set a hatch out a good flock of chicks every spring, but hitherto he keeps about a dozen pullets, fats, crows hawks, etc., have taken the balance of the chicks. When fall comes he sells few pullets, he cannot be sure he has a flock of hens, he keeps the old ones.

The point of business is one that will stand little neglect during the beginning period if you expect realize a good percentage of the chicks hatched, and have pullets ready for six months of age, when "eggs are money." Not a few of our farmers get back for the account with your poultry. A good many think it needs a bookkeeper to do this. All that is necessary is a simple account book. February I take account of my stock and make an entry of so many hens, pullets, and chicks, from so many eggs, and they will bring in poultry if you have a fowl house, and if not, so many of these are sold or eaten now, so many are left, so many are currency credit, and give the date. Any doubts as to the flock should be noted, that at the end of the year you can easily tell how many pullets are on the territory.

On another page enter the eggs collected each day. A pad of paper can be tacked up in the henhouse for this purpose and transferred to the account book once a week or oftener if the number is large.

On another page make an entry of the feed measured out for the hens each month. If home-grown grain is used it should be credited at market price.

Another page for broilers or chicks sold completes all the separate accounts. Simple records to keep tab on the flock.

When the year's work is done you can sit down and in a short time find how many eggs from each hen feed have received, how much the feed cost is per hen, and know whether the hen kept your boots at a profit or a loss, and how much gain or loss. After records have been kept a few years I am almost sure you will feel greatly interested, and your profits will be greatly increased in proportion.

No one should be satisfied with a profit of less than $1 per hen over cost of feed. This is not fancy figure. It is easy do better than this by careful selection and breeding from known good layers, and from dames from good layers, you will see your eggs per hen's crowing up, and your profits layers, the hens will not too before, you will begin to wait, some nice pure-blood cockerels, because she will lay so many more eggs but they are more pleasing to look at, and care for, and the young stock grows of more attractive size and brings a better price.

The next step will take you to the fall fairs and poultry shows with some of your best birds, for you will have studied up the standard requirements of your favorite breed and want to sell some eggs for hatching, and most let people know of your have. Many of your fair fliers who have made good in poultry would started from small beginnings. Do not get the false idea into your head that utility and fancy cannot go hand in hand. There is no reason in the world why a hen with fine shape and fine feathers cannot produce eggs in paying quantities.

Start a record this year and see how near the $1 profit you can come.

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES

The Establishment of God's Kingdom on Earth—Articles Bearing on Church Work at Home and Abroad—Carefully Selected Contributions will be Received for Publication in this Column.

"Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all things shall be added unto you." For God is the first place. Men say they are too busy to attend church — yet a little while and they will have no God to go to die, no matter how busy they may be. Let us do Gods work and win the eternal reward whilst time permits.

"You men of the I.O.O.F. are doing a great work for the poor and suffering connected with your order. You are expending over a million per year in relieving sickness and brightening the lives of widows and orphans. I brought you this to-day for the good fight and win the race of life, looking unto Him who hath promised an incorruptible reward—who stands waiting for us with the crown eternal.

AT ST. ANDREWS.

Mr. George Brown, graduate of Queen's University, Kingston, occupied the pulpit of St. Andrew's church yesterday, both morning and evening, owing to the absence of Rev. Mr. Jackson.

The text for the evening sermon was, "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether I be of God or whether I speak of myself," John, 7th chap, 17th ve.

Jesus was in conflict with the Scribes and Pharisees. He had gone to Jerusalem and was teaching the people. The Scribes and Pharisees were intense in their hatred of him. They were surprised at his teaching and wisdom; recognizing the difference between him and themselves they wished to put him to death. Jesus presents to us a concrete in his answer, which, if taken into our life, will solve all the dark clouds of the truth. Only in action is it possible for us to remove our doubts and fears, and Jesus requires us to act. Jesus says to his opponents that if they were acting according to the promptings of their souls, they would soon recognize the fact that he was of God.

If this doctrine will work out in our lives it must be true. Everyone can test judge and test for themselves. If we are obedient and submissive to the divine we are enabled to form correct judgments for ourselves. The only way by which we can find the truth is by the power of God and by the grace of God to be able to do and work it out in our lives. Jesus teachings are true, not because he grasped the principle of truth and gave it to the people through his teachings.

In the morning anthem, "Thou a holy city", the tenor were taken by Miss Minnie Gray and Miss Jones. The duet, "Behold, I stand at the door," "I will sing to thy power." The tenor solo is that was taken by Mr. Magcalfe. The solos in the second, "Sun of my soul," were taken by Miss Maggie Gray and Mr. R. Gray respectively.

THE LATE DR. DRUMMOND.

An Appreciation From the Pen of a Friend and Admirer.

The following from the pen of Rev. Father O'Sullivan, (formerly of St. Mary's church, Lindsay and now of Montreal) will be read by his intimate friends of the late Dr. Drummond, who will be read with interest by all, especially by those who have the good fortune to hear Dr. Drummond:

The death of Dr. Drummond is a serious loss to Canadian literature, but to Canadian manhood. He was one of nature's gentlemen, a strong and manly man, a true man. He was never so much at home as in the company of children, or the simple, country folk with whom he planned the material for many of his characters and legends. Those who have listened to his public readings have felt a strange power but they have not heard him at his best. It was when you met him in an informal way with a few companions, friends that his brilliant wit and conversational powers were revealed. At private gatherings he was unrivalled in the popular mind with some of his comic poems of little poetic value. It is, however, in such selections as the Vieux Temps, Memories, The Bell of St. Michael, The little Red Canoe, Madame Dupuy, The Habitant, The Snowbird of Little Lachrenier, that he manifests his true poetic genius, which when fully appreciated in the time to come, will cause him to be recognized as the Burns of Canada.

He is thoroughly Canadian in his sympathy and sentiments. The spirit of the habitant and of French life pervades our Canadian lakes and rivers, our forests, our fields, our meadows, our hillsides and of our autumn woods, breathe through his poetry and produce a charm for every reader of his how much he loved the life of his adoption. Born in the country Leitrim, not far from Bay of Quinte, there is no doubt that much of his humor and pathos, love for nature and sympathy for every thing human, may be traced to his Irish parentage, and to the impressions made upon him when a boy he mingled with the simple fisher folk or wandered over the green and old hills of his native county, he referred to 'The thrush's song, the blackbird's flute,

The wren within the hawthorn hedge,
The rooks swelling vibrant throat,
The lowrd crooking in the sedge.

He possessed a characteristic of the poets in its simplicity and naiveté. There is no pretense, no affectation, no far-fetched sentiments, no labored expressions, no vague strokes of thought that perplex the reader. Everything is clear and luminous, and if you read a line twice it is not for understanding its meaning, but to more fully appreciate the beauty of the poetic thought. His subjects, too, are in keeping with his style. He writes not of kings and princes, but of the simple country people, who are the nearest to nature's heart and the best exponents of a nation's traditions. He has painted for us with a sympathetic hand, the habitant, the French Canadian farmer with those historic national traditions and popular legends he was identified with. Moreover, he has made us speak not in his own language, but in the language of those who thought for an English-speaking person, not our French-speaking fellow-citizens. How well he has succeeded we may consider by the compliment paid him by the poet Laureate of Quebec, who styled him "a pathfinder in a new land of song."

It is of this descendants of a noble race in whom, we still convey the conquering blood of Normandy and Leinster that Dr. Drummond lived. He has portrayed them faithfully, simple, but intelligent, religious and patriotic, fond of their hopes and families, with hearts full of native loyalty, lovers of the old time, of long ago. He has described them in very phase of their life—the Habitant Baptiste with the doubly joint in his body," the dying lumberman, with the "centaure fleche" and the "Ship of Navarre." the Canadian, or ernant, the voyageur, the well-do-do farmer, proud of his lands and his marriageable daughters, and last of all the old habitant sitting in the chimney corner smoking his pipe and dreaming of the days of his youthful manhood.

Canada indeed owes a debt of gratitude to the memory of the man who in his own charming style revealed to us the wonderful possibilities of true poetic sentiment and keen appreciation of the beautiful, whether it be found in art, fact or conscience in those little whitewashed cottages on the banks of the St. Lawrence. To all who knew him, either personally or through his poems, the news of his untimely death will come as a personal loss. God rest his noble soul! May Canada ever keep green the memory of him, whose writings made for a better appreciation of the character of our French Canadian fellow citizens, whose human nature after all is very the same, and for a more kindly feeling between the two races that have to live side by side, prosper side by side in this fair land of ours, under the same flag and the same laws.

Matters Military

The Cadet Corps of the Collegiate Institute has already commenced drill under the instruction of Mr. H. S. Hoskyer. The corps will be in full force this year, and promises very creditably with the corps of previous years. Mr. R. C. Gray will take an efficient and capable captain and will be ably assisted by the lieutenants Mr. Ed. Gray, Gordon and F. McCrea.

The calisthenic gun at the Collegiate Institute has been a boon to the L. C. I. students, in thoroughness, but to more fully appreciate the beauty of the poetic thought they offered in extemporaneous. Surely they forgot God's promise, "Where two or more are gathered together in my name, there also am I in their midst." If churches lose in number of adherents the result will be a lowering of morality. "I sometimes think," said Mr. Marsh impressively, "that the one thing that saves the church is that so many evil livers die early." "Seek first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all things else will be added unto you." For God is the first place. Men say they are too busy to attend church — yet a little while and they will have no God to go to die, no matter how busy they may be. Let us do Gods work and win the eternal reward whilst time permits.

SERMONS DELIVERED AT THE CHURCHES LAST SUNDAY.

Mr. G. E. Pitts, late of Paris, the new organist and choir leader, officiated at the Baptist church yesterday at both services for the first time, and pleased the congregation greatly. Mr. Pitts is a pupil of Herr Sobieski, of Boston, Mass., and a tenor singer of splendid range. He will prove a welcome addition to Lindsay's musical circles.

AT BAPTIST CHURCH.

The pause of the soul that has full confidence in the care of God, was depicted by Rev. Mr. Welch in his morning's sermon at the Baptist church yesterday. The subject of his remarks was, "A God-inspired Sleep." For scriptural inference he cites the verse, "I lay me down and slept; I waked, for the Lord sustained me." Psalms, 3rd chap., 5th verse.

"The ordinary things in life," said the pastor, "are sometimes the most beautiful. We hold life with a tight clutch, at this time, being limited, and we cling to life with fear and anxiety on the Lord and sleep. Sleep is one of the greatest blessings God has given us. When the body is exhausted, the mind weary and the vigor gone we lie down and arise refreshed in the morning. David's sleep was something belonging to God. His confidence in his Maker was sublime. We should realize God as the protector of our souls, and place implicit confidence in him. We often turn trust to earthly means in times of trouble or danger, and in place of taking it to God in prayer.

The abiding peace comes to those who have confidence in their Maker. People take themselves too seriously at times, and imagine they are carrying the whole world on their puny shoulders. Everyone has their little part pays to do, and it should be done well. We will sleep better and enjoy the spirit of David and implicity place our confidence in God's abiding care.

AT ST. PAUL'S.

An unusually large congregation attended the morning service at St. Paul's yesterday, the fine weather and the parade of the members of Lindsay Lodge No. 100, I.O.O.F., contributing to the crush. Every pews were reserved for the brethren, who numbered about 125, and a result chairs had to be placed in the aisles and even the entrance doors to accommodate other visitors.

The Rector, Rev. C. E. Marsh, preached to the brethren, his sermon taken from his epistle of St. Paul to the Corinthians, 6th chap. 1, verse 6.

"Know ye not that they which run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize? So run that ye may obtain." In his sermon delivered Mr. Marsh extended a hearty welcome to the brethren of Lindsay Lodge, the congregation, and himself, and then went on to enumerate the many admirable features of the order, and of the other, the chief one of which being the belief in a God-inspired sleep —a heavenly Father, without whom there would be no provision for commendable work of relieving distress, saying for his part he was a Tory, a Tory, and the uplifting of mankind generally.

St. Paul in the chapter mentioned refers to one of the popular sports of his time—a foot race, which was to him a great amphitheatre holding hundreds of thousands of spectators. The victor was taken and crowned with laurels, and was received with joy by his family and the village, town or city whence he came.

But the race we who are living day-to-day are engaged in—the christian race—is more important than any event in the athletic world, and the reward infinitely greater. The Christian race was not a race for life and death. Let a man run with all his first, he cannot win the eternal prize unless he is in the race and is guided and inspired by the Spirit of God, that is, he must be obedient to the Spirit of God in his worldly, secular and spiritual duty. The Christian race is a race for life and death. In the Marathon race at Boston the other day, where hundreds of men participated, some men must have been temperate, carefully trained athletes, who had a lot of importance to-day than that, men and women who had sacrificed all things—to have gained and body in perfect condition, that they might be able to return their aspirations and desires to the goal. They took time to go aside and draw strength from the source of salvation, and said, "I must work while it is evening, for the night cometh, when the night cometh when no man can work."

In the games spoken of by St. Paul the prize was a crown or laurels or olive-tree prize in the Isthmian games in St. Paul says, "Know ye not that they which run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize? So run that ye may obtain." We are to run the race in such a way of reward equal to the Master's "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Master." That Isaiah's sinner from the error of his ways shall save a soul from death." "Let him know that he is winning!"

The speaker then referred to the small attendance of men at the churches, ete.

Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism. Not merely that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples, but turn bent and twisted joints back to their normal position and make them as good as new. Without the use of this preparation I successfully treated many, many cases of rheumatism, because I found it contains certain valuable properties which act directly upon all curable cases of this heretofore most dreaded ailment in the world, and in greatly varied forms in Rheumatic Blood, mean soldiering and Sciatica, Lumbago and Muscular Rheumatism, I have also found that it does not cure all cases. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous waste products, very quickly, and very quickly, Rheumatism is gone forever. They in now no more to return, and the sufferer is a cured man or woman for life. We will, and in confidence, prove it to you free. We will, and in confidence, prove it to you free.

FLASK OF WHISKEY WAS VALUABLE

Handled by Three Citizens, it Netted the Fine $55.

Three liquor cases were heard at the police court last Monday, all arising from the one incident. John Corran induced Edward Hartley to buy liquor for him. He gave Hartley a drink, when the Warrens, who was standing near, could not resist the temptation and grabbed the flask, drinking most of its contents.

For procuring liquor after a notice had been served on him forbidding him to procure it, Corran was fined $20 and costs. For securing it for him Hartley got a fine of $25. For drinking it with notices against him, Abe Warren paid $10 and costs.

WORKSHOP AND YACHT BURNED

Burke Brothers Lose Victims of Misfortune Saturday Afternoon

At 2.15 o'clock last Saturday a workshop belonging to the firm of Frank Burke, near the Rider & Kilborne mill, was discovered to be on fire and an alarm was rung. Before the brigade could reach the spot, however, the frame structure was beyond saving.

In the workshop was a new gasoline launch, upon which Messrs. Jack and Frank Burke had been at work all winter. The finishing touches had been given, and the craft was ready for her trial trip, which had been fixed for Monday. Their loss will be considerable.

C.P.R. Trackmen Get Increase.

Beginning May 1st the trackmen of the C.P.R. will receive an advance in wages, which will be very acceptable to them. The track foreman will receive $2.15 a day, an advance of 20 cents from the former wages, the men will receive $1.55 per day, an advance of 15 cents. The change affects the whole of Canada. The higher wage was brought about by the agitation of the Trackmen's Union, which has been sending deputations to Montreal and Winnipeg for some time. Mr. J. Daly represented the men from this district.

OBITUARY.

Death of Mrs. Aaron Ross.

Port Perry Star: We are extremely sorry to record the death of Mrs. Lucinda Fitchett Ross, wife of the late Aaron Ross, of Port Perry. For some months Mrs. Ross had been ailing, but not until recently was her condition considered at all serious. A slight operation was performed successfully in Toronto. Her advanced age, however, militated against her recovery, and on Saturday evening, April 20th, she was afflicted with heart failure. She did not rally, but gradually sank, succumbing early Monday morning, April 22nd. Thus has passed from our midst one of the oldest residents of the township of Reach. Mrs. Ross was one of those meek, quiet and retiient natures. Her domestic virtues were well known. A large family survives her, namely: Mr. Robt. Ross, manager of the Dominion Bank, Lindsay, Mr. Wm. Ross, ex-M.P., of Port Perry, Mr. Jas. A. Ross, Port Perry, Mrs. (Rev.) D. C. Hossack, Toronto, Mr. Chas. A. Ross, assistant manager of Dominion Bank, Toronto; Mr. Frederick Ross, Springfield, Mass., Dr. J. F. Ross, Toronto; Mrs. Mutchler, Meadow Brook, Texas. Contender our sincerest sympathy to the family in their sad bereavement.

Thinks the State Responsible.

Mrs. Sharpe, secretary of the Lindsay branch Children's Aid Society, is in receipt of a letter from Mr. Alex. Baird, president of the Kingston branch, inviting the co-operation of the local Society in an effort to amend the law by which a municipality pays for the support of children sent to the Industrial Schools. The reason assigned for making the change desirable is that magistrates are at present unwilling to send youthful delinquents to such institutions because of the tax on the community, and they go on in their ignorance with the belief that they are giving a good, christian training at a cheap rate. The province should support such children.

A GOOD ARTICLE EFFECTIVELY ADVERTISED FINDS A READY SALE

McClary's "Sunshine" in Use From Halifax to Vancouver

With this issue of The Post the Clary Manufacturing Co. of London, Ont., commence their advertising for this year, using a series of ten attractive illustrations. The idea illustrating in these ads. is the work of an artist, so can readily be seen, and while the quality of the drawings is of a very high order, every ad. deals with a practical feature of the furnace. From glancing over the ten advertisements you are quickly impressed with the many good features of the furnace, and the reading part is also very clear and forceful. The McClary Co. claim to be doing the largest business in the British flag of stoves, ranges and furnaces, employing over twelve hundred people all the year round. Their London factories cover nearly three city blocks and are considered to be about the best equipped in the world.

The McClary business was established in 1852 and has grown steadily since the beginning. Branch warehouses have been established in all the leading Canadian cities, and a large force of travelling salesmen are constantly calling on every town and hamlet in the interests of this mammoth concern. The McClary Co. freely admit that the measure of their growth is due to carefully planned and persistent newspaper advertising, which is a strong evidence of the influence and force of the Canadian press.

TRENT VALLEY CANAL

Work at Trenton and Rice Lake to be Pushed This Season.

(Special Dispatch to The Globe.)

Ottawa, April 26.—Engineers of the Department of Railways and Canals are now preparing specifications preparatory to calling for tenders for the completion of the section of the Trent Valley Canal. It is the intention of the department to proceed with the work as rapidly as possible. This summer contracts will be let for a considerable portion of the section of the canal starting at Trenton, will be begun, and work will also be started at the end of the section completed, section near Rice Lake. It will probably be two months or so before actual construction work is begun, owing to the necessary delay in advertising for tenders, etc. Engineer Walsh is now making a survey of the suggested northern outlet, via Nottawasaga Bay, asked for by the Seven River, as now proposed. As soon as his report is noted, the northern outlet will promptly and finally be decided upon, and the completion of the whole canal pushed with all possible speed.

Disadvantages of Schools.

Railway Notes

—The Grand Trunk is said to have offered the Ontario Government the use of its right of way for the transmission of power.

—It is reported that 160 miles of the Canadian Northern of the C. P. R. will be replaced with 100-pound steel rails the coming summer, and that a similar work is contemplated by Detroit River is ready, for use the entire division will be tracked with the same weight of rail.

—Sectionmen of the Grand Trunk in the vicinity of Flint, Mich., have struck for a raise of 10 cents per day, been paid $1.25 per day, but asks for $1.50. The men present pay is not sufficient in these times.

—A Toronto despatch says that the C.P.R. is negotiating to secure the charter of the Toronto, Hamilton & Niagara Power Co., which proposed to run a power line from Niagara Falls to the Queen City, including Collingwood.

—One of our great Canadian railways ordered last year 4,000,000 packages of flower seeds to distribute among its patrons, and procured twenty-three varieties of seeds, and sent out twenty-three varieties of flowers! The answer to the problem is found in the fact that the gardens the length of the railway. It is a business investment, for the company has a lot of land, and a garden means better kept and cared for stations and better business.

—The directors of the Philadelphia & Reading railway have struck a blow to Dr. Osler and his supporters, deciding that the "younger" men in the field of work, which Osler is all wrong, and the man of 40 or 50 cannot be dispensed with. Having decided that, the board of directors set out on order that hereafter the age limit of new employees be increased from 35 to 40 years. Under the pension system of both the Pennsylvania and Reading railroads men are retired all 70 years of age, so that a man 40 years of age may expect to serve for about 30 years, with a term of 45 years old was 25 years' service.

TO IMPROVE YOUR APPEARANCE

Retain your youthful freshness so that no one can remark, "she is past her prime." To appear younger and more attractive than the average woman of your age particularly requires a perfect imitation of your hair, short or scrawny. A DORENWEND TRANSFORMATION, WIG, PADOUR, WAVE, CURL or SWITCH will substitute nature's defects. Even if you have plenty of your own hair, these light and airy artifices may be worn over it, saving you the worry of arranging your hair in the prevailing style. Your hair can be perfectly matched in color and texture, so that detection is out of the question.

Now, if you have in your mind any prejudice regarding artificial hair, we would respectfully request you to bear in mind that being natural and becoming our productions will prove in your case.

CONSULT PROFESSOR DORENWEND

DURING THIS VISIT

Advice regarding your hair and how you can make the most of it, also a personal demonstration of the newest styles in transformations, will be given free of charge at our establishment in Toronto. Here in our studio are exclusively designed by Professor Dorenwend, and they cannot be duplicated from any other house. Their equal is to be produced only by us.

MAN TO MAN—ABOUT BALDNESS

If you are bald, or partially so, you must realize that it makes you look old. Notwithstanding the advertised 'a hair tonic that will grow hair on the head of bald, you hesitate before resorting a natural hair covering simply because you imagine it is going to be uncomfortable. Let us show you that such is not the case. Thousands of men, who thought the same as you are now using our goods.

DORENWEND PATENT TOUPEE

and instead of carrying the handicap, that baldness proved to them, they are now enjoying the advantage of looking younger than their contemporaries. Come to-day in business and social life. Our Patent Toupee is not a piece of material that is fastened on the head and may be worn without fear of detection—it is possible to remove from the head unless it will—not the least clumsy or uncomfortable. They act as a protection, preventing colds and catarrh, so very prevalent.

Now do not forget, this opportunity comes and is for yourself. At the Benson demonstration will continue you that a Dorenwend Patent Toupee is not like the clumsy, wiggy affairs that are claimed to be "just as natural."

IMPORTANT NEWS OF THE DISTRICT

Told in Interesting Form by the Bright Correspondents of The Post at the Various Centres.

JANETVILLE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Mrs. Taylor, of Cartwright, is ill at present at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George Bradburn.

The mumps have had their course throughout Janetville, and at present there is very little sickness.

The many friends of Mr. W. H. McGill are pleased to see him in the store again.

Mr. Thomas Heaslip has moved into the residence lately vacated by Mr. J. Sproule who has gone to Lindsay to reside.

A little girl visitor arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Thornton last week.

Mr. Norman McGill had a barn raising on Thursday last.

Mr. Thomas Howe, butcher, has his meat waggon on the route already. We wish him every success.

Much credit is due the young people of the Epworth League in their undertaking of having the basement of the Methodist church cleaned and painted. We wish them every success with their concert on Thursday, May 3rd, as they require the funds to meet expenses.

Dr. Nasmyth has removed his household effects to Detroit, where Mrs. Nasmyth preceded him some short time ago.

Mrs. Wm. McGill, at the time of writing, is very low, and little hope is entertained for her recovery. Mrs. McGill met with a painful accident last Sunday by falling through a trap door on the barn floor, injuring her back. The parents and family have the sympathy of a great many friends in their affliction.

VICTORIA ROAD.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Dr. J. Grant is visiting friends in Toronto.

Mr. Moore, manager of the Peat Co., of Peterboro, was in the village on business last week.

Messrs. A. J. Campbell and Wm. Thornbury, of Lindsay, spent Friday in the village.

Miss Josie Gallagher left on Monday to spend a week with Toronto friends.

Rev. Father J. O'Sullivan left on Monday. He expects to sail for Ireland in a few days and will spent some months away. His friends wish him a pleasant and safe voyage.

Miss Barbara Anderson, of Woodville, was the guest of her brother, Mr. R. A. Anderson, last week.

Miss Florence Graham and M. Tremeer spent Sunday in Kirkfield.

Mr. W. L. Ryckman and Miss Annie Ryckman are visiting Cannington friends.

Miss Teresa Drury and Mr. Frank Drury, of Lindsay, spent Sunday at their home.

Mr. W. J. Shields, of Coboconk, spent Sunday with friends in the village.

Miss Luella and Meta Haygarth spent Saturday in Lindsay.

Miss May Archer left for her home at Moorefield on Friday morning. She will be greatly missed in our village.

Miss Eliza Ballam, of the Federal Business College of Lindsay, spent a few days under the parental roof.

BOBCAYGEON.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The Game Protective Association held its first meeting this season on Wednesday evening last, in Mr. M. Boyd's office. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year; President, W. R. Crandell; vice-president, W. G. Smith; secretary-treasurer, W. Hickson. The subject of illegal fishing and poaching was discussed, and it was agreed by the meeting that all illegal work in fish and game can be reduced to a minimum in the district if the Association is only alert. The meeting adjourned to meet in M. M. Boyd's office on Wednesday, May 1st.

Our butter factory is in full swing now. They churn twice a week, and the butter made brings the highest price. The patrons received 28c. per lb. for their butter fat. They purpose running the butter plant till the 20th of May, when the cheese factory will begin operations and will continue till the first of November.

The C. P. R. painters are here brightening up the station, the signals, and in fact everything in the yard, with the bright colors of red, yellow and green.

"So Jim is off," is what the people said as they wended their way from the C.P.R. station last Wednesday morning, after bidding Mr. James Capstick adieu and wishing him a pleasant voyage to old England. Mr. Capstick will visit his relatives in Yorkshire, after which he intends to return about midsummer.

The government has made a grant of $22,000 for building a new dam at "Little Bob". A new dam is badly needed here, as there has been a large waste of water for some years, and it is very important for both navigation and the propogation of our fish that the waters should be conserved.

The joyous shouts of the boys can be heard above the roar of the water as it rushes over the dam, when one of them lands a two-pound sucker. Yes, the suckers are up and the boys are happy.

The vaudeville show drew a good house at the town hall here last Friday evening. The dramatic pice, entitled, "The Dandelion's Dodges", was very amusing.

COBOCONK.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

—Mr. T. E. Kyle and wife, entertainers, of Toronto, have been secured by the local C. O. O. F. lodge for an entertainment on Tuesday night, May 7th.

The Coboconk creamery has resumed operations under the management of Mr. Arthur Dayman.

Mr. C. C. Birchard has resigned his position as teacher of S. S. No. 9, Somerville, and has gone to Bobcaygeon.

Mr. Christopher Birchall, local game warden, has had notices of the game laws posted along the river, and pot hunters will doubtless take the hint.

—Mr. Robt. Armstrong, of Lindsay, has been for several weeks superintending improvements on the Gull River Lumber Co's mill here, and doubtless a largely increased output will be the result.

Mr. S. A. Kemp and Mr. G. W. Stevens put in new pianos last week.

Mr. J. E. Jackson has sold three acres of land adjoining the lumber yard of the Gull River Lumber Co, who are extending their siding across it, thus doubling their piling ground.

HIGHLAND GROVE

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Mrs. J. Barsotta, of Baptiste, paid a flying visit to her mother, Mrs. Peters, last week.

Mr. Hugh Lackie has arrived to charge of the Deer Lake cheese factory for the coming summer. He expects to begin making cheese on May 1st.

Mr. S. Phillips, public school inspector, of Minden, visited schools Nos. 3 and 4 on Wednesday of last week. He was much pleased with the progress the pupils who have attended all winter have made.

WOODVILLE

(Special to The Post.)

On Thursday evening, April 25th, the members of the Woodville Methodist S. S. and congregation met in the basement of the church and presented Mrs. C. H. McKee and Miss Mabel McKee with the following address on the occasion of their removal to Woodstock:

To Mrs. and Miss McKee:

Dear friends,—We have come to-night to the point where our ways, which have hitherto run together in pleasant intercourse now must part, and we are called upon to say good-by. Standing thus at the parting of the ways, our thoughts turn back along the road we have travelled to where you first entered and took your places among us. Since then we have journeyed together for many years, and you both have helped to bless and brighten the way for us all, and now in parting you leave behind as a rich legacy to our school and to our church these many years of fruitful service. We are certain also that your good works will follow you both to bless you and to bless others by their continuing and ever widening influence.

We cannot look far down the future, but we know "that behind the dim unknown standeth God, keeping watch above His own," and that His goodness and mercy that have followed us thus far all the days of our life, will abide with us even unto the end, if we are but faithful.

The places you have occupied in our school will not be easily filled, and we shall miss you greatly in the days to come, but not greater will our loss appear than our cause for thankfulness that we were permitted so long to enjoy your fellowship and helpful service.

In parting, we ask you to please accept this chair as a slight token of our regard, and trust that it will help to remind you of the pleasant days spent in Woodville, and of the many friends there whose best wishes now and ever will accompany you wherever you may go.

Dated at Woodville, April 25th, 1907.

Signed on behalf of the Woodville Meth. S. S.:

C. E. Weeks, Sup't.
Wm. Newman, Asst Sup't.
Lily J. Westlake, Sec'y

Mrs. McKee, on behalf of both, expressed in fitting terms her gratitude for the kindness shown by the people of Woodville towards herself and family, and expressed her regret that the pleasant intercourse and associations for the past ten years must now be broken.

On Friday evening of the same week the Council and citizens of Woodville met in public meeting in the town hall and presented Mr. C. H. McKee with a handsome oak desk and the following address:

To Mr. C. H. McKee, Woodville:

Dear Sir,—It was with feelings of deep regret that we, your fellow citizens of Woodville, learned of your intention to leave our midst. Since you came among us some ten years ago, you have closely identified yourself with the various interests of our village, and in the fullest sense proved yourself a good citizen. Too many of us seem to think the whole duty of a citizen is "to keep peace and pay the taxes," but that was never your conception of citizenship. Nothing that made for the advancement of our village or affected its welfare found you indifferent or unwilling to bear your share of the burden or play your part in carrying it to a successful issue. For several years you have served our municipal Council, and even your opponents, if you have any now, would not deny that there was always "something doing" while you had a seat at the Council board. Some of our public works—notably our town hall—bears witness to your energy and enterprise while a member of Council, and will serve to keep the memory of your name and fame fresh and green long after you have gone from among us. We are not forgetful, either, of the debt of gratitude we are under to your family, who have ably supported you in every good work, and especially would we mention the pleasure we have so often received from the rare musical gifts of your son and daughter, so freely exercised for our benefit.

We would ask you to kindly accept this desk as a slight token of our regard, and we trust that it will be none the less prized by you because it is a feeble expression of the appreciation and good will of the people of Woodville towards yourself and family. In conclusion we extend to you and to your family, our best wishes for continued happiness and prosperity.

Dated at Woodville, April 26th, 1907.

Signed on behalf of the Council,
D. Grant, Reeve.

Signed on behalf of the Citizens' Committee;
Wm. Heppenstall.
Capt. N. L. Patterson.

Mr. McKee, in replying, recalled the time of his coming to Woodville ten years before, and the uniform kindness that he had received from the people of Woodville during the whole of his stay among them. He referred to the many times he had been gratified by the marks of confidence and esteem shown to him by a generous public in electing him to the Council and to other positions of trust and honor in the community, but that all such feelings and all former occasions faded into insignificance when compared with the present occasion, which he counted the proudest moment of his life. If he had been able to serve them in the least degree, it was a matter of thankfulness to him and his only regret now was that the service had not been ten times greater, so as to repay in some measure the good people od Woodville for their many kindnesses in the past and make him more worthy of the flattering words of appreciation showered upon him on this occasion.

A CLOTHING WINDFALL

WITH A RISING THERMOMETER.

With the weather limbering up a little, and the sun getting warmer, showing up the seedy spots in your winter garments, you hardly need reminding that you must "fix up" a bit soon. THIS WEEK will be a STUNNING WEEK for forced-down prices at Gough's. The reason is plain---the backward spring weather has put somewhat of a damper on sales; and stocks are not moving as fast as they should. So we are emphasizing values that look to us almost unbeatable. Here's a few samples of the forcings :---

LITTLE BRITAIN.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

There was an error in an article in last week's correspondence re the operation performed on Wilfred Hooper. The article read that the operation was performed by Dr. Dale, of Oakwood, and Dr. Henderson, of Cannington. It should have read that the operation was performed by Dr. G. W. Hall, of Little Britain, assisted by Dr. Dale of Oakwood and Dr. Henderson, of Cannington. The operation has been successful.

Mr. John Stacey has erected a fine new stable.

Miss Vina Wallis, who was on the sick list, is out again.

Our farmers are nearly through seeding, in spite of the backward weather.

The suckers are up in the pond and creek now, and the boys and men are getting lots of them.

Mr. Loy Rogers and Mr. George Heatlie are at Manilla trapping muskrats. They report good luck.

Mrs. W. J. Yeo is ailing from an attack of pleurisy. We wish her a speedy recovery.

Our market is making good progress, getting larger each week. The prices last week—16c. for eggs, 26c. for butter.

Mr. John Rooks who was ill with [illegible] is around again.

Dr. G. W. Hall is out with his automobile and has it in first-class condition.

Our boys are practising baseball and intend having a good team this year.

Miss Powell, of Washago, is visiting at Mr. Wm. Marks this week.

Mr. Albert Stacey, D.L.S., O.L.S., of the Civil service, Ottawa, who has been home a few days, has departed for British Columbia as head surveyor on a surveying trip.

Mr. Russell Wallis and Mr. Wallie Davidson called on friends at Saintfield last Sunday.

NORLAND.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

A pie social was held at the home of Mr. Wm. Ward for the purpose of raising money for the superannuation funds. All that attended report a good time.

Woodcock & Martin intend starting the peddling rig on the road this week.

Miss Nellie Allely, teacher of Horncastle, spent Saturday and Sunday at her home here.

Spring has arrived at last and with it the old-time songsters.

The debating class has been given up because some of our young people did not have enough interest in it to take part and help it along. They simply got up and left when the debate was over.

The many friends of Miss Lulu Adams are glad to see her around again.

Mr. Will Pearson has arrived home from Miner's Bay, where he was employed in a sawmill.

It is reported that we are to have a telephone, which will be of much benefit to our village.

LINDSAY MINSTRELS SCORE ANOTHER

Academy Crowded — In Some Respects the Performance Surpassed Past Efforts—Presentation of Cold Watches to the Members of Midgets' Hockey Team a Feature of the Evening.

In a program brimful of fun and comic hits, the Lindsay Minstrels entertained one of the largest audiences of the season at the Academy of Music last night. Every available seat was occupied, and many from outside points in Music hall Tuesday. From pit to gallery everybody was happy, well behaved, and the wishes performed their work in a capable manner. The opening chorus certain the first grouping of the company, the chorus in handsome costumes in the background, and the end men, who are fantastically arranged at the sides, presented a splendid appearance.

4. Presentation of Watches to the Midgets, by Mr. Morton.

5. Patriotic Song and Drill.....
Lindsay Minstrel Company

Soloists—Parkins and Meehan.
Drill in charge of Lieut. J. Gray.
Save the Last Day.
Entire Company.

The central figure was Dr. Walters, who presided over the end men in manner in which he took his part, and he was ably assisted by the success of the performance.

The opening overture by the entire company, the end men figured in some clever witticisms, and these, and just what of novelty, opened the proceeding and, convulsed the audience with laughter. Many comic ditties were the subjects of numerous yarns, the same possessing merit of their character or some spell of humor, which made the hits all the more interested. J. N. Gray, Seldon Meehan, and Frank Taylor particularly prominent in this line. F. Taylor made a decided hit with S. Meehan in "King Pins of Dutch Comedy." George Carruth took his part always, and his rendering of "Rosalind" with his song, "The Poor Old Man," which produced a good deal of horse sense as well as fun. Mr. George Bell, the popular tenor, sang strong, and a delightful little ballad entitled "Somewhere," in support. We speak a little sure of our dollars in constructing a new stretch of street, and the Board of Trade, the Board of Health and peak, leave it merely alone, pay no attention to trifling repairs to make it made in time, and continuously, as occasion demands, keep the main street in good condition perpetually. Meanwhile, the side streets, in which the street is neglected and gone to ruin, the people who pay the taxes have to pay 16 or 17 mills on the $1, at great expense, it has to be remembered that

This is all due to the lack of proper system, and the absence of well directed supervision. "A stitch in time saves nine" is a proverb applicable to the case of our streets than to the case of a coat.

Going Ahead for Six Months

Mr. H. Bickerdike, of the Bessemer Company McHugh, left town last evening for Montreal, where he will board the Turbine Steamer Victoria Allan line, for Liverpool. Parnell will inspect the Dublin Fair after which he will take in the principal sights of Ireland, England, Scotland, and possibly France and Italy. He will be absent for five or six months. Mr. McHugh's many friends will join in wishing him a pleasant trip and a delightful and instructive holiday.

INTERESTING FARM NOTES

Now it is the faithful cow for whom mechanical contrivances are being turned out to displace the simple and honorable custom of milking by hand.

It is only by the larger dairies and those who are well-to-do farmers that the milking machine has been introduced, for the rank and file of the farmers of the United States adhere to their inherited methods and are prone to regard such inventions as the milking machine in the light of newfangled notions, mere fads for the idle rich and government experiments, but unless in the serious study of the dairy industry, they are

So great has been the progress achieved by the milking machine in recent years, however, and its successful use would open up such a wild field of improvement in the dairying industry that the Department of Agriculture at Washington instituted a series of experiments and investigations into the pros and probable future of the machine.

Four types of machines were open to the investigation of the officers of the department. One was the foot-power milker, designed for use in small herds where there are few stanchions. It consists of a suction pump worked by foot power, two pieces of rubber tubing and eight suction cups to be attached to the teats of two cows which can be milked at the same time.

The second, the power milker, consists of a stationary milk pail made of block tin fitted with a tight lid of aluminum and surrounded by a jacket of water, that the milk may be quickly and easily cooled. The intermediate tubing and the pulsator.

Then there is a milker designed for use in large herds, consisting of a single air pump composed of two cylinders, each of which is capable of one of the other in its action. Finally there was the machine that was subjected to the experiments, in which the milk is drawn by intermittent suction, exactly like the action of a vacuum pump or a steam engine. This last machine was all the time in most general use at the time of the tests.

Dairymen frequently inquire what kind of power should be used with the milking machine, but this is only important so far as it affects authority and the dependence of the dairy. If when a cow is being milked, the belt or band or pump should stop in mid-flow when a cow is only partly milked, the chances are that there will be a decrease in yield, since a decrease in the supply of the milk when the operation is resumed. So that should the engine or whatever power it may be stationed at, fail, the cow would be a marked falling off in the yield and quality of the milk is at once remarked.

Electric motors and steam power constitute the power used with the milking machines now turned out, and any of these can be utilized with perfect safety, if care be taken in its employment.

To convince a dairyman that the milking machine is of any use he has to be shown that it will increase the yield and the quality of the milk, that it will save a deal of labor, and will effect a saving of time and the expense of the dairy generally. From a herd of thirteen cows eight were selected by government experts, divided into two lots, and each lot was so that each lot gave practically the same amount of milk. The cows were fitted for thirty days, being divided into three periods of ten days each, one lot being milked by hand and the other by machinery.

At the end of each period of ten days the cows were changed, that the lots of cows were reversed in order to obtain results from milking by the two methods, and that no one person could be struck, During the tests the milking was done by one man, for it makes a vast deal of difference in the milk if one man milks and whether she is accustomed to the milker or not.

The general averages for the thirty days showed that the use of the machine milking method. Not only was considerable time saved by the use of the machine, but the quality was better from the machine-milked cows. The milk that for point was obtained by very much cleaner than that milked by hand, and the bacteria were much less numerous than the ordinary dairyman gives to it.

The experiments showed that the average time required for one man to milk four cows by the machine was 13.52 minutes in the morning and 13.57 minutes in the evening, a total of 26.59 minutes for the day. Four men would have to be used for putting the machine in operation, adjusting the teat cups, in the case of the four cows milked by hand it took an average of 31.0 minutes to milk in the morning and 19.71 minutes in the evening, a total of 50.71 minutes for the day.

There was, therefore, a saving in time by the machine milking of 24 minutes and 14 seconds each cow. This saving was accomplished by the machine not milking, but by the operator's skill to milk two cows at once. As a matter of fact, the machine took up for five machines, milking ten cows at once, the time saved in the time saved.

Even in milking a single cow, the machine can obtain high speed, now and then, but it cannot do so for so long that its action can be fast or even fast enough to make the milk at a minute in the rate usually recommended, but the more rapid the pulsations, the faster the machine will milk, up to a certain limit. For instance, in the case of one cow, giving a good flow, the machine milked the abnormally fast at two and one-quarter minutes, the number of pulsations being 1,200 to the minute, while the average was 1,000 to the minute, and the average time of the cows, 3.25 minutes.

To the dairyman the yield is perhaps the most important matter. In that respect the machine compared favorably with the hand milking. From hand milking the yield of milk and cream for thirty days was 1,278.5 pounds, as against 1,090.25 pounds from the machine method, and indicating stripping a difference of 6.5 pounds, or 3.24 per cent. in favor of the machine.

The experiments with another lot of four cows showed that the yield of milk, not including stripping, amounted for thirty days to 1,278.5 pounds from the hand milking, and 1,258 pounds from machine milking, a difference of 3.39 pounds, or in favor of the machine.

But unless a machine milks cows as well, or at least, as clean as the average hand does it, it is of but little service to the dairyman. This is a matter of one of the features of the test, the milker's instructions being to go to extremes in cleanliness. The total strippings from the 8 cows milked for thirty days were 68.85 pounds, and from machine milking 91.09 pounds, or 6.45 pounds less for the machine.

Another experiment was tried with a herd of twenty cows, and in this test the hand milking showed a saving of 6.5 pounds, but a yield of strippings, which all goes to show that the key of the problem lies in the handling of the cows. For in the latter experiment the same care was exercised in filling the teat cups, and the cups to the utensils in the pail, and the result was

Special care has to be exercised in the use of the pulsator, which is used to each cow, and another importance is the operator that bears on the cows to have the cows always take the same attitude in the barn, and the cups of the same size at each milking. The animals then become accustomed and reconciled to the milking machine and to clean.

It is of interest to know how the milking machine affects a herd of cows the first time it is used. Some of the animals are a little restless at the sight of the pulsator of the machines and the clicking of the pulsators, but they soon become quiet and reconciled to their action. The pulsator which is perhaps the most surprising in that heifers taken to the machine for the first time are older cows. The majority of the cows appear to like the machine, and stand quietly chewing their cuts without manifesting any discomfort.

REFEREE OF BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The Packages are to be Examined at Montreal.

J. A. Burdick, Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner, Ottawa, says publication of the following:

Under instructions received by the honorable, the Minister of Agriculture, to announce that the officer of the Dairy Commissioner will be stationed at Montreal to act as official Referee of butter and cheese after May 15th next, for examining, and certifying to, packages received from dairymen in various districts.

The duties of the representatives which have been made by salesmen, the Referee will act on request of the owner and seller. While it is recognized that the delay which may ensue before the salesman can be communicated with will be urged as a defect in the quality of the cheese or butter becoming more pronounced, yet that it may interfere with the prompt exportation of the lot of cheese, yet the right of the seller to be consulted before any reference is made to the Referee.

"Any salesman who desires to have the Referee examine any cheese, consequent of the delay of final inspection, may do so by giving the Referee a standing order in writing authorizing the examination of his cheese, and at any time on request of buyer alone. Such authorizing order may come direct from the salesman himself. Verbal notices from the salesman to the representative of this kind may be cancelled by the salesman giving due notice to that effect.

"In giving certificates on the quality of butter or cheese, the Referee will be guided by the classification of the Dairy Commissioner, of Ottawa, ago. In this classification First Class is the equivalent of "Fine" in the term used for many years to denote the quality of cheese, and "Fine First" is divided into second and third grades, with every definitions for each grade. The advantage to the seller of having the grades clearly defined, is that he can see at once the defect of his cheese, and if he is dissatisfied with the Referee's decision, he can at once, if he wishes, ship the cheese to the buyer and seller with a report on the defects, which report is not officially examined.

The Referee will use a circular giving the standards or definitions for these grades of butter and cheese were established in 1905, in Montreal. Copies will be sent to any person who may be interested, free of charge.

"The standards are printed on the back of the circular, and are:

THE POST HORSE REGISTER

A List of Superior Sires Travelling This District.

HORSE OWNERS, READ THIS.

Have You a Stallion This Season?

If you have a well-bred sire (well) pay you to make yourself up to advertise him during the season in The Weekly Post. The paper goes twice every point in the county about every line of travel and is a weekly reminder to the farmer that it pays to raise good stock. Of course if your horse is not of reliable breeding it would not be worth while wasting money in calling attention to him, because our readers would at once spot the weak points in a defective pedigree.

In former years those who took advantage of our advertising column say their money was well spent, and we are in a position to give every better service to-day. Owners, send in your copy at once.

Below is given the name, sire and dam, and a sketch of the breeding of a number of the well-bred horses available in this section in the coming season.

HEAD LAKE

(From Our Special Correspondent.)

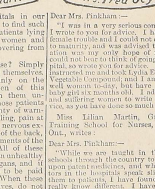
We are still in the grip of King Winter. On Saturday morning the early risers were greeted with a blizzard and snow storm, driven by a cold gale from the northwest. Some depth of three inches fell, while the wind piled the light fleecy snow into a foot deep. The farmers are making sugar, and they tell each other if they know anything about the weather, that it will very few have seen any grass yet; the ground is covered with very cold and damp. Spring birds arrived a month ago, but have cold and spring is very slow this time.

On Thursday, April 25th, Mrs. Arthur Hetherington, of Head Lake, Lakeview cemetery Kirkfield. Mr. Hetherington has lost his wife, and left from Corson's Siding to this cemetery, a distance of 8 miles. Deceased was a Miss Boothby, and she had the pleasure of her acquaintance, the loss husband, and seven children, some of whom are grown to man and woman. Deceased was a native of Mr. Mark of Norland, and Rev. Mr. Ferguson, of Norland, officiated, conducts the ceremony, and spoke very feelingly of the deceased.

Mr. Joe. Ryan, the very popular agent for the famous Magnet Cream Separator, visited Victoria Road on Saturday last, and loaded into his wagon $400 worth of these separators machines which he had orders for in the Vicinity of Head Lake, showing plainly the farmers are weighing up the goods, and good time when Joe comes around, as he will not handle an inferior article.

Women in Our Hospitals

Appalling Increase in the Number of Operations Performed Each year—How women May Avoid them.



Miss Lillian Martin Mrs. Fred Seydel

Going through the hospitals in our large cities one is surprised to find such a large proportion of the patients lying on those snow-white beds women and girls, either awaiting or recovering from serious operations.

Why should this be the case? Simply because they have neglected themselves. Female troubles are certainly on the increase among the women of this country—they creep upon them unawares, but never one of those patients in the hospital bids had plenty of warning in their backaches, bearing pain at left or right of the abdomen, nervous exhaustion, pain in the small of the back, dizziness, bloating, displacement of the organs or irregularities. All of these symptoms are indications of a debilitated condition of the female organs, and it should be heeded by all who do not wish to be a dangerous operation. When these symptoms manifest themselves, no drug along until you are obliged to go to the hospital and submit to an operation—but remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has saved thousands of women from such serious operations.

When women are troubled with irregular, suppressed or painful periods, weakness, displacement or inflammation of the organs, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation, backache, bloating, flatulency, general debility, indigestion, and nervous prostration, or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, faintness, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, "blues" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feelings, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy.

Mrs. Fred. Seydel, 412 N. 5th Street, West Philadelphia, Pa., writes:

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Succeeds Where Others Fail.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I was in a very serious condition when I wrote to you for advice. I had a serious female trouble and I could not carry a child nine months, and was advised that an operation was my only hope of recovery. I thought I would try your medicine before I submit to such a dangerous operation. I did as you advised, and I am now in good health. I have had a healthy baby girl six months old. I advise all sick women to write to you for advice, for I know, as you have done so much for me."

Miss Lillian Martin, Graduate of Training School for Nurses, Brantford Ont., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"While we are taught in the training school for nurses to place little faith upon patent medicines, and while the doctors in our hospital are strongly against them to patients, I have found that they really know little about it. I have frequently known Physicians to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to women suffering with the most serious complications of female trouble (displacement of organs, and other disorders). They would, as a rule, write out a prescription and simply label it "tonic" or other names, but I know it was your Vegetable Compound, and I can testify to its prescription benefits. Inflammation and ulceration, which had been cured in a few weeks by its use, and I feel that it is my duty to write to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound proper credit."

Mrs. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles. Do not resort to any other medicine, for you need the best.

Mrs. Pinkham, daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice and medicine have restored thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

HEAVY LOSS BY FIRE

Large Millinery Warehouse In Toronto Entirely Destroyed.

LOSS AMOUNTED TO $145,000

Knox Manufacturing Co. Burnt Out—Cause of Fire Supposed to Have Been Lighted Cigar — Adjoining Premises Suffered From Delays of Water—Firemen Did Good Service—Only Partly Insured.

Toronto, May 6.—Loss in the sum of $145,000 will be entailed by fire which broke out at 3.30 o'clock Saturday evening in the second storey of the Knox Manufacturing Co. premises, 50 East Wellington street.

The fire kept all the downtown divisions of the department busy for more than an hour before it was got under control. Tons of water were poured into the building, which is a substantial four-storey brick structure. An opportunity for the use of the water tower was given and with a stream at each flat at the front and a like number in the rear the fire was literally drowned out.

The cause is undetermined.

While this undoubtedly was the only method of coping with the flames, it entailed a heavy loss on the stock of John Kloepfer, carriage hardware, at No. 44 and 46.

These premises were deluged, there being nearly a foot of water on every floor and more in the basement. A veritable Niagara Falls poured out of the Knox building door, flooding the street.

Mr. Knox placed his loss at $90,000 on stock, which was totally destroyed. On this there is $61,000 insurance.

The building was completely gutted and the walls are rent. The damage to this is placed at $25,000. It is owned by the Trustees of Queen's University, whose Canadian agent is C. Cowski. This is said to be fully covered.

Cause a Mystery.

Little light could be had on the origin of the fire. Mr. Knox said that there could be no truth in the statement that it had been an explosion. He said he believed it was caused by a cigar butt or burning ember thrown among the stock of tweeds in the cap department on the second floor.

Slight damage by smoke was done to the stocks of the William Graham Company, the Ontario Silk Co. and F. C. Beall, leathers. This will not shed above $5,000 and is amply covered.

The department was given a second call to the Knox Building at 11 o'clock Saturday night. It was found that several bales of tweeds on the second floor where the fire started were still smouldering.

At 8.15 Sunday evening the Bay street division was again called on to the premises to quell an incipient outbreak.

BUCKET-SHOP CLOSED UP.

Man Settles Up With Everybody to Avoid Prosecution.

Winnipeg, May 6.—George W. Wood, president of the Canadian Stock & Grain Co., the company who is now under bonds awaiting trial on two charges of running a bucket-shop in Winnipeg, and one of the theft of $1,000 margin put up by J. Carrick of Fort William in a stock deal with the company, will not come before the higher courts for trial.

After a long conference with the crown solicitor Saturday night, Wood finally agreed to settle all outstanding claims against the company, and to order that no one who has dealt through his concern should lose any money. Wood will deposit with the Attorney-General for Manitoba sufficient money to cover all the costs of the prosecution. This means that the end of the career of prominent in the bucket-shop business in Western Canada, ends right now.

William Sutherland Dead.

Glencoe, Ont., May 6.—William Sutherland, treasurer of the Township of Elgin, and one of the pioneer newspaper men of Canada, passed away at his residence in Elgin Township on Saturday night. Mr. Sutherland was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, on April 20, 1824. His father was a printer with the firm of Hunter & Blair, who had the contract of printing the Bibles in Scotland. In 1842 he came, with his parents, to Montreal, the family in Montreal. Later he came to London, where he founded the Canadian Free Press, which he conducted as a weekly Liberal newspaper for four years, after which he was for a short period a daily edition. In 1854 he disposed of the Free Press and removed to Elgin Township. In 1875 he bought the Glencoe Transcript, then recently established, and conducted it until October, 1881, when he sold it to his son Arthur, the present publisher.

BABY WASTED TO MERE SKELETON

In Torments a Year and a Half with Terrible Sores on Face and Body —Hands Tied to Stop Scratching and Tearing at Flesh—But

CURE BY CUTICURA COMPLETE AND SPEEDY

"My little son, when about a year and a half old, began to have a few sores cook on his face. I had a physician treat them, but the sores grew worse. Then they began to come on his arms, then on his body. The sores had pretty much run together, and some formed the others. Then I called another physician. Still the sores spread. At the end of about a year and a half of suffering the grew so bad I had to tie his hands in cloths at night to keep him from scratching the sores and tearing the flesh. He got to be a mere skeleton, and was tormented by them. My husband advised me to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment, for he was his last faith in it that she gave me a small piece of Cuticura Soap to try and a little Cuticura Ointment. I took it home and tried it with faith in it. Within a week I noticed a change for the better. The sores began to dry up. I got a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment and followed the directions for a few weeks, and in two months the sores were all well. His hair grew back and my child was healthy since. He is now strong and healthy, and I can never say enough in favor of your most wonderful remedies my precious child would have died if Cuticura had not stepped in. I used only one cake of Resinol Soap, one box of Resinol Ointment." Mrs. Egbert Sheldon, H. F. D., No. 1, Woodville, Ontario, Canada.

MAGAZINE BLEW UP SIR WILFRID OPPOSES

Gunpowder Explodes At Canton, China, With Fearful Results.

MASSIVE CITY WALL RAZED

Fifteen Hundred Houses Wrecked—Heavy Loss of Life—Hundreds of People Injured — Supposed That Disaster Occurred Through Man Smoking — Historical Pagoda Escapes—21 Bodies Found.

Hong Kong, May 4.—Great destruction of life and property was caused on Saturday afternoon by the explosion of a gunpowder magazine. Twenty-one bodies have already been recovered from the ruins. Hundreds of others were injured. Fifteen buildings were razed, and over a hundred others were wrecked.

A section, two hundred feet long, of the massive city wall, was thrown down. The historical pagoda of Canton escaped with slight injuries. The officials and staffs of the hospitals are doing their best to succor the sufferers. In the Shamian suburb, where foreigners live, a terrific shock, caused by the explosion, was felt, but the residents were unhurt.

Some idea of the force of the explosion may be gathered from the fact that the roofs of houses a mile distant were blown off.

A number of important Chinese and foreign commercial establishments were demolished.

The bodies recovered from the ruins near the magazine were shockingly mutilated. Many corpses of men and women were found headless.

The officer in charge of the magazine was wounded in the head, and the body was recovered a pipe was found clinched in his teeth. This fact suggests the possible cause of the explosion.

The financial losses are enormous.

Guatemala Sorry For Having Cast Insinuations.

Mexico City, May 4.—Guatemala has apologized to the Mexican Government for insinuating that the Mexican legation at Guatemala City was harboring the men who are suspected of attempting to assassinate President Cabrera of Guatemala last Monday morning.

Minister of Foreign Affairs Mariscal received this information late yesterday in a cable despatch from President Gaebon, now at Guatemala City. The President is now closed to the satisfaction of the Mexican Government.

The question of extradition of Jose Kama, charged with complicity in the assassination of President Cabrera of Guatemala Manuel Barrillas, while the latter was under the protection of the Mexican flag, is still pending.

Want Municipal Lighting.

Brockville, May 6—Municipal lighting was a victory in Potsdam, the people of that village voting $3,500 to complete a municipal lighting plant. A proposition was also carried authorizing a bond issue for the establishing of a municipal lighting system at a cost not to exceed $22,000.

STRATHCONA A DUKE?

King Edward May Confer Dukedom On High Commissioner.

Montreal, May 6.—The statement was being the round of political circles on Saturday to the effect that His Majesty King Edward VII would, in the near futuyre, confer a dukedom upon Donald A. Smith, commissioner, Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, who will naturally resign the office of Canadian high commissioner, to be replaced by Sir Frederick Borden, Minister of Militia and Defence.

As Lord Strathcona's great wealth has enabled him to do the honors of the office with a more lavish hand than any possible successor could ever expect to do, it is understood that the Canadian Government have decided to increase the salary attached to the position from $10,000 to $25,000. This, it is held, while not putting the high commissioner on the same footing as his predecessor, will at least enable him to discharge the social duties of the position in a manner that will be creditable to Canada, following the footsteps of so distinguished an official. Lord Strathcona had proved himself to be.

SUFFOCATED BY GAS.

Three Men Found Dead In Bed With Gas Jet Open.

Montreal, May 4.—When the inmates of a boarding house kept by Mrs. Ryan, 242 St. James street, awoke yesterday morning, three of their boarders were found to be missing, and as they did not put in an appearance at the usual time, a search was made, and the bodies of the men were found in their beds, they having with his parents, left escaped the gas pipe having been left open. The names of the men, all of whom are working men, are Brindle, McGown and McGillick.

WILL BE TRANSLATED.

Sells His Stock and Leaves Reward.

Great Falls, Mont., May 6.—Believing that the end of the world will come within a few years, and that he with a handful of followers will be translated to heaven, A. W. Stanton, a prominent stockman of this city, has disposed of all his property, valued at several thousand dollars, to the first bidder for $150 and taking up his horse and a rented house, is calmly awaiting the end.

Stanton's followers, eight in number, disposed of their possessions in a similar manner and are with him.

WANTED TO LYNCH NEGRO.

Charged With Criminal Assault On 16-Year-Old Girl.

Calgary, Alta., May 4.—Thomas Rife, a big negro, was arrested here Saturday morning on a charge of criminal assault on a little German girl, ten year old. Rife is about 27 years old.

There was some talk of lynching, but the negro who had fled up the party said he could not find enough Americans to have a lynch.

Big Blaze In Kansas.

Kansas City, May 6.—Fire Saturday night destroyed the five-storey building of the Goldstands Powell Hat co. 922 Broadway, causing $220,000 damage.

Remanded for Eight Days.

Welland, Ont., May 4.—Harry Bartle of Syracuse, was arrested at Niagara Falls, on a charge of perjury, and was brought here Saturday afternoon, and was remanded for eight days.

PREMIERS REVIEW FLEET

Will Not Adopt Scheme Which Would Dislocate Tariff.

Colonial Visitors See "Dreadnought" —Finish of Preference Debate—Australia Resentful — Proposed Defence Fund Frowned Upon—Foreign Goods—Mr. Balfour Favors Preference—Would Accept.

London, May 4.—The concluding part of the precis of the debate at Thursday's conference session was issued yesterday. Sir William Lyne of New South Wales regretted Mr. Asquith's statement, because he did not regard it as quite fair to treat the short tariff offered by Australia, and which was a beginning only, as the result of the preference movement there. The people of Australia resented the idea that they, the kith of the Motherland, should be treated on the same footing as foreigners. There was a margin on the imports of foodstuffs on which the colonies could be assured, with the result that an additional revenue would be obtained at the expense of the foreigner and not the consumer. He contended that free trade must not be accepted as an inherited dogma. He asked also why there should be a special consideration for Australian wines.

Imperial Defence Fund.

Dr. Smart warmly supported Dr. Jameson and Mr. Deakin. He referred to favorable terms by Hon. J. H. Hofmeyer's proposal for a defence fund created by means of duties on foreign goods entering any port in the Empire.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier opposed this principle, pointing out that its adoption would dislocate the Canadian tariff, which had costs months of labor to arrange.

Sir Joseph Ward also hesitated to accept it.

The conference meets again on Monday.

Balfour Favors Preference.

Mr. Arthur Balfour, speaking at Albert Hall, said he was sorry he could see anything to which any free trader could take objection in the proposal the united Empire. The attitude of the Imperial Government was one of pure folly. How long would it be possible for Canada to remain open to the unrestricted trade of a foreign Country on favorable terms, when the Mother Country insisted upon returning an unfavorable answer to her suggestion. He could not bear to accept the offers of other countries, like Germany and Italy. However, he could not doubt for one moment that the policy of preference which he had been fighting advocated would ultimately be the policy adopted by the country. (Loud cheers.) They had been reinforced in the last few weeks by a new emphasis as many leaders have impressed the dead and blind. The spirit and actions of the Government of a single Empire must complete the Empire and lessen its force and strength.

PREMIERS SEE DREADNOUGHT.

World's Greatest Battleship Duly Inspected by Colonial Visitors.

Portsmouth, England, May 4.—The Colonial Premiers were all brought together yesterday at the Royal Victoria, to get a glimpse of the Admiralty's navy. Ten battleships including the Dreadnought, a score of cruisers, and a flotilla of destroyers, all belonging to the home fleet, anchored in these waters, were reviewed by the visiting statesmen. They were especially interested in the newest battleship, the Dreadnought, the official program of the day's proceedings says:

"She has satisfied her creators and exceeded all anticipations. When 40 per cent. of her guns were first fired together, with a total energy of 345,700 foot tons, some cups and saucers were broken. All else withstood the shock of the concussion, and the difficult problem of preventing the blast of one gun from interfering with that of another was found to have been satisfactorily solved."

Baby Murdered.

Douglas, Man., May 6.—The body of a small child was found near the village of Douglas, Man., yesterday, and circumstances would seem that it had been thrown from a passing train and killed.

New Three-Cent Rate.

Ottawa, May 4.—The new three-cent passenger rates of the Grand Trunk Railway will go into effect on May 15. The C. P. R. has not yet filed its rates with the Railway Commission. The Canadian Northern and some of the other lines are opposing the reduction in rates.

Two Americans Suspected.

Guatemala City, Guatemala, May 4.—Among the persons arrested on suspicion of having been connected with the assassination of President Barrillas Estrada Cabrera, April 29, are two American named Cooke and Wilkinson, a railroad contractor.

THE FIELD OF SPORT

What is Occurring in the Town and District, and Sporting Circles Generally.

GET SCORE CARDS FREE AT OFFICE OF THE POST.

With the next approach of the baseball season, The Post is preparing to publish the scores by innings, together with batteries, umpire and features of every amateur game played in Lindsay and Victoria County, if procurable. To facilitate the keeping of a correct record of the scores, etc. The Post will have on hand in the course of a few days, japanese baseball score cards for the purpose of correctly keeping the score. The schedule of the town leagues, both junior and senior, will also be printed on the card. Scores must be sent in on the day on which the games are played. They must be mailed to the sporting editor, or left in the main office, thus assuring their publication the following issue. Be sure that the scores are absolutely correct, with names properly spelled, and written clean and correctly totalled.

Many lightening cricket, lacrosse and other games occur in this vicinity during the summer, and if the secretary or captain will forward the name of three members of the teams, the score, features, etc., will be published. It is of the utmost importance, however, to have the score authentic. Any club whose secretary is found to have furnished a misleading score will thereafter be refused mention in The Post sporting column.

BASEBALL.

A BASEBALL TRAGEDY

New York, May 1—"Come on, Adel Throw your ball him at the plate!" yelled eight excited little boys to ten-year-old George Alvin right field, as the baseball team at a critical moment in a close game they were playing, left Lexington on One Hundred and Twentieth street.

But the ball was never thrown, and though the runner encircled the bases for the winning tally was never counted, for the little player was dying on the hard cement floor of the New York Central Railroad.

He had climbed up after the long hit, and while running eagerly for the ball had been struck by a shuttle train. He died almost immediately.

THEIR PET NAMES

Toronto "Maple Leafs," Montreal "Birds," Buffalo "Bisons," Baltimore "Orioles," Rochester "Bronchos," Newark "Sailors" Providence "Grays" Jersey City "Skeeters."

MONTREAL WON

Buffalo received a rude rebuff at Montreal. "Doc" Newton, the shifty Westsoutpaw was a puzzle to the Bisons, and handed them a good egg. Sept. Ward Manager Buffalo, knew beforehand he received for Newton.

The attention of Town Leaguers is called to the following rules in The league is governed by the Spalding rules.

Rule 62—Under no circumstances shall a captain or player dispute the decisions of the umpire in a game and decision on a play.

Rule 78—The coach will be restricted to coaching the baserunner entirely and shall not address remarks except to the baserunner, and then only in words of assistance and direction in running bases.....not more than two coachers who must be players in the uniform of the team.

at bat shall be allowed to occupy the space between the players' and coachers' boxes, one near first and the other near third base to coach the baserunner.

Rule 54, sec. 1—A batsman is entitled to a base if interfered with by the catcher in striking at a pitched ball.

THE IRON MEN

The Sylvester ball team made a hard try for the pennant last year, and are coming out stronger this over this season. The week point, fortnightly, was in the hitting department. This year Manager Wetherspin has secured Workman and Perkins, who are capable of breaking up a game at any time. Their battery will be their chief reliance. Manager The fielders are nothing exceptional.

FOR THE FANS

Manager Lapkin, of the Cleveland Americans, has to work out a daily parade of which pitcher to use.

Roy Taren is smaller likely fielder to pitcher. He is a big fellow, and pitches Cleveland. He relies on about breaking curves.

"Bucky" Freeman has been purchased from the Washington club by the Cincinnati club.

Mal. Kittredge talked back to Umpire Cusack and was put out of the game at Rochester.

Mike Cantillon of the Minneapolis club has been suspended for three days for assaulting Mr. Hickey president of the American Association.

Tip O'Neill, the ex-White Sox, has been signed by Capt. Dundon, of the Minneapolis club, for manoeuvring and indifferent playing.

Atten once a poor fielding pitcher, has improved greatly in this respect. He is pulling down hard hit grounders. Jack Willis says.

It looks as if Joe Yeager will be a fixture at second base for the St. Louis Browns, and he promises to be clever game at shortstop for Montreal.

Rudolph, the young Fordham College southpaw is expected to develop a clever sixth assistant for Manager Reilly's supervisors. He has mysterious spit ball among his list of delivery.

"Cubs, in a walk," seems to be a good tip in the National League race. The Chicago team will be tested again with the Chicago and New York bunch in a class by themselves.

In the first seven games, Cy. Seymour of the New York National stars, made one home run, two triples, three doubles and four singles, for twenty-one bases on eleven hits. That is batting 291, which is going some.

Sunday ball has become popular in Toronto and vicinity. The public have learned that games are being pulled off on Sundays at Buffalo, Detroit, Pittsburg, and will take steps to stop the practice.

J. Lackey, of last year's St. Mary's team, and Sam Smith, of this the B. U. team last season, will at the pitchers box will pat them over the mantle against Sticky Butler's Grays on May 24th. Boys, your work is cut out for you.

Kissinger, of Buffalo got his bump in Montreal, when he made a pretty opening on him in the ninth. The Bisons lost the game to the Orioles in Toronto, Score 7-6. Toney's unlucky catch was the fatal error.

Connie Mack has suspended Shakoff (Wild) for the balance of the season for the rules of the club which of this date. There was a time when Connie would work his head off to keep "Rube" in the game, no matter what he did between times. How the mighty have fallen.

Pat Powers certainly framed up a hard game for Rochester to go against when he arranged for the Rochester two Canadian teams for the first eastern games of the season. Toronto proved much faster and stronger than the Rochester—Rochester Union and Athletics.

Buffalo Express: The former Red captain certainly has gathered a fine bunch of balls that can pitch. National game right up to the mangle. Toronto has one of the best infields in the circuit, while the outfield is now to be secured at by daylight. Excellent baseball is being played thus early in the season, and no club is showing up stronger than the visitors from Toronto.

They are trying to pass a law over in Michigan by legislate Sunday ball. The measure has already passed the lower house, and unless it is blocked in the upper chamber, the young men of Detroit will be going out to see ball games on Sunday afternoons instead of hanging around the hing doors of saloons.

The line-up of the city nine that will meet Wolf Commanders sixty one May 24 is to hand and look strong on paper. With a double header pitching staff and the great and only Jack Willis as catcher, said to be the best assistant in Toronto. Pitchers Kennedy and Wolf get away so many steals to the second sack. But Southpaw Artie says we will bring them out so far that the catcher will reach first. There won't be any throws to 2nd.

The recent attempt of the New York Americans to score runners from second and third on the steals trick proved a disappointment to the fans. Chief of the Chicagos, scored from second on a bunt in 1905. Without pausing to explain that a bunt does not necessarily mean a sacrifice, it may be pointed out that the play of bunting in two and no one on base was worked by Yale against Princeton in early May. Chief and bunt came in on the play—which is at most twelve years old, and may be more.

Frank Chance is regarded by veteran ball players as one of the greatest men in the game to pitch 1-2. Of thousands of bases on balls he works a pitcher for and the number of times he draws his base without being hit by a pitched ball is a matter of record. The leader of the Cubs has played in fourteen of the fifteen games with the team in season, and he has been sent to the bench on seven occasions, and has been hit by pitched balls five times. It looks from one to a year's rest for Chance if he plays all through the season. Manager Selee will be sorry to find out whether Chance has been tripped by a pitched ball.

LACROSSE

The following is the final grouping of the intermediate teams:

No. 10—Peterboro, Tuhgeon, Newmarket, Aurora, Chesley, Beaverton, Bradford, Young Toronto, North Toronto, Vernon, Thornhill.

No. 11—Simmcocks, Toronto Junction, Young Cumbrian of Woodbridge, Excelsiors, Brampton, Dufferin A. C. Orangeville, Mimlands and Toronto Convenor, T. L. W. Tegart, Secretary Toronto.

No. 12—Aberdeens, of Markdale, Thistles of Dundalk, Dundalk, Lions of Shelbourne, Flesherton, Convenor, Henry Madill, Mark of Dundalk.

No. 13—Markham, Black Knights, Cummington, Uxbridge, Lindsay, Convener, Alfred Wilson, Street of Uxbridge.

No. 14—Madoc, Trenton, Campbellford, Havelock, Convener, W. H. Wallace, Street at Madoc.

The Peterborough Shamrocks, intermediate team, have placed in the lacrosse group:

No. 8—Cleveon II, Uxbridge, II, Bowmanville, Lindsay, Millbrook, Cavan, Orono, Oshawa, Port Hope, Convener, H. B. Clemes, Metal, of Lindsay.

Captain Bobby Tringle of the touring Cups, in a letter home to a friend in Ottawa, says the gamos in England are very far behind in order, being far from the love fanatic Scot. Lacrosse is played in Ireland. Early in the second game Tegler and Tuft, Shamrock, left the game, moved my way into a seat beside the bench of a gentleman, who proved to be the timekeeper's zong. At this point of the sporting editor was a stenographer, who was supposed to be word of mouth, at the same time taking notes from the lips of the story proper. The game was 1-2 of an hour, and he was worked hard because his feet were cold. He blew noses in his handkerchief his face on the board wall beneath the ring and snored loud.

"Holy mortal to know betterthan to board up the bottom of the ring the way you did, Tegler, and you ought to be left open underneaththe platform. Tuft, you bonehead.

"Why?" I questioned.

"Because the referee sneak there got sore on the referee and made a complaint where could the newspaper messiede?"

Brandon curlers enjoyed a game saturday morning, and the same evening the Brandon Free Press says, "Curlers played a lively game yesterday."

Stationary Engineers' Certificates.

The legislature of Ontario at its recent session passed an act respecting stationary engineers. All other engineers and employers are alike interested. Briefly stated, its provisions are that after the 1st day of July, 1908, no engineer will be allowed to operate or have charge of a stationary engine of 50 horse power or upwards who does not hold a government certificate. There are three classes of certificates to whom certificates will be granted without further examination, or undergo an examination first, those who have had 5 years' practical experience to date, or which the Act was passed) held certificates of competency under the old system of stationary engineers in Ontario (second class of certificates), second, engineers who on the date were in charge of a plant of 20 horse power or more, and third, engineers who had charge of a plant in the Province. Those who do not come under these, have to pass the examinations which will be conducted by the Board of Examiners. Those interested may obtain a copy of the Act application forms for certificates by addressing the Secretary, Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

Mecca is the centre of attraction of prominent wrestlers, and practically all of the big matches are arranged in that city. This includes Hackenschmidt, the Russian Lion, Jenkins, the Yankee, Jennings, Yankee Rogers, Rafting, Sicura, and others of repute.

BEELL WON FROM PERRELLI

The "Fighting Italian" swadowned here last night by Jack Beell in 12 minutes, by Beell, the Yanoke wrestler of Montreal. Perrelli, the Italian, led the first fall by clever work, evading a crope by Beell. He had the big fellow's momentum to assist him in doing so. The last fall was gained with a half Nelson and a waist hold.

TROTTING.

The black mare Miss Paisley, having record 2.24 3-4, owned by Harry Cook of Trenton, has been sold to a trotting stable in Kentucky. Miss Paisley is a sister to the new gait. It shows to one three year, it will have to be to one half hands as Cook's last application for reinstatement was turned down by the Board of Appeals.

Peterboro Review: Wm. McLaughlin, the well known Lindsay horseman, who is training a string of fast horses at the Agricultural Park, has made a handsome offer to Mr. Chas. Martin, of this city, to secure the Alerf for this season's trotting at the Michigan circuit and at other racing meets in Ontario. It is said in his letter Mr. McLaughlin states that he is willing to pay the price Tim Alerf's mark from 2.13 1-4 to 2.05. He has already purchased one for to Mr. Martin for the use of Tim Alerf.

Mr. W. H. Simpson has a likely looking stepper in the Lady Lee Pensopsly, Nev., on New Year's Day, in the April Everybody's, Rex Beach, says.

"Huddled in a hollow square close on against the ring were the newspaper men, fashionably dressed and sleepy, their breaths like steam, their yoke and pockets bulging, and they moved my way into a seat beside the bench of a gentleman, who proved to be the timekeeper's zong. MERCHANTS ARE WORRIED.

FORCED TO PAY FOR ADVERTISING SCHEMES OF NO VALUE.

Appeals Made for Charity—Business Men Tired of Constant Contributions.

(Toronto Mail and Empire)

On checking over the various small sums paid here and there for advertisements in programmes, bazaar books, church, school, and social announcements of various kinds, the average Toronto business man finds that he has spent a sum sufficient to have paid for a year's contract for real advertising in a really good daily newspaper, where the actual returns are sure to be profitable.

Why does he do it?

For charity's sake.

He belongs to a church. He and his family attend regularly and contribute their fair share to the church revenue. A concert is projected, programmes are required. This committee or that wants a little money to pay for the printing, and perhaps a little over. They check over the list of the business men of their congregation—and there he is. They call. It's only $2.50 for a page. Time is valuable, and right. Put me down for a page. Miss ——— will write out something to put in it." He knows he can't expect one cent of return, so copy is really a matter of no importance. How can he expect it?

His lodge, his regiment, his favorite charity, all get after him in like manner. The "help along" arguments are logically the same, and in many cases really don't try to prove that any benefit would come to him as a result of the expenditure, but—"help along a good cause."

In cities like Toronto this traffic has come to be so profitable that professional fakirs are making a business of getting out blank programmes, often paying the committee a large commission, in addition to the cost of furnishing the many hundred programmes to return the committee furnishing a lot of names of business men who regarded as legitimate prey.

Forth goes the programme fund, not to talk advertising. Oh, no! That's not his best card, and he knows it. He talks of Charity "musical" to "help along." There are tears in his voice as he pathetically tells of the "good cause." They are trying to make the entertainment a great success. The committee asks him to see Mr. Merchant, and he says he couldn't please aid them by paying for the blank page. Meanwhile the programme is here promoted.

Now, the merchant is tired listening that while he may not be doing a good actions of business, he is at least assisting the finances of some worthy institution. In many cases he is robbed of at $10 every week in the treasury of that organization. He has programmes fitted to his desk.

It a man ever allows his name to be put on one of these programmes, he knows he is sure to be bombarded at the same time by "friends."

Their name is legion, theatre programmes, Church concert programmes, Mikey Hall concert programmes, Five Knots programmes, Society Show programmes, Dog Show programmes, Woodbine racing programmes, baseball programmes, lacrosse programmes, sporting series programmes and programmes ad nauseam.

In many cities the trading business men have banded together and made a concerted effort to protect the revenue from the many and varied subterfuges from the "friends" who are called upon to contribute from time to time. There is not a city in the country where the business men are not being bombarded in some sort of an agreement, and be money in pocket. Nothing is left in the hands of the solicitors for the many schemes referred to were given to the merchant, and there is a great saving of time before take advantage of the "good cause" fakirs.

That is the cure. Turn all down alike politely and firmly. Make no exceptions.

The business men of Lindsay are specially good value in the schemes above. It is only a short time since a number of them put up from $10 to $25 apiece for one page in a programme for an adult, in a Fifteen Minutes Entertainment, for their mutual benefit. The cards were printed in the form of programmes. The promoter received so much money in advance from the business men, and yet he didn't bother coming back to carry out his promise. The names of other "easy marks" appear on every hotel clerk, card rack, register, and in every office in Lindsay as well as posted on the cool jug for all the hotel clerks to recommend. Not a distinct loss in prestige authorized by the promoter, nor other mediums. Only a small section of the business men have been the victims of the schemes, and the money spent in advertising would buy a space that would be read by thousands exclusively.

When Blubck Was Needed.

(Canadian Courier)

Did you ever notice how they checked up on the Scotchmen? Not luck when they got into real trouble in the cool regions of the West? Not luck to get a Scotchman to be one of the men you would trust; and Sir William proved to be the best man. Sir William was a Scotchman. Sir William was not wasting his time during those arduous and other years, when he was a merchant, in the Department of Labor and working for the good of the Dominion of Canada. It has always seemed to me to be a thousand pities that Sir William was persuaded to leave from the Federal Government. It may be that he was not the man who would not permit him to go through it all the dreadfull ordeal. It is certainly has had enough health to play his part as a member of the government and to exert an influence upon the progressive policy of his party. There are plenty of pretty good departmental men in parliament who would have taken over the post office; but there is not only one Blubck who had the courage, and the daring optimism and the confidence of the people.

..HOUSEFURNISHINGS..

Was there ever a time when new furnishings were more needed than in the spring? When the glaring light of the sun streams into a room, whose every corner is laid bare beneath the scrutinizing gaze, 'tis then the particular housekeeper shudders at the picture presented; old worn and faded carpets, lace curtains, frescoed with a legion of holes, which at this season look so appalling. The good master of the house, if considerate, will know that nothing will so rouse the flagging spirits of a tired wife as a few new articles of housefurnishings.

We have some fine new goods in these lines :—

NEW CAR CAUSES ACCIDENTS

Minor Mishaps on Local Lines Due to Too Rigid Car Frame.

During the past few weeks numerous minor accidents have occurred on the Toronto Railway. J. H. Iles in the vicinity of Goodenham and Lansdowne. Speaking to a Post reporter, Mr. N. A. Ross, traveller, for W. B. Sparling & Co., mentioned these mishaps. "Mr. Hutchinson, good conductor on the B. D. & C." said, Mr. Ross, "informed me that four such mishaps occurred within a short time on his line.

The trouble seems to be that a certain grade of freight car recently secured are fastened rigidly on the trucks, and on account of the rolling roads the vibration of the car compartments jiggle in the trucks, and causing the wheels to jump the rails at times.

Cons Forever.

Ten years ago a farmer put his initials on a dollar bill. The next day he went to the nearest town and spent it with a merchant. Before the year was out he got the dollar back. Four times in six years the dollar passed into his hands, and three times he heard of it in the pockets of his neighbors. The last time he got it back four years ago. He sent it to a mail order house. He found that that dollar had been there, never will. That dollar bill will never stay more robust or real tax for him, will never build or brighten any of the homes of the community. He sent it entirely out of the circle of usefulness to himself and his neighbors. Patronize your local merchant who helps you to keep your taxes, support your schools and churches, and keep a strong hand in times of sickness and trouble.

ILLEGAL FISHING.

Evening Post of May 4th.

Why understand two convictions have been made by the Fishery Inspector for illegal fishing, but no the information was not supplied us for publication, we are informed by a resident in our readers. The way the law stands at present, the Inspector makes the fine and pocks half it, the optional whether he makes it public or not. The Post is as anxious as is the Inspector to have the law enforced out, and we are strongly of the opinion that the publication of the names of the offenders would be a strong deterrent in the case of future offenders.

We wish to work in harmony with the Inspector, and will gladly give him any assistance we can in the enforcement of the law, but we also certainly find fault with him if he continues to withhold information concerning law-breakers that should be made public. Those who persist in illegal fishing of course fully understand that they run the risk of punishment and exposure, and it should not be made easy for them to offend a second time. If the Lindsay Fish and Game Protective Association means business, there must be publicity and no favoritism.

Fined $10 Each.

Evening Post of May 6th.

The first batch of fisheries cases were fined last week for illegal fishing have been disclosed to The Post by Mr. J. M. Macdonald, president of the Lindsay Fish and Game Protective Association, who stated that the delay in handing in the names, complained of in our article on Saturday, was due to the absence of Inspector Jordan. The parties fined were Ackland Windeim, a Lindsay youth, and John Elliott, farmer of Opa. A penalty of $10 was imposed in each case.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The public will remember Lindsay B. Hicks, a barber who was entombed in a mine at Bakerfield, Cal., for seventeen days, and how the world watched the progress of his efforts to rescue him from his living tomb, and in imagination heard him tap upon the pipe which kept him in communication with the outside world. Hicks was a hero for the time being. After his rescue he went into the exhibition business, but he failed to draw, and, accordingly decided he made two attempts at self-destruction, by throwing himself in front of a locomotive. It looks as if a lot of labor and sympathy had been wasted on him.

The Toronto News says "the Conservative party at Ottawa has suffered from something like dry rot since the lightning of 1896", and it adds that the average calibre of Mr. Borden's followers is small and that "has little first-class material out of which to build an effective Opposition. Mr. Foster adds nothing to the claim of the party on the country, and he is more of a burden than a prop. Mr. Monk seems to be too parochial and provincial to be relied upon in emergency, and has exhibited more of the reed than the iron. It would pay Mr. Borden to get up a Diogenes expedition and search out and commandeer some stranger men for the next general election."

OUR ALDERMEN ARE WAXING TALKATIVE

Sat For Four Hours Monday Night and Indulged in Trivialities.

Communications, Petitions and Reports—Several Deputations Heard — $25 Added to the Salary of Caretaker Wilson and a Lecture Thrown in Free—Hot Shot for the Board of Trade.

Monday's session of Council resolves itself into an old-fashioned gossip in its later stages, and adjournment did not take place until 11.35. Its all right to hold one of these old-time sessions once in a while, but as the members and in attendance on Monday found out about the same hour there is cause to fear they may be "getting the habit."

The members present at 7.35, when business was taken up, were Mayor Vrooman, Reeve Begg, Deputy-Reeve Jordan and Aldermen McLean, Eyres and McGough; the others—Aldermen Jackson, Weldon, W. Jordan and Davitt, made their appearance before the minutes of the last regular and special meetings had been read and confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From C. Chittick, resigning duties as fence viewer for Ward 2.

From Jos. Maugher & Son, accepting contract to furnish cement at 1 per bbl.—Filed.

From Hawkes Limited, to the same effect.—Filed.

From Mr. O'Neill and others, asking that a sewer be constructed on Lindsay-st., from Durham-st. south.—Board of Works, to be built on initiative plan.

From Col. Anderson, Ordnance Officer, Kingston, informing Council that he had received instructions to forward two guns, weighing with carriages 1,060 lbs., to Lindsay, and to be responsible for freight and other expenses.—Reeve Begg—They were secured by Col. Hughes for the Victoria Jubilee, I understand."—Laid on table.

From Jas. A. Gillogly, with reference to water lots opposite his dwelling.—Board of Works.

From ex-Chief S. Sevison, protesting against being "dropped" in April. Amount of fines inflicted, $227.11.—Filed.

From Police Commissioners, enclosing extract from minutes of meeting held March 3rd, expressing regret at receiving Chief Nicholson's resignation and pleasing on record their high appreciation of the manner in which he had performed his duties.—Filed.

From Town Superintendent, thanking favorably with reference to new four-inch water main, which was laid in place of Glenelg-st. from Albert to Kent-st.; also approving of new sewer on Kent-st. West, between Glenelg and Glenelg-st., be built outside the line of trees.

Dr. White was the first speaker. He pointed out that three alternatives—the new walk must either be built over the line of the trees, or be placed outside the trees, as requested, or on the space at present occupied by the row of trees. The drain should be laid in the middle of the walk to drain off the surface water, the trees ought to be preserved, if at all possible, and placing the walk on the outside would avoid difficulty and leave a roadway varying from 18 to 20 feet in width. Some of the sidewalks claimed that the road must be 33 feet wide, but that could not be binding, because the Legislature had given Lindsay and a width of only 22 ft. between fences, he said.

Mr. Baker said they did not wish to dictate to the Council—they were merely talking about a matter likely to affect the homes where they hoped to live and die.

Mayor Vrooman, on behalf of the Council, promised that the matter in question would be very carefully considered.

Clerk Knowlson—We have no by-law governing the width of streets.

TOWN ADVERTISING.

A deputation from the Board of Trade, comprising Messrs. R. Kylie and Messrs. R. Ross, W. T. C. Morson, F. F. Loosemore, J. O'Neill, J. M. McGannon and Secretary J. P. Donald, was granted permission to address the Aldermen.

Mr. Donald led off by stating that their object was to obtain a grant of money for the purpose of advertising the town's advantages as a centre for manufacturing—a thing important that the town should, if possible, secure some of the many industries now being established in Canada by American firms anxious to secure the trade of the rapidly growing Northwest. The Board charged only a small membership fee, and therefore had no funds of their own for advertising purposes.

Secretary Donald said the Board believed the Council would vote a grant of $200, against which they would issue cheques. The smallest subsidy, at a trade paper rate, would be the Mowatian Times would cost $25, and as there were a number of such publications even $200 would not go far.

Messrs. O'Reilly, Loosemore and Morson were then called upon to give the proposition, whereupon his Worship promised the Council's favorable consideration.

SUNDRY MATTERS.

Reopener W. Tims was heard relative to a defective drain, and Chairman Ross will have same properly tiled.

Town Solicitor McLaughlin appeared before the Aldermen to recommend the chair of the Hall-keeper, which was the first to be filled since the duties, yet now be proposes to raise his wages and so recommend him for giving dissatisfaction."

Ald. McLean—There's a good deal in what Ald. Jordan says, but I think the trouble has been due to the fact that there never has been a head to look after him. Reeve Begg will do so in future.

Reeve Begg—There always has been a head—the chairman of Town Property—but if it is necessary to go around point out the dirt to the caretaker and say "go there and clean them," it's a curious state of affairs. If Wilson would carry out his work he might be worth it, but he isn't."

Mayor Vrooman—Reeve Begg has given his mind away—he says if Wilson would do the work it would be worth $200. He has to come here and ring this bell at 7, 8.45 and 12 o'clock, 2, 6 and 9 o'clock, and these duties interfere with any others he may have to perform. If the Clerk's office has not been kept clean it is the Clerk's fault—he was satisfied to do it a thirty dollar, he said, as, I recollect, when asked."

Deputy-Reeve Jordan—"A laborer is worthy of his hire." If I were appointed Chairman of Town Property I would tell the people to go somewhere, if they had to be a cow getting fat a day."

Ald. W. Jordan—"Well, he's not compelled to take it."

Ald. McGough—"If Wilson doesn't do his work, you can't blame him. I think there's been a lot of grumbling."

Reeve Begg—"Any grumbling there for I'll not spend all my time waiting on Wilson."

Ald. Rea—"Wilson now undertakes to clean the office, the halls, the rooms, black the stoves, and even wash the floors."

On a vote being taken the $25 increase was unanimously carried.

Medical Health Officer $150

Town Physician 100

Ald. Jordan said he sought like some information respecting the duties of medical officer of the town of Ops, instead of being a waste of free work, and few of those who go to the trouble physician. He thought he knew something.

Mayor Vrooman said that while not feeling deeply concerned one way or another, it is a matter regarding the appointment of a town physician, enabled the other medical men to provide a plan of division of labor under it. He believed Dr. Herriman carried all he got out of the town, and more, because while absent at Manitoulin Island, he had his office attended to his duties and had a great deal of calls for free medical attendance.

Ald. Jordan—"Mariposa pays only $100, and the occupant of the position has to travel the length and breadth of the township."

Ald. McGough—"I think the expired term is unreasonable."

Reeve Begg—"To my mind the only objection that I have to Herriman, is to bunch all his bad accounts at the end of the year."

Ald. Eyres—"We've been dispensing charity—food, fuel, etc.—according to an old schedule, and it should be the same in regard to medical aid. We've been kind to the poor (?) long enough, and if we delegate the cost of the medical aid to the Board, we will be receiving very little money for business."

Ald. Rea agreed with the previous speaker; the salary was too high, and he was in favor of the new method.

Reeve Begg—"We pay a lot of money for medical inspection."

Mayor Vrooman—"That is true, but we get a lot of good (?) work done by the town physician could be treated, and should be treated, as a lot of an infirmary in connection."

The Town Clerk then proposed.

Truant officer $50

Reeve Begg—"How was it that the Police Commissioners made their appointment after Council had acted?"

Mayor Vrooman—"I don't know, but then know they had the power to make it. The appointment of Mr. Sharpe was very strongly recommended."

Reeve Begg led up to another rather fresh grievance, and asked what steps Caretaker Wilson, whose duty it is to keep the market closets in a clean condition, had taken to assemble to Market Clerk Callaghan the necessary lime and chloride of lime. The suggestion was adopted.

Four petitions were received and reported the by-laws read with amendments, and the third reading was given in due form.

HE WANTS THINGS.

On motion of Reeve Begg Dogue was heard. He asked that a crossing be put in opposite his residence on the south side of Kent-st. Representations to the and others be granted permission to erect with a flower bed at the intersection of Lindsay and Kent streets, and that an electric be placed at the intersection of Lindsay-st. two first mentioned requests were granted.

On motion the 10.30 rule was temporarily suspended.

THE ADVERTISING GRANT.

Mayor Vrooman—"We must deal with the Board of Trade's request for a special grant of $200 to-night."

Ald. Eyres—"If my business fell in to bad shape and I saw failure ahead in six months I would be inclined to extensively in the firm belief that I would tide over the trouble in a short time and so escape the Sheriff.

I am in favor of giving the Board a grant of a certain amount in order that they may do what they can to attract as much grist to our mill as possible. A motion to set aside a sum now for 1908 was lost, the amendment by Ald. McGough, who took exception to the "Post" for its lack of progress, no doubt a result of adverting, the Board's work, the electric power, unsurpassed transportation facilities, and other local advantages, and is only excelled by Petrolia in the matter of quantity of power available. It pays to advertise.

Ald. Weldon suggested that $100 be set aside as a start.

The members present were carried away by the idea of giving to benefit the town, and should be liberally rewarded for their work, seconded the $100 offer.

Reeve Begg, seconded by Ald. W. Jordan, moved an amendment that the matter be referred to the Finance committee, but neither was supporters, and the original motion was adopted.

Deputy-Reeve Jordan, Ald. McLean, and Ald. Weldon objected to the payment of town money for the benefit of the Board of Trade, Mowatian Times, the trade paper mentioned by Secretary Donald, of the Board of Trade, and to guard against imposition Ald. Eyres will confer with the Board of Trade regarding the mediums to be patronized.

Reeve Begg then proceeded to hand a few stiff ones before the Board of Trade's bell. "If we do spend a few hundreds in advertising," said he, "and succeed in attracting an industry or two, why could not members of the Board offer to "bleed" them and so drive them away? It has been done before."

The Aldermen flagged, and when they received their senses they adjourned at the clock sand suggested an adjournment before work rose. The hint was taken, and a windy session was brought to a close.

HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE

A Forgery Charge and a Township Drainage Dispute.

The spring sittings of the High Court of Justice before Mr. Justice Riddell, finished on Tuesday. There were two cases, Bowins vs. the Township of Eldon, and Smith against the Township of Eldon.

Bowins vs. the Home Bank. It appeared that one, Ernest Bowins, had forged the names of several signers to notes discounted at the Home Bank at Cannington. When these were discovered to be forgeries, proceedings were brought against the prisoner, Robert Bowins, a brother of Ernest Bowins, to substitute his own name for that of the signer upon which he did. Two days after he repeated the forging done so and handed the notes he returned. This was reported to the Lindsay Police and brought this action to compel them to return the money the Lindsay reserved judgment. F. A. McDiarmid and C. E. Weeks, for the plaintiff; F. Aylesworth, Toronto, for the defendants.

Smith vs. Eldon—In this case it appeared that the Township of Eldon, in repairing the highway, adjoining the quarter line of the township, had opened a ditch on the north side of the quarter line, the effect of which was to divert the water from the plaintiff's land into the township of Thorah. The ditch was dug through a marshy ground, and the floods brought a lot of sand and deposited it on the plaintiff's land, for damages for which the plaintiff sued. The defendants contended that the remedy of the plaintiff was by arbitration under the Drainage Act, and not by action, and further, that Smith was not damaged to the extent, and that there was no power in the township to make the drainage, remedy owing to their inability to start proceedings under the Drainage Act. Judgment was given for the Thos. Stewart and M. H. Roach, Beaverton, for the plaintiff; F. A. McDiarmid and C. E. Weeks for the defendant township.

COUNTY TO MAINTAIN BRIDGES.

Case of Rosedale Bridge Will be Decided by County Council.

Judgment was given by Mr. Justice Holmes in the Township of Ops, by his Honor Judge Harding in the last of the County Bridge cases, which have come up for trial.

In the Township of Ops vs. the County of Victoria, concerning the Rosedale or Cambridge bridge, which is the cemetery. This bridge was declared a County bridge, and to be maintained and kept in repair by the County and the Township of Ops ordered to pay one-third of the cost of maintenance. Mr. Tilt, Q.C., for the Township; Mr. E. A. McPherson for the County.

In Fenelon vs. Victoria the bridge at Fenelon Falls, crossing the Scugog river was declared to be a County bridge, and the township was relieved of all liability in connection therewith. In regard to the bridge crossing Mariposa River, which was declared to be a County bridge to be maintained and kept in repair by the County and the Township of Fenelon was ordered to pay twenty-five and two-thirds per cent. of the moneys expended by the County. Mr. J. J. Laughlin, K. C., for the township; Mr. E. A. McPherson, for the County.

In the Township of Bexley vs. the County of Victoria, the bridge crossing the mill pond in the village of Omemee was declared to be a County bridge to be maintained and kept in repair by the County, and the Township of Bexley was ordered to pay ten per cent. of the moneys paid by the County for maintenance and repair. K. B. McLaughlin, K. C., for the township; F. A. McDiarmid for the County.

It was understood that there would be no appeal by the County in the case of the Omemee bridge, on the ground that the swing portion made it difficult for the Government to fix the length of the bridge so that it would be a County bridge or not, and the question of appeal, we understand, will be considered by the County Council at their June session.

Bartenders' Licenses.

The following have paid their license fee of $2 and will be entitled to tend bar in hotels:—Thomas John Gannon, John Rathwell, Thos Kylie, Thos. Kylie, Welsh, John Foquette, Ralph Weyanoth, Albert Ward, Wm. Mulvaney, A. A. Bull, Wm. Pearce. These transfers are allowable during the year.

Men are Queer.

Wouldn't there be a roar when men went home for their wives if they had to climb up on a high stool in front of a table on which there was a clock and cash register and that fashion? Yet, says the Buffalo (Kan.) Messenger, a majority of our wives are in the habit of having to eat will pick out the highest stool in preference to a comfortable chair and a clock-covered table. A man will borrow a chew of tobacco, and then climb up on a stool high enough to the plug right where the clerk man has gnawed out a chew. Offer to bring a piece of the tobacco from which the wife or one of the children has taken a bite, and they would holler their heads off. At home such a fellow will not drink out of a glass or cup from which one of the family has taken a bite, and they would back stalk of a dirty old livery barn, pull out a bottle, and he will stick the neck of the bottle half way down his throat in order to get a swig of whisky. A half dozen other fellows had the neck of the same bottle in their mouths.

Ancient Armies.

Ten thousand horse and 100,000 foot fell on the total field of Issus. The army of Artaxerxes, before the battle of Cunaxa, amounted to about 1,200,000.

An army of Cambyses 50,000 strong, was buried in the desert sands of Africa by a south wind.

About time after the taking of Babylon the forces of Cyrus numbered 600,000 foot, 120,000 horse and 2,000 chariots armed with scythes.

Ninus, the Assyrian king, about 220 B. C., led against the Bactrians the army, consisting of 1,700,000 foot soldiers, 200,000 horse and 18,000 chariots armed with scythes.

When Xerxes arrived at Thermopylae his land and sea forces amounted to 2,641,610, exclusive of servants, cessuals, women, waiters, etc., in all numbering 5,283,220. Sa way Diodorus, Plutarch and Herodotus.

OBITUARY.

Henry Graham, Kinmount.

Bob. Independent.—One of the best known and most respected men in the counties of North Victoria and Haliburton, passed away on April 18th, in the person of Mr. Henry Graham, of Kinmount, after an illness of over seven months. Mr. Graham was born in Quebec over 75 years ago and moved with his parents to Smith township, where he grew up to manhood. He lived in Peterboro, Fenelon Falls and Bobcaygeon, moving with his family to Kinmount over thirty years ago. He was a merchant, and with the exception of two years spent in Toronto about 1890, he kept a general store here ever since. For years he ran the Kinmount creamery was started.

Mr. Graham was a Baptist and held the office of deacon and was always cheerful delegate to attend Baptist conventions at Toronto, Montreal and other places. By his zeal and energy a Baptist church was built here. Although a staunch Baptist he was known for his liberality and hospitality to other denominations. Members of other churches moving here were cordially entertained until settled in their own homes. He was very fond of music and took a leading part in the church; he also helped the Presbyterian choir and the Presbyterians felt the deepest regret and sorrow when sickness prevented him from attending church services.

His politics were Liberal and while health permitted was chairman and convener of Liberal meetings and worked hard for the Liberal cause. In all his dealings he was upright and honorable. He was communicant of the parish of Kinmount for 25 years.

The funeral on Saturday afternoon April 20th, was largely attended by relatives and friends in Toronto, Peterboro, Lindsay, Bobcaygeon, Fenelon Falls and Minden. The bearers were the sons, nephews and cousins of deceased. The body was carried from his late home to the cemetery, a distance of half a mile, by three sets of bearers, all being leading members of any secret order, lodge or court; representatives from the Orange lodge, Masons, C.O.F., I.O.F. and True Blues attended the service, bearing the rod for each fraternity while the funeral procession passed between two lines, and then passed the procession.

The funeral service was held at the house, led by the pastor, Rev. T. Frame, assisted by Rev. Gossip, rector of Fenelon Falls Baptist church and Rev. Cummer, Church of England minister, formerly of Lindsay. A memorial service was held on Sunday evening when the pastor, Rev. T. Frame preached from, Rev. 14th chap. 13 verse.

Deceased leaves a widow, who was Miss Elizabeth Taylor (sister of the late Thos. Taylor, of Bobcaygeon), and six children, (Mrs. Kelly, of Lindsay, and Messrs. J. Harry T., Miss Graham, Miss Annie, Mrs. A. Morrison, all of Kinmount.

Only a few of us Left.
(Toronto Star.)

After thinking it over, Premier Whitney has apparently decided to let the present cabinet remain in the employ of the Province, but they will please speak softly.

INTERESTING PARAGRAPHS

GATHERED BY POST REPORTERS ON THEIR DAILY ROUNDS

What is Happening in Town and the Country About Us.

—Stand up for the old town—it's a good one.

—Are you burning your ashes or sending them to the town yard.

—Hot! blame! The foot if you take them off and get a cool in the head.

—Keep off the grass, ye shortcutters, or Chief Vincent will get you sure.

—The Hurley Shoe Sale is still in progress. All lines selling at and below cost.—adv.

—Although one swallow does not make a summer, we know that just one frog can make a spring.

—No Maude, it's never safe to send them until after the 24th of May, and then only out of a time.

—The Hurley Shoe Sale is still in progress. All lines selling at and below cost.—adv.

—The bloom is somewhat off the Easter lily, but there is a lot of wear to be got out of it yet.

—Mr. Jas. Kilgour, of Peterboro, has been appointed organist for the Cambridge-st. Methodist church.

—A little paint on that house of yours would very much improve its appearance, while it would also improve the town. Try it.

Farmers, see our Top Plow Boots—they are worth double the money. At HURLEY'S Shoe Store—adv.

—The town is now issuing notices to citizens asking them to clean up their premises. A very reasonable request. Are you acting on it?

—Mr. Jas. Greenway, at a regular churning recently, manufactured 1,000 pounds of butter. The output was sold in the same day.

—Mr. Wm. Watson, of Fair Oakwood, recently sold to Lindsay Bros. his handsome spoon of grey geldings, for which he realized a good sum.

Farmers, see our Top Plow Boots and save double the money. At HURLEY'S Shoe Store—adv.

—The stretches of road in town are in good condition, and the strip of Williamsat from Kent to Durham-st. is pretty smooth. It is to be hoped more streets like that, and Lindsay-st. York-st. and the rest of Kent have discovered that she can no longer stand the strain of $13,500 a year. Even the rich are feeling the dreadful pinch of the cost of living.

—Mr. Hutton, the new assistant town treasurer, has reconsidered his decision to resign, and the applications received from some good men will be kept on file for future reference.

—An acceptable change is made in the mode of taking oaths—placing the hand on the Bible instead of pressing it to the lips. The peculiar wording of oaths, for face affirmations.

—One man who lived on scraps has died rich. But hundreds of men who had scraps every day and night, may have died poor. The scrap heap theory is not to be depended on as a wealth producer.

—Having carried its case to the foot of the throne and been kicked off the steps, Toronto now appears in a higher province—to wit, Whitney—and wants him to fix the Toronto and Hamilton road.

The straw nail sticks within its hair. "With mind so full of doubt.

Hence it is that man is in a fix.

Though scales are smiling bright and fair.

It does not venture out.

—People who put flower pots on the sills of upstair windows should see that they are properly secured. It would be no worse than a gust of wind or something else to cause one of them to drop on the head of a passer-by.

—Mr. Jas. Brown claims the honor of having been the first to reach Bobcaygeon with a paper. A party went down on Sunday last on board the "Hetta." Members of the party formed back page business of Mitty Flowers.

—Mr. Jas. Brown is a man digging in his yard very slowly, stopping often to rest, you may be sure, and leaning at ease for his wife, but if he is digging like a house afire, scarcely stopping to catch his breath, it is to wager he is digging worms for fish bait.

—The Licence Commissioners of Haliburton have been granted the applications of the following: J. A. Clark, Lindsay; Geo. H. Jones, Minden; J. J. Mortimer, Minden; Wm. H. Pickering, Haliburton; Jas. Cochrane parmit to J. W. Roberts, Dorset, and M. A. McKloy, Dorset.

—Lots of people who are after the Indian runner, Longboat, ever since he passed through Toronto his mail has been heavy, and nearly every letter with a stamp on it contains for his autograph. The letters are nearly all from the fair sex, too. Poor, religiously replies to them all, too, but says if his mail increases any more he will get a rubber stamp made.

—Lindsay smart Aleks are warned against the following experiment: Jowsey Bros. have a family halloo at Ogdensburg, N.Y., by an electric shock while he was attempting to steal sugar from the electric wire in the street. With several companions he was returning from a dance, when in a spirit of bravado he lowered a piece of tin into the bare lines and placed his cigar against one of the lines. He received a shock of 2,000 volts.

—Let one mail you free, its present cost is one cent, and Dodd's Nervine, a tonic and nerve restorative, and my book on either Kidneys, Heart, or the Adrenal Glands. Address, Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. Dodd's Nervine for Nervous Heart or Kidneys are merely symptomatic of a nerve starvation. Don't make the common error of treating symptoms and neglecting the cause. Nutriment is treating the result of your ailment, and not the cause. Weak, stomach nerves are starving, and eventually have weak vital organs. Here is where Dr. Shoop's Restorative has made its fame. No other nerve food claims to treat the "inside nerves." Also for blooting, palpitation, sleeplessness and weakness. Dr. Shoop's Restorative, sold by all druggists. Write for my free book now. Dr. Shoop's Restorative sold by all druggists.

—Don't spit on the sidewalk and don't walk on the grass.

—Will the Lord's Day Act train be stalled in an ice cream sleigh?

—If we saw the old we would know that all things work together for good.

—On Saturday last a resident of Fenelon Falls drove to Sturgeon Point in a cutter.

—When you hear a man run down the town he lives in, you needn't bother looking up his pedigree—he's of no account.

—Now that the evenings are growing longer and the weather warmer, you might shoo the cows off the streets a chance to get out.

—Hot! gee, ain't it hot? Roses, and a general broken up appearance are may be explained by the old time weather. Brace clashing in our place.

—Peterboro has now seven branches of strong chartered banks, and the last one of Hamilton, I believe, is five, with a sixth in prospect.

—Inspector Thornbury has his removal from the Dominion terrace, on Wellington, to the house vacant: Is occupied by Mr. J. C. Hay, Regent-st.

—The Eastern offering of St. Mary's congregation, Lindsay, is their beloved pastor, Ven. Archdeacon Gunn, announced to the bloodsore sum of $188.

—It read the Canadian Northern R. R. 50 cents to the passengers who were held up at Humboldt, Sask., for two weeks in a great snow blockade. The Humboldt business lost $4,000 and the Winnipeg one $2,000.

No more with arms upon his breast.

"Pete Johnston rides his wheel with ease.

Along the street on foot he hikes, for now does not go well with bikes.

—Interviewer Examiner.

—It will be of interest to students who purpose writing on the higher grade examinations, to know that this summer to learn that special classes will be held in Lindsay, Peterboro and Toronto, for the purpose of giving the papers to avoid what is called the "catch paper."

—Brave Begg is right on the job attire town part these days, and is having the street sprinkled and plates placed to good advantage. It's a shame that so many good loads were given away when they were so nobly loaded to make the Sewage Agency prosperable.

Do you ever beaten carpet?

Have you ever driven tacks?

Have you ever found the safety-pins, and pocket-knives and tacks?

Have you ever had a dinner

On the cold and stony floor?

If you haven't, then it's certain

That you're not married yet.

—The bay fire team are being employed extensively on the sprinkling waggon at present, the grey team being on the street cleaning work. The probable route of the fire team will be from Fisher's grocery up Kent to the G.T.R. railway crossings. The Kent street sprinkle the balance of the season.

—Orillia News-Letter: The public has reasoned that it is illegal to spear carp. It should not be illegal, on the contrary every effort should be put forth to exterminate the fresh water shark. We owe it to the dispossessed and many more dire from our waters. It was an evil day when it was first introduced into Ontario.

—Piles get quick and certain relief from Dr. Shoop's Pile Ointment. Please note it is made alone for piles, and its action is positive and painless. Itching, blind, bleeding, protruding or blind piles disappear like magic by its use. Large nickel capped glass jars 50 cents. Sold by all druggists.

—Mr. Walter Hoodley, of the north ward, and president of the Pauls church, sustained a painful cut on his foot recently while repairing wright stiches for the church. Having a lawn mower along the sidewalk, he ben down and cut a cut on the blades, with the above result. It is to be hoped the cut will not be so bad as to be unable to be around again.

—Free to sufferers from "catarrhal" and a booklet on colds will be gladly mailed you on request by Dr. Shoop, Racine. Catarrhal Jelly for catarrh. Inventions are little Candy Cold Cures which are sold by druggists, are nothing harmful whatever. Revenue for catarrhal jelly, and Cold Cure tablets—when taken early or at the beginning of a cold, prevent the lodgings, break it up safely and quickly with remarkable success by all dealers.

—The Port Hope assessors, Messrs. J. T. Henwood and J. H. Magill, have completed their work and returned the books to the town clerk. The assessment this year amounts to $1,847,000, an increase on assessment last year was $1,599,317, so this year there is an increase of $248,000. The assessors state that they were instructed to raise the 10 per cent. assessments, but were given the assurance that the rate this year would be lower than last year.

—Belleville Council has passed by-laws authorizing the city treasurer to move buildings to other sites, also authorizing the expenditure of $300 to cover possible damage to sidewalks, crossings or roadways. The end crossing, which was built about 2 years ago, when an east ward dwelling was moved from Bleecker-st. to Queen-st., to the other on a transverse street, has caused some suggests the wisdom of Belleville's plan. The city has recently paid $100 for the loss for the walks.

—Free to our store, please, for a free sample of Dr. Shoop's "Health Coffee." It real coffee disturbs your health, or causes you to have headaches, then try this elegant coffee imitation, made of pure toasted grains, and resembling mocha and Mocha coffee, in taste, aroma and color. It costs no more than an ordinary coffee. You will surely like Health Coffee. Sold by all druggists.

—Peterboro is getting an unenviable reputation for roughness and rowdyism. Last night it was hardly safely the kind embracing discourtesy to ladies. Several incidents of recent date clearly prove this. The latest outrage occurred at a recent date, when two men in a buggy galloped through the city holding captive a young woman who was screaming for help, and which several citizens started in pursuit and rescued the girl coming back. She refused to give information, and the culprits are likely to go unpunished.

WEARY WILLIE'S VIEWS.

A socialist, a socialist, that's what I plan to be.
With lodgings at the Waldorf while I set the pegs out free
With motor cars that do a mile in sixty seconds flat,
In which to run the errands of the pro-letariat;
With private secretaries and a valet at my side,
To help me as I goil to bring about the crash of pride.
Society is to be the bad and things is getting rank;
I want to be a socialist with millions in the bank.
I want to rise at 10 o'clock and shave away till noon.
Per work—I'm never done a stroke—it's man's most precious boon."
And when I've shaved the coupons from a peck o' bonds I'll go
I'll put in all the time that's left to give poor work a show.
There's Happy Jack and Prince Pete—they're often out of one
That work's not divided up the way it orter be.
And I am for a divvy, though the kickers call me crank
I want to be a socialist with millions in the bank.
I want a good summer house to rest in when it's hot.
A bungalow off Lenox or a humble Newport cot.
And when the blamed reporters come, with sly, reluctant grin
I'll tell 'em how poor father made more dough than was his share;
I'll tell 'em how he left the coin to me one tearful day.
And how—not yet, but soon, you know—I'll give it all away.
So when he sobs a sobbing tale I'll give my application blank—
I want to be a socialist with millions in the bank.

—Sycess.

MIGHT.

When you have walked the weary way—
The weary way that leads by moon and star to the end of your day,
You know there waits for you a boon;
You know that on ahead is rest.
For roses drip with twilight dew
And all things seem but for the best
And Night holds out her arms to you.
You know your cares have found release,
That what afers battling you must do
For shown the slopeside shadows drift
And singing breezes falter through
The silence where the hills uplift—
And Night holds out her arms of you.

When Night holds out her arms, it seems
As though she brought each one a crown
A crown of happiness and dreams.
She comes to comforgside and town
With sympathy in her dusky hands
And peoples in her garments, too;
Her mysteriously she comes and stands
And holds her soothing arms to you.
Just so when you are through with strife,
And, all worldweary on your way,
You reach the end of this life
For life is but a little day—
That weary way—you know what you mud.
But it will be fair to your view.
You will be comforted and glad
When Night holds out her arms to you.

ONE OF DRUMMOND'S GEMS.

His eye may never see the blue
Of Ireland's April sky,
His ear may never listen to
The song of lark on high;
But deep within his Irish heart
Are cloisters, dark and dim,
No human hand can wrench apart,
And the lark still sings for him.
We've bowed beneath the chastening
We've had our griefs and pains,
But with Faith we've kept the faith
The Blood is in our veins;
The ancient blood that knows no fear,
The stamp is on us set,
And so, however foes may jeer,
We're Irish yet! We're Irish yet!

Blood Will Tell.

Once again a Canadian comes to the front in an American college and this time a Londoner. It is just announced that Norman S. B. Grays, the Canadian graduate in medical medal at the last year's examinations at Harvard college, has taken the medal in competition for which he is taking a post graduate course in political science.

Gordon Bennett Johnson, son of ex-Mayor Johnson, of Belleville, graduated in 1900 from the Royal Military College, Kingston, with the first prize of a commission in the Royal Engineers of the Imperial Army. Since then he has passed from one important post to another and is now directing the construction of a railway in China.

FOR THE HOUSEKEEPERS.

The odor of sweet peas is so offensive to flies that it will keep them out of the sick room.

Applied quickly the white of an egg will relieve the stinging pain from a burn and prevent inflammation.

Dirt will instantly disappear from white hair brushes if rubbed with a woollen rag dampened in gasoline is rubbed over the places.

Add some milk to the water with which you wash palms. This causes them to shine.

To bleach faded cotton wash in boiling cream of tartar water.

Piano keys as well as all ivory articles should be cleaned with alcohol.

TO FIX

An application of ammonia on table salt will remove insect stings.

To prevent any shade of blue from fading soak your linen for a pail of water into which one ounce of sugar of lead has been added. Dry before washing and ironing.

Camphor put in bureau drawers and trunks will keep away moths.

Place circles of blotting paper between china plates and saucers or circles of tissue paper in sherbet glasses finger bowls and tumblers, when it is necessary to pile them together. This precaution will prevent scratching and breaking.

Oxalic acid (powder) mixed with water will clean brass.

TO REMOVE STAINS

Scorch stains—Wet the scorched place, rub with soap, and bleach in the sun.

Soot stains—Rub the spot with dry meal before sending the clothes to the wash.

Grass stains — Saturate the spot thoroughly with kerosene, then put in the washtub.

Mildew—Soak in a weak solution of chloride of lime for several hours, then rinse in a weak solution of sour milk.

Ink stains—Soak in sour milk or a dark stain remains, rinse in weak solution of chloride of lime.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Hon. Mr. Emmerson has issued a writ against Frederickton Gleaner for $25,000 damages. In this way the Fowler yarn will be investigated under oath.

Premier Whitney took for the province in 1906 $201,696 more from liquor licenses than in 1905. The municipal revenue from the traffic has been declining, while that of the Province increased. The total municipal revenue was in 1902-3, $257,866; in 1904-5, $218,492; in 1905-6, $241,019.

Brockville Recorder: Robert Fleming, esq., manager of the Toronto Street Railway, continues to prove himself a trifle too shrewd for the gentlemen who manage the city affairs. Mr. Fleming and Mr. Fleming and were sufficiently short-sighted to let the company steal him, and the city has played second fiddle to the railway ever since.

Many of the great railway magnates of the United States spring from humble circumstances, but few of them started lower or have climbed higher in that vocation than E.H. Harriman, who lately climbed with President Roosevelt. Mr. Harriman not so very long ago was a clerk in the freight offices of the Oqdensburg & Lake Ontario Railway, in Ogdensburg, at a salary which would be scorned by many a young man of the present day. To-day Mr. Harriman divides with J. J. Hill (an ex-Canadian) the honor of being the most powerful factor in the railway world.

Peterboro Examiner: The Whitney government is showing a belated sense of responsibility. It is stated that in districts where local option was carried by a three-fifths majority, and the majority quashed by a pure legal technicality, there will be a disinclination to issue licenses, and an effort of the Government to says that "it is understood to be the intention of the Government, having regard to the three-fifths majority enactment, to see that the expressed will of the people is carried out." This is very much like adding insult to injury. The Whitney Government should have had some greater respect for the expressed will of the people when it passed the three-fifths majority clause, specifically designed to nullify "the expressed will of the people.

One of the big three insurance companies in New York has published its statement of business for 1906. It did less new business, but at half the expenses of a similar amount formerly. The exhibit has challenged popular attention.

Toronto Star; From the fact that he was interviewed by a poorer class of reporters that he met fifteen years ago Mr. Stead argues that United States journalism is on the wane which only goes to show that an egotist will never admit that his importance has shrunk.

Dr. Torrey has apologized for his libellous outburst against Norman Murray in Montreal, and it be paid the costs the matter could be dropped. Apology seems to have been a proper course in the circumstances. But for the sake of Dr. Torrey and the pulpit, it be regretted that it was necessary.

The Chicago Chronicle advocates the employment of convicts in road making. It says the system would not only benefit the general population but it would be advantageous to the prisoners themselves. It would at once abolish the too great prison idleness, demoralizing and hurtful employment. It might be added that the change would be for the good roads.

Hamilton Times: Referring to the Ottawa millionaire who came home in Mail and Empire says: "Did Sir Laurier Government ever some a piece of Quebec for the asking purposes?" That is different, however. The Quebec government offered free the land required. The Laurier Government, too, offered the land on acceptable terms but went back on its offer and sought to induce manufacturers to hold up the Dominion for large sums of money. Whitney's friends do not appear to be very enthusiastic in his behalf.

Denver, Chicago, Grand Rapids, Kalamazoo, New Orleans, and other United States cities have been regular spring cleaning up on a day set apart by the mayors, when streets, alleys, yards, and back premises are cleaned, together with any other nuisances of the kind that needs it. Springfield (Ohio) Republican gives the women credit for this style of affairs. In Denver, the women have had a special day for the last fifteen years, and have used their power for the cleaning up and beautifying of their city. Kalamazoo has appointed a woman to superintend the street cleaning of its chief business district, and the children of that city have been taught to lend a hand in the cleaning process. In Kalamazoo, the cleaning up of the city was a success, and was brought about by the efforts of the Women's Club. In New Orleans it was the Women's Civic Sewerage and Drainage League who carried the election in favor of improved sewerage and drainage and a pure water supply. Great is woman and the broom!

Hamilton Times; The Philomathean Society of the Peterboro Collegiate Institute did a good thing when it took up the question of reading and held a competitive test. There are few good readers, that is to say, there are few people who can read aloud so as to be distinctly understood, or in a way to convey the meaning of what they are reading. Few are able to pronounce the words correctly or to give the proper emphasis and inflection to the text. How many, of our preachers can read a chapter of Scripture as it should be read? As it is the reading is a dreary performance. But once in a while we meet one who transforms the cold printed words into words of living fire, and those who listen hang upon his every word while they drink in the full meaning of the writer. Among the laity it is often a wonder why the theological colleges turn out so many poor, uninstructed readers.

RAILWAY COMMISSION HERE

Heard Application of Grand Trunk re Crossing Watchmen.

Evening Post of May 7th

The Railway Commission, comprising Judge Killam, chairman, and Commissioners Mills and Bernier, arrived in town this morning and had a session in the Council chamber.

The object of the meeting was to consider the necessity of maintaining watchmen on the G.T.R. crossings at Lindsay and Kent-st. After having evidence the Commissioners reserved their decision, but it is the impression among the Aldermen that they are sworn to making the change desired by the railway.

Besides the Commissioners there were present Mayor Bell, Aldermen Begg and others of our aldermen and citizens. G.T.R. Solicitor M. H. Cowan was on hand, and Mr. R. J. McLaughlin looked after the town's interests.

The Commissioners inspected the crossings in the early ward, and the action of the railroads in placing a system of signals not supported by the Commissioners was commented on by Chairman Killam in severe terms.

COMMUNICATIONS.

NEMO'S LETTERS.

(To the Editor of The Post.)

Sir,—In the issue of your paper of the 4th you devote some space to make some remarks on "Nemo's" letters. You say "it is easy to see the writer is a staple dealer." Wherever you intend that as a compliment to the writer or not will, I suppose, be determined by each reader of your paper. Permit me to state to you what, in my opinion, would have been a better mode of procedure, well suited to an honest journal, sincere in its endeavors to be independent. Such a journal would have ascertained if Mr. Dale ever advocated anything that was not calculated to uplift the oppressed and downtrodden. We, he or we found oppressing the weak and unfortunate? If you do not find such working class grievances, but, on the other hand, you find him devoting his life and talents to building up a country where peace, plenty and happiness will be the lot of all, then I think you might say the Dale of Lindsay has the power of Debs—let us be proud of him.

Lest it should be supposed that it is unfair to infer from your remarks that Mr. Dale is attempting to build a fortune, I might say the social question of which he is so able an exponent is a very good question during away book almost all of a professional time—as far back as the facts gave me the right to form an opinion of his justice", can be traced the origin of the social question. If you would take the trouble to consult history you would find that the social question has been going on for ages, and did not wait for the birth of Mr. Dale. Then you say the Socialist party has made the most important things that run the world, says the writer, and then you say "Socialism is a staple package the writer displays a grotesque amalgamation of Nemo's" letters, as his arguments went to show that Socialists have to notice if we had a system of co-operation, as in the case of Christ, an under-competitive system we must necessarily have to be one another. Our friend talks about the moving in the commercial world—if he will try from now forward to do his job for the last time he cannot possibly make more nonsense in so few words. Do we not all know that every business man, from the poor man at the ditch to the millionaire is out for the highest bid? The poor man has to get bread to eat, and the millionaire is out to satisfy his greed, and love for their fellow men does not enter into modern commercialism in the slightest degree. Our friend conceive of a more ridiculous proposition than that? I take for granted that the writer does in reply to Nemo's letters, but he would do well to expose their ignorance, that in their own business, and think twice, that the writer does in his criticism of Nemo's letters.

Yours, etc.,

FARMER

Orchard, May 6th, 1907.

Note.—The writer appears to be under the impression that the criticism in question was made on the author of The Post's editor. Such is not the fact—the opinions quoted appeared under the heading "Remarks on Things in and Out of Lindsay." The "Post" The second views of this contributor on most subjects have filled by him, and we feel we commend his conclusions to many of our readers. It is not in our office to offer dogmatically with all we do not propose to take up the cudgels for him.—Ed. Post.

Aim high. Twere better time arrows
Bend
Than the mark should fall.
Then that thou through fear of failure
Should not never aim at all.

Aiming at a lofty height,

NEWS FROM THE OLD LAND.

MR. J. STORER WRITES ABOUT HIS VISIT TO OLD SCENES.

Spent Some Days at Crowe and Glasgow —Now on East Coast.

The following brief letter from the pen of Mr James Storer, of this town, who, with Mrs. Storer, is revisiting old scenes in the Motherland, will be scanned with pleasure by their many friends in Lindsay and vicinity, and they will, as in duty, ing the next communication will be of more generous length.

Having a spare day at my disposal, thought I might use it, and give you an idea of my first three weeks away from home. We left Lindsay on Tuesday, April 2nd, arrived in Montreal on time, and were met at the station by A. Storer, and Lindsay boy; spent two days with him, and had a good look through the Angus Works. They certainly are a credit to Canada. On Thursday at 7.25 p. m. we started on a rail journey of 1,400 miles, arriving at St. John, N. B., at 3.25 p. m. Friday, got on board the Empress of Britain, and sailed for Halifax at 5.50 p. m., arriving at that port on Saturday at 2. 30 p. m. then sailed at on the voyage.

The first two days the boat rolled a little; the last four days it was very pleasant. We were on deck at least eight hours a day, weather according to the chart; was sailed a long way south of the direct course. The passengers were good that we spent a very pleasant association with the Empress of Ireland, some place near another and hundred miles to the north; we understood she encountered ice. The slowest speed our boat made was 324 miles a day, and the highest was 424. We arrived at Liverpool Saturday, the 13th, and got ashore at 2 p. m. Sunday and left the baggage, went to the C. P. R. shipping office, and arranged for our baggage to Canada, and left Liverpool for Crewe at 3.20 p. m. We arrived there about 3 o. m. and found our baggage, we had left in that distance, however, four days later was found and returned.

About 5 p. m. we went in search of old friends, found one, aged 75 per cent. of them alive; you will easily understand that in an absence of 37 years none of them knew us. The town seems to have doubled in 10,000 population—to-day it has over 50,000.

After spending four very pleasant days at Crewe we boarded a train for Glasgow, left Crewe at about 1.15 p. m. and arriving at Glasgow 6 o'clock. Saw the sights for several days, the distance between the two places being 180 miles; we found Glasgow a very pleasant place, relatives whom we have not seen for 42 years. Walking is the fashion, I hear the pleasure of going through the goodling factories of the Coats Shipbuilding Co. of Dumbarton, and saw the cylinders of some of the largest sea going steamers being made. I understand it takes four months and 100 men to make one cylinder, to moulds one cylinder.

Glasgow is the place for the east coast of Scotland—Yours, etc.,

JAS. STORER.

BAPTIST CHURCH AFFAIRS.

Membership Increased During Year—Finances in a Healthy State.

The annual meeting of the Lindsay Baptist church was held Wednesday, May 1st, with the pastor Rev. E. W. Crews in the chair. Very encouraging reports were given from the different departments of work. The year was one of the most successful years in its history, and the membership enters upon the new year with every indication of a most hopeful spirit.

The membership of the church is now 211. During the year 15 were united with the church by baptism, 6 by letter, and 2 by christian experience. 14 have gone out, 4 members by removals, 2 by death, and 3 names have been erased. The net gain for the year is 11 and a number are to be received. The church is now in a healthy condition financially. Nearly $3,300 has been raised during the year, of which $580 has been contributed to missions over and above. The attendance at the Sunday morning service has been good, and there is a live spiritual interest in the church and a bright future. The church is contemplating further improvements to its church property, which it is hoped will put it in a position for still more effective service.

Most of the old officers were re-elected for the ensuing year: Mr. W. J. Morton was re-appointed to the office of treasurer. The other elections to office are:—A. D. Kitchener, secretary, W. A. Peel, librarian, and also chairman of finance committee; Mesars. T. A. Hoare, George Burford, pew committee; Mesars. Morton, Peel, and J. Davis, music committee; the trustees are Messrs. Rider, Morton, Fisher, Price and Burford.

There is a delightful spirit of harmony prevailing in the church, and the membership looks back over the year with gratitude to God for His goodness, and look forward with happy assurance of still larger blessing.

Do You Remember?

The first time you wore trousers?
The first time you tried to smoke?
The first time you were in love with?
The first time you kissed her?
The first time you married?
The first pair of long pants you wore?
The first dress suit you had on?
The first stiff hat you donned?
The first time you proposed to a girl?
And
The last time your daddy tanned your hide?
If you don't you never were a real boy.
Yes
You were brought up in a hotel.
And you had nothing but water in your veins.

"GOOD CLOTHES"

The word "Good" covers the whole question. Clothes can't be good unless made from good cloth. They can't be good unless thoroughly tailored, they can't be good unless they are stylish and they can't be good in the fullest sense of the term unless they fit perfectly.

20th Century and Progress Brand Clothes are "Good Clothes" in the fullest sense. It matters not how particular you are you will have to admit that they are "Good Clothes', when you see and feel them on you. Let us show you a Spring Suit or Overcoat of these makes.

GOOD NEWS FOR C.T.R. EMPLOYEES

Ten per cent Increase for Road Masters Firemen and Conductors

Local employees of the Grand Trunk railway will be much interested in the news that an increase in wages amounting to 10 per cent has been granted by the Grand Trunk Trunk railway to its roadmasters, firemen and conductors, commencing this month. About 1,500 men are affected by the advance. This is not the result of a demand, but information issued by officials of the road, and the increase is one which the men have made from time to time for increase because of the greater cost of living to-day as against that of a few years ago.

Popular Young Man Leaves.

Evening Post of May 4th.

Mr. Joe Duffus for some time past bookkeeper with the Carter Furniture Co., has resigned his position, where he has accepted a similar position with the Howard Co., Dundas Street East, Toronto. We missed very much in social and athletic circles on Tuesday, Mr. Duffus is a member of the champion C. L. S. seven.

Clean Your Premises.

What improvements and cleaning up do you intend to do this spring? You will at least touch your premises with a coat of paint. Every sect expects you to do it and you expect everybody else to do something. Let us all do something. You can clean up your yards, clean the rubbish from your own premises and from the street in front. Paint a tree or two. It will take you only a short time and you will be proud of it when it is done. Paint up your fence, straighten that gate. Nail on those broken boards, and fix up those crooked posts, even in your back yard. It's all only the work of a few hours and you will be well repaid for your little trouble. You will like yourself better and everybody else will like you better.

Olympic Games in London.

The lecture of the Franco-British exhibition, to be held in conjunction with the Olympic games next year will be the enormous Stadium which will be erected for the games. Plans are now completed and will shortly be sanctioned at the meeting of the executive committee of 20th June. The Stadium will be an imposing structure, and capable of holding the immense crowd of 200,000 people at the same time. A running track will be in the enclosure with three laps to the mile, and outside of his track will be an up-to-date cycle track. On one side of the grounds a swimming bath will be built 110 yards in length. Already twenty-five nations have signified their acceptance to the games, and will shortly settle all the details. It is confidently expected that the exhibition and the games fully ten million people will pass through the turnstiles during the fortnight. There should be no difficulty about this number, because the Stadium will be erected in the easily central part of the west end which is well supplied with good train, tram and tube services.

or butlers and coachmen and upper servants of that kind. The butler's sniff and his cold suggestion as to hock slightly raised Merritt's combative spirit. And the champagne was poor, thin stuff after all. A jorum of gin and water, or a mug of beer, was what Merritt's soul longed for.

And what a lot of plate there was on the table and sideboard! Some of it was gold, too. Merritt's greedy professional eye appraised the collection at some hundreds of pounds—hundreds of pounds—that is, after the stuff had been disposed of. In imagination he had already drugged the butler and was stuffing the plate into his bag.

Henson said very little. He was too busily engaged in watching his confederate. He wished from the bottom of his heart now that Chris had never seen Merritt. She was smiling at him now and apparently hanging on every word. Henson had seen society ladies doing this kind of thing before with well-concealed contempt. So long as people liked to play his game for him he had no objection. But this was quite different. Merritt had warmed a little under the influence of his fifth glass of champagne, but his eye looked lovingly and longingly in the direction of a silver spirit-stand on the sideboard.

The dinner came to an end at length, to Henson's great relief, and presently the whole party wandered out to the terrace. Bell dropped behind with Chris.

"Now is your time," he whispered. "Henson dare not lose sight of Merritt before he goes to bed, and I'll keep the latter out here for a good long spell. I've muffled the striker of the telephone so that the bell will make no noise when you get your call back from Brighton, so that you must be near enough to the instrument to hear the click of the striker. Make haste."

Chris dropped back to the library and rapidly fluttered over the leaves of the "Telephone Directory." She found what she wanted at length and asked to be put on to Brighton. Then she sat down in an armchair in the darkness close under the telephone, prepared to wait patiently. She could just see the men on the terrace, could catch the dull glow red of their cigars.

Her patience was not unduly tried. At the end of a quarter of an hour the striker clicked furiously Chris reached for the receiver and lay back comfortably in her chair with the diaphragm to her ear. "Are you there?" she asked, quietly. "Is that you, Mr. Steel?"

To her great relief the answering voice was Steel's own. He seemed to be a little puzzled as to who his questioner was.

"Can't you guess?" Chris replied. "This is not the first time I have had you called. You have not forgotten 218, Brunswick Square, yet?"

Chris smiled as he heard Steel's sudden exclamation.

"So you are my fair friend whom I saw in the dark?" he said. "Yes, I recognize your voice now. You are Miss Chris—well, I won't mention the name aloud, because people might ask what a well-regulated corpse meant by rousing respectable people up at midnight. I hope you are not going to get me into trouble again."

"No, but I am going to ask your advice and assistance. I want you to be so good as to give me the plot of a story after I have told you the details. And you are to scheme the thing out at once, please, because delay is dangerous. Dr. Bell——"

"What's that? Will you tell me where you are speaking from?"

"I am at present located at Littimer Castle. Yes, Dr. Bell is here. Do you want him?"

"I should think so," Steel exclaimed "Please tell him at once that the man who was found here half dead—you know the man I mean—got up and dressed himself in the absence of the nurse and walked out of the hospital this morning. Since then he has not been seen or heard of. I have been looking up Bell everywhere. Will you tell him this at once? I'll go into your matter afterwards. Don't be afraid; I'll tell the telephone people not to cut us off till I ring. Please go at once."

The voice was urgent, not to say imperative. Chris dropped the receiver into its space and crept into the darkness of the terrace.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

Bell seemed to know by intuition that Chris required him, or perhaps he caught a glimpse of her white dress from the terrace. Anyway, he strolled leisurely in her direction.

UNDERWEAR

something has happened?" he whispered, as he came up.

"Well, yes," Chris replied, "though I should like to know how you guessed that. I had no difficulty in getting Mr. Steel on the telephone, but he would say nothing directly he heard that you were here beyond a peremptory request that you were to be told at once that Van Sneck has gone."

"Gone!" Bell echoed, blankly. "What do you mean by that?"

"He has disappeared from the hospital at Brighton to-day. Mr. Steel thinks they were extra busy, or something of that kind. Anyway, Van Sneck got up and dressed himself and left the hospital without being observed. It seems extraordinary to me."

"And yet quite possible," Bell said, thoughtfully. "Van Sneck had practically recovered from the flesh wounds; it was the injury to his head that was the worst part. He resembled an irresponsible lunatic more than anything else. Steel wants me, of course?"

"He suggests that you should go down to Brighton without delay."

"All right, I'll make some excuse to take the first train in the morning. We've got a fine start of Henson, and that's a good thing. If Van Sneck comes within his net we shall have a deal of trouble. I had hoped to get permission to operate on Van Sneck, and relied upon him to solve the mystery. And now you had better go back to your telephone."

Chris hurried back again. A whispered word satisfied her that Steel was still at the other end.

"Dr. Bell starts as early as possible to-morrow," she said. "If you will listen carefully I will give you a brief outline of all that has happened since I have been here."

Chris proceeded to tell her story succinctly and briefly. From little sounds and signs she could tell that Steel was greatly interested. The story of the man with the thumb fascinated him. It appealed to his professional instincts.

"And what do you want to do with him?" Steel asked.

"Well, you see, I have him in my power," Chris explained. "We can get the other Rembrandt any time we like now, but that is quite a minor consideration. What I want is for Merritt to know that I can have him arrested at any time for stealing my star. It's Enid's star, as a matter of fact; but that is a detail."

"An important one, surely," Steel's voice came thin and clear. "Suppose that our dear friend chances to recognize it? . . . No, don't ring off yet."

"I'm not. Oh, you are speaking to the Exchange people. . . . Yes, yes; we shall be a long time yet. . . . Are you there? Well, Henson has never seen the star. Enid bought it just before the great trouble came, and afterwards she never had the heart to wear it."

"I understand. You want Merritt to know this?"

"Well, I do and I don't," Chris explained. "I am anxious not to frighten the man. I want to get him in my power, and I want to prove to him that it would be to his advantage for him to come over to my side. Suppose that Enid gave it out that the star had been stolen? And suppose that I could save him at the critical moment? I shouldn't mind him thinking that I had stolen the star in the first place. That is why I am asking you as a novelist to help me."

"You would have made an excellent novelist yourself," David said, admiringly. "Give me five minutes. . . . Are you there? I fancy I have it. Can't you hear me? That's better. I'll see Miss Gates the first thing in the morning and get her to go over to Longdean and see you sister. . . . Confound it, don't cut us off yet. What does it matter so long as the messages are paid for? Nobody else wants the line. Well, I may for an hour more. . . . Are you there? Very sorry; it's the fault of the Post Office people. Here is the plot in a nutshell. Your sister has lost a diamond star. She gives a minute description of it to the police, and drops a hint to the effect that she believes it was taken away by mistake—in other words, was stolen—from her in London by a chance acquaintance called Christabel Lee——"

"Ah," Chris cried, "how clever you are!"

"I have long suspected it," the thin voice went on, drily. "The full description of the star will be printed in the Police Gazette, a copy of which every respectable pawnbroken always gets regularly. I suppose the people where the star was pawned are respectable?"

"Highly so. They have quite a Bond Street establishment attached."

"So much the better. They will see the advertisement, and they will communicate with the police. The Reverend James Merritt will be arrested——"

"I don't quite like that," Chris suggested.

"Oh, it's necessary. He will be arrested at the castle. Knowing his antecedents, the police will not stand upon any ceremony with him. You will be filled with remorse. You have plunged back into a career of crime again a being who was slowly climbing into the straight path once more. You take the blame upon yourself—it was at your instigation that Merritt pawned the star."

"But, really, Mr. Steel——"

"Oh, I know. But the end justifies the means. You save Mr. Merritt, there is a bond of sympathy between you, he will regard you as a great light in his interesting profession. You saved him because you had appropriated the star yourself."

"And go to gaol instead of Mr. Merritt?"

"Not a bit of it. The star you deemed to be yours. You had one very like it when you saw Miss Henson, when you were staying in London at the same hotel. By some means the jewels got mixed. You are confident that an exchange has been made. Also you are confident that if Miss Henson will search her jewel-case she will find a valuable star that does not belong to her. Miss Henson does so, she is distressed beyond measure, she offers all kinds of apologies. Exit the police. You need not tell Merritt how you get out of the difficulty, and thus you increase his respect for you. There, that would make a very ingenious and plausible magazine story. It should be more convincing in real life."

"Capital!" Chris murmured. "What an advantage it is to have novelist to advised one! Many, many thanks for all your kindness. Good-night!"

Chris rang off with a certain sense of relief. It was some time later before she had a chance of conveying to Bell what had happened. He listened gravely to all that Chris had to say.

"Just the sort of feather-brained idea that would occur to a novelist," he said. "For my part, I should prefer to confront Merritt with his theft, and keep the upper hand of him that way."

"And he would mistrust me and betray me at the first opportunity. Besides, in that case, he would know at once that I wanted to get to the bottom of his connection with Reginald. Mr. Steel's plan may be bizarre, but it is safe."

"I never thought of that," Bell admitted. "I begin to imagine that you are more astute than I gave you credit for, which is saying a great deal."

Chris was down early the following morning, only to find Bell at breakfast with every sign of making an early departure. He was very sorry, he explained, gravely, to his host and Chris, but his letters gave him no option. He would come back in a day or two if he might. A moment later Henson came into the room, ostentatiously studying a Bradshaw.

"And where are you going?" Littimer asked. "Why do you all abandon me? Reginald, do you mean to say that you are going to refuse me the light of your countenance?"

"Is Dr. Bell going, too?" Henson asked, with just a suggestion of uneasiness. "I mean—er——"

"Business," Bell said. "I came here at great personal inconvenience. And you?"

"London," Henson replied. "A meeting to-day that I cannot get out of. A couple of letters by this morning's post have decided me."

Chris said nothing; she appeared to be quite indifferent until she had a chance to speak to Bell alone. She looked a little anxious.

"He has found out about Van Sneck," she said. "Truly he is a marvellous man! And he had no letters this morning. I opened the post-bag personally. But I'm glad he's going, because I shall have James Merritt all to myself."

CHAPTER XXXIX.

On the whole Mr. James Merritt, ex-convict and now humanitarian, was enjoying himself immensely. He did not sleep at the castle, for Lord Littimer drew the line there, but he contrived to get most of his meals under that hospitable roof, and spent a deal of time there. It was by no means the first time he had been "taken up" by the aristocracy since his conversion, and his shyness was wearing off. Moreover, Henson had given his henchman strict instructions to keep his eyes open with a vie wof getting at the bottom of the Rembrandt mystery.

Still, there is always a crumpled rose-leaf somewhere, and Merritt had his. A few days after Henson departed so hurriedly from town the stolen Rembrandt disappeared from Merritt's rooms. Nobody knew anything about it; the thing had vanished, leaving no trace of the thief behind. Perhaps Merritt would have been less easy in Littimer's society had he known that the missing print was securely locked away in the latter's strong room. Still, had Merritt been acquainted with the classics, carpe diem would like as not have been his favorite motto. He declined to worry over the matter until Henson's return. It was not for him to know, yet, that Chris had actually gone over to Moreton Wells, and during the absence of Merritt's landlady, calmly walked into the house and taken the picture away.

"You are going to see some fun presently," she said, coolly, to the astonished Littimer, as she laid the missing picture before him. "No, I shall not tell you anything more at present. You shall hear the whole story when Reginald Henson stands in the pillory before you. You know now that Henson was at the bottom of the plot to destroy Dr. Bell's character?"

"I always felt that our Reginald was a great scoundrel," Littimer purred over his cigarette. "And if you succeed in exposing him thoroughly I shall watch the performance with the greatest possible pleasure. I am not curious, my dear young lady, but I would give sixpence to know who you are."

"Keep your sixpence," Chris laughed, "and you'll know all in good time. All I ask is not to be astonished at anything that happens."

Littimer averred that he had long since lost the power of astonishment. There was a brightness and restlessness about Chris to-day that considerably added to her charms. It was nearly a week now since Bell and Henson had departed, and in the meantime Chris had heard nothing from Longdean. Half an hour before a telegram had arrived to the effect that a gentleman in a blue coat might be expected at Littimer Castle at any moment. The police were coming, and Merritt was late to-day. If Merritt failed to turn up the whole situation would be spoilt. It was with a feeling of unutterable relief that Chris saw him coming up the drive.

"Come on the terrace," she said. "I have something very serious to say to you. Mr. Merritt, you have got us both into very serious trouble. Why did you do it?"

"Ain't done nothing," Merritt said, doggedly. He repeated the old formula. "What's up?"

"Er—it's about my diamond star," said Chris. "I lost it a few days ago. If I had known what was going to happen I should have put up with my loss. But I made inquiries through the police without saying a word to anybody, and now I find the star was pawned in Moreton Wells."

"Oh, lor," Merritt gasped. "You don't mean to say the police know that, miss?"

"Indeed I do. You see, once I allowed matters to go out of my hands I was powerless. The case now rests entirely with the police. And I am informed that they may come here and arrest you at any moment. I fear there is no escape for you—you pawned the thing yourself in your own name. What a thousand pities you yielded to sudden temptation."

"But I found it," Merritt whined. "I'll take my oath as I found it under the terrace. I—I—was rambling along the cliffs one day and I found it. And I didn't know it was yours. If I had known it was yours, I'd never have gone and done no such a thing."

Chris shook her head sadly.

"And just as you were getting on so nicely," she said.

"That's it," Merritt whined, brokenly. "Just as I was properly spoofing everybody as I—I mean just as I was getting used to a better life. But you can save me, miss; you can say as you were hard up for money and that, knowing as I knew the ropes, you got me to pawn it for you. Put it in that way and there's not a policeman in England as can touch me."

"I had thought of it," Chris said, with a pretty assumption of distress. "But, but—Mr. Merritt, I have a terrible confession to make. It was not I who started the police: it was somebody else. You see, the star was not my property at all. I—I got it in London."

Mr. Merritt looked up with involuntary admiration.

"You don't mean to say as you nicked it?" he asked. "Well, well."

Chris bent her face lower to conceal her agitation. Her shoulders were heaving, but not with emotion. The warmth of Merritt's admiration had moved her to silent laughter, and she had made the exact impression that she had desired.

"I have telegraphed to the lady, who is more or less of a friend of mine," she said. "I have urged her to take no further steps in the matter. I fancy that she is a good and kind girl and that—but a reply might come at any time."

There was a reply on the way now, as Chris knew perfectly well. The whole thing had been carefully arranged and planned to the moment by Steel and the others.

"I dare say they'll let you down easy," Merritt said, disconsolately; "but it'll be hot for me. I've copped it too many times before, you see."

"Yes, I see," Chris said, thoughtfully. "Mr. Merritt, I have made up my mind: if I had not—er—borrowed that star, it would not have been lost, and you would not have found it, and there would have been no trouble. My conscience would not rest if I allowed you to be dragged back into the old life again. I am going to save you—I am going to tell the police that you pawned that star for me at my instigation."

Merritt was touched even to tears. There was not an atom of chivalry in the rascal's composition. He had little or no heed for the trouble that his companion appeared to be piling up for herself, but he was touched to the depths of his soul. Here was a clever girl, who in her own way appeared to be a member of his profession, who was prepared to sacrifice herself to save another. Self-sacrifice is a beautiful and tender thing, and Merritt had no intention of thwarting it.

"Do that, and I'm your pal for life," he said, huskily. "And I never went back on a pal yet. Ask anybody as really knows me. 'Tain't as if you weren't one of us, neither. I'd give a trifle to know what your little game is here, eh?"

Chris smiled meaningly. Merritt's delusion was distinctly to be fostered.

"You shall help me then, presently," she said in a mysterious whisper. "Help me and keep your own counsel, and there will be the biggest job you ever had in your life. Only let you and I get out of this mess, and we shall see what we shall see presently."

Merritt looked speechless admiration. He had read of this class of high-toned criminals in the gutter stories peddled by certain publishers, but he had never hoped to meet one in the flesh. He was till gazing open-mouthed at Chris as two men came along the avenue. They were both in plain clothes, but they had "policeman" writ large all over them.

"Done for a million," Merritt gurgled, with a pallid face. "You can tell 'em when you're asleep. And they are after me; they're coming this way. I'll be all right presently."

"I hope so," Chris said, with a curling lip. "You look guilty enough now."

Merritt explained that it was merely the first emotion, and would pass off presently. Nor did he boast in vain. He was quite cool as the officers came up and called him by name.

"That's me," Merritt said. "What's the trouble?"

One of the officers explained. He had no warrant, he said, but all the same he would have to trouble Mr. Merritt to accompany him to Moreton Wells. A diamond star not yet definitely identified had been handed over to the police, the same having been pawned by James Merritt.

"That's quite right," Merritt said, cheerfully. "I pawned it for this young lady here—Miss Lee. Of course, if it is not her property, why, then——"

The officer was palpably taken back. He knew more than he cared to say. The star had been pledged by Merritt, as he cheerfully admitted, but the owner of the star had lost the gem in London under suspicious circumstances in which Miss Lee was mixed up. And at present it was not the policy of the police to arrest Miss Lee. That would come later.

"I am afraid that there has been a misapprehension altogether," Chris said. "Allow me to explain: Mr. Merritt, would you step aside for a moment? I have to speak of private matters. Thank you. Now, sir, I am quite prepared to admit that the ornament pledged does not belong to me, but to Miss Henson, whom I met in London. I took the star by mistake. You may smile, but I have one very like it. If Miss Henson had searched her jewels properly she would have found that she had my star—that I had hers. I heard of the business quite by accident, and telegraphed to Miss Henson to look searchingly amongst her jewels. She has a large amount, and might easily have overlooked my star. Here is a boy with a telegram. Will you take it from him and read it aloud? It is addressed to me, you will find."

It was. It was signed "Enid Henson"; it went on to say that the sender was fearfully sorry for all the trouble she had caused, but that she had found Miss Lee's star with her jewels. Also she had telegraphed at once to the police at Moreton Wells to go no farther.

"Looks like a mistake," the officer muttered. "But if we get that telegram——"

"Which has reached the police-station by this time," Chris interrupted. "Come into the castle and ask the question over the telephone. I suppose you are connected?"

The officer said they were; in fact, they had only recently joined the Exchange. A brief visit to the telephone, and the policeman came back, with a puzzled air and a little more deference in his manner, with the information that he was to go back at once, as the case was closed.

"I've seen some near things in my time, but nothing nearer than this," he said. "Still, it's all right now. Very sorry to have troubled you, miss."

The officers departed with the air of men who had to be satisfied, despite themselves. Merritt came forward with an admiration almost fawning. He did not know quite how the thing had happened, but Chris had done the police. Smartness and trickery of that kind were the highest form of his idolatry. His admiration was nearly beyond words.

"Well, strike me," he gasped. "Did ever anyone ever see anything like that? You, as cool as possible, and me with my heart in my mouth all the time. And there ain't going to be no trouble, no sort of bother over the ticket?"

"You hand over that ticket to me," Chris smiled, "and there will be an end of the matter. And if you try to play me false in any way, why, it will be a bad day for you. Give me your assistance, and it will be the best day's work you ever did in your life."

Merritt's heart was gained. His pride was touched.

"Me go back on you?" he cried, hoarsely. "After what you've done? Only say the word, only give old Jim Merritt a call, and it's pitch-and-toss to manslaughter for those pretty eyes of yours. Good day's work! Aye, for both of us."

And Chris thought so too.

CHAPTER XL.

Waiting with the eagerness of the greyhound in leash, David Steel was more annoyed and vexed over the disappearance of the wounded Van Sneck than he cared to admit. He had an uneasy feeling that the unseen foe had checkmated him again. And he had built up so many hopes upon this strangely-uninvited guest of his. If that man spoke he could tell the truth. And both Cross and Bell had declared that he would not die.

David found Cross in a frame of mind something like his own. It was late in the afternoon before it transpired that Van Sneck was gone, and, unfortunately, David did not know where to find Bell at the moment. Cross had very little to say.

"A most unpleasant incident," he remarked. "But these things will happen, you know. We have been so busy lately, and our vigilance has been slightly relaxed. Oh, it is impossible to guard against everything, but he is certain to be found."

"You don't think," David suggested, "that anybody secretly connected with the man's past——"

"No, I don't," Cross snapped; "that would be impossible. The man had something on his mind, and so far as bodily condition was concerned he was getting quite strong again. In his dazed state he got up and dressed himself and went away. He seems to have been seeking for somebody or something for days. We are certain to have him again before long."

With which poor consolation David returned home again. He was restless and desirous of human companionship. He even resented it, as a kind of affront, that his mother had chosen at this time to go to Hassocks to stay with an old friend for a couple of days. That Mrs. Steel knew practically nothing of her son's trouble counted for naught. Therefore it was with something akin to pleasure that David found Ruth Gates waiting in the drawing room for him when he came in from his walk on the following afternoon. Nothing had been heard of Van Sneck in the meantime, but thanks to Chris's telephone message late the previous night he had got in touch with Bell, who was coming south without delay.

There was a look of shy pleasure in Ruth's eyes and a deep carmine flush on her cheeks.

"You don't think that this is very bold of me?" she asked.

"I am pretty Bohemian in any case," David laughed, as he looked down fondly into the shy, sweet eyes. "And I'm too overjoyed to see you to think about anything else. I wish my mother was at home. No, I don't, because I have you all to myself."

"David! On an occasion like this you ought to be the pink of propriety. Do you know, I believe that I have made a great discovery?"

"Indeed, little girl! And what have you found out?"

"Well, you must tell me something before my discovery seems valuable. David, you are a close student of human nature. Is it possible for men of phenomenal cunning to make careless mistakes? Do the most clever criminals ever make childish blunders?"

"My dear child, if they didn't the police would have very little chance. For instance, I have discovered how those enemies of ours got hold of the notepaper that lured Van Sneck here. They sent a messenger to Carter's, in East Street, presumedly knowing that my dies were there, and ordered a quarter of a ream of paper and envelopes. These were to be sent to an address in East Grinstead in a hurry. Now, that was very clever and smart, but here comes the folly. Those people, in the stress of business, actually forgot to ascertain the cost and pay for

DOCTORS MISTAKES

Are said often to be buried six feet under ground. But many times women call on their family physicians, suffering, as they imagine, one from dyspepsia, another from heart disease, another from liver or kidney disease, another from nervous prostration, another with pain here and there, and in this way they present alike to themselves and their easy-going or over-busy doctor, separate diseases, for which he, assuming them to be such, prescribes his pills and potions. In reality, they are all only symptoms caused by some uterine disease. The physician, ignorant of the cause of suffering, keeps up his treatment until large bills are made. The suffering patient gets no better by reason of the wrong treatment, but probably worse. A proper medicine like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, directed to the cause would have entirely removed the disease, thereby dispelling all those distressing symptoms, and instituting comfort instead of prolonged misery. It has been well said, that "a disease known is half cured."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a scientific medicine, carefully devised by an experienced and skillful physician, and adapted to woman's delicate system. It is made of native American medicinal roots and is perfectly harmless in its effects in any condition of the female system.

As a powerful invigorating tonic "Favorite Prescription" imparts strength to the whole system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. For overworked, "worn-out," run-down," debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, "shop-girls," house-keepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the greatest earthly boon, being unequaled as an appetizing cordial and restorative tonic.

As a soothing and strengthening nervine "Favorite Prescription" is unequaled and is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing, nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic disease of the uterus. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets invigorate the stomach, liver and bowels. One to three a dose. Easy to take as candy.

THE DRAMA OF FROG LAKE.

An Historic Event of the Vermillion District, Alberta.

(Vermillion Signal.)

Just twenty years ago on Tuesday, April 2nd, last there occurred a few miles north of Vermillion one of the most tragic events in recent Canadian history. In the early hours of the morning of that day, the Indians of Big Bear's band of Plain Crees rose and treacherously murdered the entire population of the Frog Lake settlement, with the exception of two white women and one white man. Frog Lake is a beautiful body of water just across the Saskatchewan River, immediately north of Vermillion. In 1878 when the government of Canada, through its commissioners, was treating with the Indians for the extinguishment of their title in the lands of the Northwest, Big Bear was one of the few chiefs who refused to accept the terms which were offered. His independent stand attracted to him the malcontents and turbulent characters of other bands and he soon found himself at the head of one of the most select groups of red scoundrels that could be collected between the Red River and the Rocky Mountains. In 1883, Big Bear accepted the treaty at Fort Walsh, south of Maple Creek on the C.P.R., and came north to the Saskatchewan with his following. During the winter of 1884-5 the old chief and his crowd of cutthroats were encamped at Frog Lake, having on one pretext or another failed up to that time to take a reservation. On March 26th, at Duck Lake, 200 miles away, the signal was given which lighted the fires of rebellion among the tribes all the way from Prince Albert to Edmonton. This was the shot which started the fight on that day between the half-breeds under Louis Riel and the Northwest Mounted Police and Prince Albert volunteers under Major Crozier. On the 2nd April the Indians of Big Bear's band gave their answer to the signal in the Frog Lake massacre..

ONE MAN SPARED.

Before daylight on the morning of the day they had entered the houses and buildings in Frog Lake, possessed themselves of all the weapons belonging to the occupants and taken prisoner every white man in the place. Before 11 o'clock they had shot all these men down in cold blood with the exception of one who was in the service of the Hudson's Bay Co., at that point, and for that reason escaped. General Strange arrived on the scene with Col. Steele, since to become known throughout the Empire as the gallant commandant of Strathcona Horse, and Big Bear and his following were routed. On the 29th of November in the same year, six of the murderers swung from a gallows in the R. N. W. M. P. barracks square at Battleford. Big Bear went to Stony Mountain, Manitoba, for two years. Shortly after his release in 1887 he died at Battleford. His youngest son, long grown up, now lives on one of the reserves in that vicinity. Another son, Imasees, the real instigator of the Frog Lake massacre, now popularly known as Little Bear, roams about Montana with a remnant of the old following of his father. Nayokeesikopeniss, Four Sky Thunder, is the only redman prominent in the tragic affair who still makes Saskatchewan his home. He served several years in the Manitoba penitentiary and now lives on a reserve near Battleford. He was a prominent councillor of Big Bear. Wandering Spirit, the war chief of the land and the man who began the massacre by shooting the Indian agent, Tom Quinn, was one of the number who died on the scaffold. Of the two women who were prisoners, one, Mrs. Gowanlock, died a few years ago at her father's home near St. Catharines, Ont. The other, Mrs. Delaney, still lives near Ottawa. The white man who escaped is the publisher of this paper.

Times have indeed changed since the stirring das of 1885. In 1907 the white man is numerically so strong and the redman so weak in the West that the idea of the latter being a menace would seem ridiculous, but it will no doubt interest some of the newer residents of the country to learn that within so short a time so marked a transition could take place.

Newspapers and Magazines.

The Canadian Magazine for May, although not a showy number, contains some really valuable and interesting contributions. The Imperial Conference at London is attracting a good deal of attention, but all who wish to observe its significance with added intelligence should read what Mr. F. A. Acland has to say about it in an article in the Canadian. He deals with the subject in an instructive way, quite free from bias or impassioned utterance, and those who read the article may depend upon it that the writer is one of the best equipped journalists in the Dominion. "Ottawa; A Retrospect", by Mr. J. E. B. McCready, is extremely interesting, as it affords glimpses of the Dominion Capital about the time of Confederation. "Germany; A Study in Government", by Charles T. Long; "China; A Great Opportunity", by Mr. John Waddell; and an article dealing with the early Victorian poets, by Mr. O. J. Stevenson, are among the other interesting things in the May number, besides five good short stories.

POPULAR GARDEN FLOWER

Popular Information Respecting Their Cultivation.

The following pointers concerning the planting and care of some of the more common garden flowers may be useful to our readers at this season.

Asters—Cover the seeds less than half an inch in a house box in early April. Water freely at first. When the plants have three or four leaves, transplant into the garden on a dark day, early in May. Plant about four inches apart in a sunny place.

Bachelor's Button or Cornflower—Sow seeds about May 1, one-fourth of an inch deep in a fairly good soil in a sunny part of the garden Keep ground moist.

Balsam or Lady Slipper. — Sow in May; rich soil; give plenty of water and sun. Best soil is a mixture of sandy loam and stable manure.

Calliopsis or Coreopsis.—Plant the seeds the last of April, an inch deep in good soil. Slow in sunny part of garden, and keep moist. The seeds may be started earlier in boxes indoors and transplanted.

Candytuft.—Plant out of doors last of April, about one-eight of an inch deep, in a rich soil. Keep the ground moist. Use as a border.

Marigold—Sow seeds in May in sunny part of garden, an inch deep, in a rich soil. Plant six to eight inches apart. Water at first freely.

Morning Glory.—Plant about a foot from a fence or wall. Support the plants. Sow the seeds early in May, one-half inch deep, in good soil. Water moderately.

Four O'Clock.—Sow seeds early in May, in a rich soil, in a moderately shady place, about half an inch deep. Water freely.

Climbing Nasturtion.—Plant early in May, an inch deep in good soil, about a foot from the wall or fence. Support the plants. Water freely.

Bush Nasturtion.—Ordinary garden soil. Dig deep and break up the lumps. Select a sunny place. About May 1 plant the seeds one-half inch deep and three inches apart. Water freely all summer.

China Pinks.—Prepare a good bed of manure for seeds. Sow in early May in open sheltered bed. eight inches apart.

Phlox.—Sow in April, as soon as frost is out of the ground, in a sunny part of the garden. Plant one-quarter inch deep, in good soil,

Hyacinth Bean (a climber).—Sow in late April or early May Soak the beans in warm water over night. Plant one inch deep in sunny position. Water freely.

Verbena (good for borders).—Sow in April. Soak seeds a few hours in warm water and sow in seed boxes filled with light rich soil. Cover one-quarter inch deep, press down firmly and water. When an inch high, transplant in a sunny place in garden in May, about 10 inches apart each way.

Zinnia. — Plant one-quarter inch deep, in good soil, early in April, as soon as frost is out of the ground. Sow in sunny place. Use in a group or border.

A Trophy of the Chase.

Mr. W. Pym is the proud possessor of a splendid specimen of a mounted elk's head. Decorated with branching antlers of fine proportions, measuring three feet, five inches from tip to tip, and having ten prongs systematically arranged, the mount presents a very life-like appearance. The taxidermist's art is displayed in the skilful setting of the head. The height of the mount is five feet six inches.

VALUABLE MEDICAL PRESCRIPTION

Recommended by a Well-known Toronto Doctor, Whose Love for Humanity is Greater than His Prejudice Against Proprietary Medicines.

The following very valuable prescription, by an eminent and successful physician, will be appreciated by many who are suffering from la grippe, cold, cough, pneumonia, or any throat, lung or stomach trouble, or run-down system, as it is a certain cure, and will save many a doctor's bill. It is almost a certain preventive as well:—"When you feel that you are taking cold or have chilly feeling or aching in any part of the body or head, or feel weak, tired, dizzy, unfit for work, pain in the head or back of the neck, do not neglect these dangerous symptoms, but send immediately to your druggist and get a bottle of Psychine (pronounced Si-keen), and prepare as follows:

"Psychine, 2 teaspoonfuls.

"Sherry, whisky or water, 2 teaspoonfuls.

"Choice of the latter can be made according to the judgment and preference of the patient.

"Mix thoroughly and take regularly before each meal and at bedtime."

This prescription has been used in thousands of cases and has been so universally successful that a number of leading physicians regularly prescribe Psychine in their practice for any of the above troubles, or any run-down, wasting or constitutional difficulty. It is the most reliable and valuable home remedy. It tones up the entire system, giving a feeling of youthfulness and vigor, adding many years to the life of those who use it.

"Years ago I was almost a physical wreck and was suffering with lung troubles. Friends and neighbors thought I would never get better. I began to despair myself. Losing faith in my physician, I procured another one who recommended the use of PSYCHINE. It was surprising beyond description the effect it had. I seemed to gain with every dose. Inside of two weeks I was able to attend to my housework again. There are no symptoms of consumption about me now."

MRS. HENDERSON,
St. John, N.B.

"I had been suffering from La Grippe. My lungs were weak and I had a cough, but Psychine cured me."

ONE HALF HOUR GARDENING

Hints for Spring Work for People of Little Leisure.

Two of the most beautiful of our very common wild flowers are weeds, and one of them is considered the greatest pest in the country, when it appears on lawns, which are its favorite abiding places. It is the dandelion, and if you are amongst those who love a velvety, "well-kept" perfectly cropped lawn, you must extirpate this flower to the last fraction of an inch of its ong tapering root.

But I, though, I fully admit the very real beauty of a fine lawn, have a personal liking for a lawn speckled with the wonderfully bright, golden gleam of the dandelion in flower. I think that there are few sights more beautiful and delightful than to see the early spring green of meadows and gardens sprinkled with this early blossom. So I have reserved for myself a patch of lawn (in the back where shrubs hide it) and there I let dandelions bloom to their heart's content.

Out of sympathy and respect for my neighbors, I take care to prevent them from coming to seed, and I notice that they always admire in table decorations of dandelion and Queen's lace hankerchief.

Is there a more exquisite flower than the latter? The right name for it, truly is this—Queen's lace handkerchief, or Queen Anne's lace, whichever you prefer—that must have been given to it by some poet courtier long ago. What do we need to care for the unnecessary fact that in botany the tall white daughter of the free plant world is really only the wild carrot? When she stands, tall and slender and gauzy white, blowing in fairy array to the wind, the field where she grows looks like gardens in which stand an uncountable army of maids of honor.

KEEPING GROUND MOIST.

When waters falls on your garden it seeps through the top soil, goes down a few inches or feet and stays there. Now if your top soil is hard and packed, it will dry out a few moments after it has been watered. But the moment you rake it, it will begin to suck up the water from beneath. That is why raking is so good around plants. Rake whenever you have a few moments. If you haven't a rake at hand and happen to see that the ground around a shrub is caked, losen it with the toe of your shoe or with a stick. Rake the grass from your lawn after cutting and scatter it lightly over the beds. It fertilizes and also prevents evaporation of moisture.

BEAUTIFYING UGLY WALKS.

In my little garden on a city street, the straight walk that led from the gate to the front stoop looked hopelessly unattractive—just a straight cement path with the grass on each side. Ten cents worth of nasturtion seeds changed it so much that it changed the appearance of the whole garden.

I used the many colored dwarf variety. It grows literally of itself. Plant the seeds in shallow holes, water well and the plant does the rest. It is practically free from insect enemies, and a few plants will produce blossoms enough to supply the house daily for the season. A pretty way to use them for table decoration is to cut them off short and float them on a shallow glass dish or even a saucer. This way they make a dainty little bed of yellows, cinnamons, maroons and orange in the centre of the table.

BUY KNOWN VARIETIES.

It pays every time to buy varieties that bear a standard name. That is due to a variety of reasons. Named varieties if sold by reputable houses are reliable. They insure the carrying out of any particular color scheme without the danger of having a plant or two turn out to be a conflicting color when it springs up and unfolds, thus marring or even utterly ruining a bed or border for an entire season.

Each variety of plant life, even in the same general family, has peculiarities of its own. For example, one of the geranium family grows tall and spindly.; another is 'fat' and spreading; one will be in full foliage; another is spare in leaf growth.

A really desirable bed of geraniums should be composed of one typical variety. The most desirable is one with deep, rich red flowers and many of them. Its stalks should be large and sturdy and the leaves handsome in shape and deep strong green. Each plant should have many branches.

Interesting Extracts From Old Fyles of The Weekly Post.

November 1st, 1878.—The Omemee correspondent states the price of bread in that village as 8c. per loaf. He also says there are 73 single and 32 widowed women there.

May 8th.—During the year there were 116 persons incarcerated in the County jail here.

Miss Nellie Slight, neice of Geo. Ingle, died very suddenly on Tuesday morning.

At 1.30 a. m. on Tuesday morning a fire broke out in the stables of the Osborne house, behind the Ontario Bank, The firemen could not get the hose in proper order owing to the main having been cut the day previous. This was remedied just in time to save the Montreal Bank building. As it was, five buildings were destroyed, viz., Osborne house, stable and sheds, Dr. Burrows' stable and shed, McLennan & Co's warehouse, Bank of Montreal stable. The warehouse of Woods and Son was also damaged considerably.

At Coboconk many barrels of herring were caught recently.

ONSLAUGHT ON ALCOHOL

British Doctors Reply to Recent Medical Declaration in Its Favor.

A London, Eng., despatch says: A counterblast to the recent declaration in favor of alcohol by leading physicians is now published by the medical press over the signatures of a dozen physicians, including Sir Frederick Treves, Sir Jas. Barr, and William Ewart. Referring to the recent manifesto, which was dealt with in cable despatches, the signatories say;

"We gravely dissent from much of its teaching, nor can we accept it as an authoratitive statement of recognized medical opinion on the matter."

After traversing some of the contentions of their colleagues, who advocated alcohol, the signatories further say:

"We strongly believe that alcohol is unnecessary as an article of consumption in the case of healthy men and women, and that its general use could be discontinued without detriment to the world's welfare. Further, believing that alcohol is one of the most fruitful sources of poverty, disease, and crime, we are pleased to add that it is now sparingly employed as a remedy by a majority of medical men."

Some Remarks on Things in General

By "THE STROLLER."

Evening Post of May 4th.

To-morrow we are to have the secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance, the Rev. Dr. Shearer, speak in several of our pulpits, on the work that the Alliance is doing, or seeking to do. We hope that every citizen of the town will endeavor to attend some one of the meetings, if for no other reason than to hear from first hands just what the work of the Alliance means. Some are of the impression, through ignorance, no doubt, that its main object is to make people go to church, or to be good by law. It is neither, and Dr. Shearer will no doubt surprise many—who may hear him for the first time—with the quiet, argumentative gentleness with which he handles his subject. As we all like to hear any subject discussed by one who is a thoroughly master of it, we can promise those who go that they will not be disappointed if they attend one or more of the meetings that he addresses. The sole subject of the Lord's Day Alliance is to conserve one day in seven as a rest day FOR EVERYBODY. There is nothing religious about it further than that it is one of God's commandments. The idea of making people go to church or be religious is very far from its work.

Outside of the religious aspect of the question altogether, we think it is conceded by everyone who thinks at all that man cannot work all the time and retain the vitality of mind and body that his Maker intended he should have. No one recognizes this quicker than the workingman, whether manual worker, designer or clerk, and yet, and to relate, no one is more easily led astray into thinking that he requires a respite from Sunday, that necessitates the constant employment of other classes of workingmen. It is evident that a question of selfishness or unselfishness. We noticed the other day a piano manufacturer advertising that they had listen to a good concert (presumably with his piano on the platform), than a sermon—so we thought of, at, at, but that does not make it right. His concert would mean the employment of from 25 to 50 or more musicians and singers, in order that the ears might be tickled. The same will those who want to enjoy the business of auto, but are too lazy to walk—they never think of the lively man who works 18 hours a day, seven days a week, of the train man, or the boat man, or the hundreds of others who provide service as necessary in the chain required to keep the ball rolling. The Alliance is a body of our best citizens who realize that for man's good and for get the best out of him, he must have one day in seven as a rest day, and if necessary, (which unfortunately it is in places), he must be compelled to keep it. There are many other points about it we would like to take up, especially the picture of this so-called Rational (?) Sunday Day League and possibly from time to time we will have an opportunity of commenting on them.

Our friend "Nemo" has written one or two very readable and interesting letters regarding the present condition of society. In answer to some remarks made by "One Who Has Suffered" he says in one letter to "Nemo" is a disciple of Debs, and, "Nemo" thinks, overlooks the most important things that run this world. The two things that rule everything here below are "Love", the greatest thing in the world, and the opposite, "Hate." Socialists—for we presume from his letters that "Nemo" is one of that stamp—overlooked both of these mighty forces in the arguments they put forth in support of their theories.

Just take one sentence as an example. In "Nemo's" first letter he says, "we are all the time making your UPPER CRUST, etc." A greater untruth never was uttered. Some are undoubtedly, and were so doing so, we would be no better than the animals of the forest.

Much as the Socialists may doubt it there is such a thing as love, and there are people—not as many as there ought to be, it is true—who govern their lives by it. This class of people build hospitals, take their lives in their hands and go out to people utterly alien to them in everything, except that they are God's children, and in heroic unselfishness live their lives for them. There are over 1900 of them meeting at the present time in Chicago for the purpose of the fact that they are permitted to do what they are doing, and there are tens of thousands doing similar work at home. One would imagine that if this eternal "environment" in "system" they speak of were removed, or as they doubt it, the profit we are all more or less supposed to be after, everything would be love and the goose hang high. This for of the matter is, if we may judge understand life at all in that it is more than meat, and the body more than raiment, and surely they do not seriously think that if they had everyone in last little class case, as they would seek to put him, that the lust of the flesh in its forms would be stilled? Do they suppose work, or the conveyance may his evil thoughts? Cain and Abel had a grand opportunity to try Socialism—but Abel was killed, and that not for profit, and so would others at this date, if it were not for the strong arm of the law, and it would be not for "profit" or as we mind of "profit", but just for pure devilishness. No, Mr. Socialist, you don't understand your business a little but—your premises to start out with are all wrong. This world is setting in very, very time as we did years ago. If you don't believe it, you have not read history aright, and we would advise you to read history to get that point.

One thing, however, that is not better, but worse, is that in our and the evil imaginations of man's heart and mind, and it were well for the great antidote, "love" working like leaven night and day, we would be no better than the Sodom people of Solom or Nero's Rome. But we have the promise that in the last, the leaven, the whole lump, will be leavened. Nearly nineteen hundred 1900 years, the best people of the world to-day are earnestly praying that the day may be hastened when the whole lump shall be leavened. We do not remember seeing any place where the Socialist body believes in praying for anything. They can hardly be expected to understand the argument.

We notice that the advanced woman has been having a dinner in Toronto and has been giving expression to her feelings in a rather strong Anglo-Saxon. It is said that, there is no word in the English language that conveys so much meaning, even to a foreigner, as the English word "damn." When used with force, even a Chinaman understands it, and it is not long before he adopts it in preference to the similar word of his own language. Some of the ladies to his feelings. We see that even the women—the advanced women—at this dinner actually used it, and the expression was approved. From the reports it appeared that one Mrs. Zak Hughes said that John Bright's theory, that "the power of woman was her silent influence in the home," was "a damnable doctrine," and repeated it with force. Mrs. Zak, we will undertake to say that there is not one—or not in the country—who is more glad in this her and not thousand. We don't know, of course, whether she is the mother of children or not, but she is evidently a good helpmate to children of such a mother, for it is the women who have to see that they will get from her.

We remember sitting, Mr. T. Hughes, in his younger days, used to come to our place and preach to men. He was great on Y. M. C. A. work, a Sunday School superintendent, and in fact in every thing intended to the uplifting of the young. Lately we understand he has held that the Mormons are just the stuff, and as far as he could see, in a recent visit to Utah, he could find no fault. We came down in the Rational (?) Sunday League that lately was in vogue, and open Sunday. We are afraid his environment of the place was not conducive to his better up-building. Times may be taken into account in events of the last century, and have followed the life of John Bright, who was, we think, a contemporary of more well-behaved man in the United Kingdom, not even excepting Gladstone, and his opinion on woman's influence in the home, we give an opinion on anything, unless he was against the Socialists, we go down with the majority of England speaking people in our time, and when Mrs. Hughes ventures to dictate to us opinions, we feel it reminds us of the song about Noah's wife, and we begin to think of our young, one line, of which went, "Says the ass to the elephant, who are you shoving."

There can be no question that the power of woman's influence, wise or unwise, in the home, and if there are other rooms and other places working out for a living, it would be better for our country. Women are not the equal of men, as the advanced woman uses the word, and never were intended to be. They are the weaker vessel, and the more weaker, demand our respect and care. At the creation the Creator said it was not good for man to be alone, and it has been verified ever since. When man is alone he sinks pretty near to the level of the hog. If you don't believe it, go to a stag party and see for yourself. Man needs woman to bring out in him all that is best in him, and in turn, for that she is doing the best work and a work in which no one can surpass or equal her. It is the weaker get the franchise and not 5 per cent. of the women want it. We see it now in municipal matters, and we think it will be well for the women who want it, as a whole, despite the Socialists, who are a very narrow minded woman of the "woman's rights" species.

EX-CHIEF NEVISON HONORED,

PRESENTED WITH ADDRESS AND COLD WATCH BY CITIZENS

Pleasant Affair at the Council Chamber Friday Night.

Evening Post of May 4th.

A number of citizens assembled last evening at the Council chamber for the purpose of presenting Mr. S. Nevison, Lindsay's late Chief of Police, with a slight acknowledgment of appreciation of his work while in that position;

"There were present His Honor Judge Harding, Police Magistrate Jackson, Mayor Vroomun, Reeve Begg, Deputy-reeve Jordan, I. Weldon, W. Jordan, Dr. Herriman, W. Hessor, J. Gillogly, W. McCarthy, G. H. Wilson, R. M. Beall, —. Netherton, Dr. F. Vroomun, and a number of others.

Mayor Vroomun took the chair, and before calling on the secretary to read the address, said that the position as mayor of the town had brought him into intimate relations with Mr. Nevison, and he was always proud to have such an excellent officer in the employ of the town. His work had been done conscientiously and well.

Deputy-reeve Geo. Jordan, secretary of the fund, read the following address:

To Stephen Nevison, esq.:

The citizens of Lindsay, on your departure from their midst, desire to exemplify their appreciation of your citizenship during your sojourn among them.

Your duties as Chief Constable have kept you prominently before the public, and although the duties incumbent upon such an office are not pleasant, you have always, they were effectively performed, and to the general satisfaction of the people.

In order that you may feel and carry with you the high regard in which you are held, and to express it in a more tangible manner, we desire that you accept this watch as a memento of our esteem, both as a citizens and an officer.

We have for you and your family the prosperity due you in your new home.

Signed on behalf of the citizens of Lindsay.

His Honor Judge Harding, in making the presentation of the watch said he was very pleased to have an opportunity of showing his individual esteem of the services of so excellent an officer. His knowledge of Mr. Nevison in his official capacity was very extensive owing to being a member of the town Police Commission, and he could say that the late Chief's work was always done in the most impartial and thorough manner, and the terms of the address reflected his excellent influence.

Magistrate Jackson said his acquaintance of Mr. Nevison had grown as the years had gone by, and he felt the town was losing an officer who would be heard to replace, and whose conduct in the town Police Commission, and he could say that the late Chief's work was always done in the most impartial and thorough manner, and the terms of the address reflected his excellent influence.

Magistrate Jackson said his acquaintance of Mr. Nevison had grown as the years had gone by, and he felt the town was losing an officer who would be heard to replace, and whose conduct in the town Police Commission, and he could say that the late Chief's work was always done in the most impartial and thorough manner, and the terms of the address reflected his excellent influence.

Magistrate Jackson said his acquaintance of Mr. Nevison had grown as the years had gone by, and he felt the town was losing an officer who would be heard to replace, and whose conduct in the town Police Commission was beyond reproach. It would give the town to retain him, even at a larger salary. Mr. Nevison had well considered his resignation, and he felt it was making the move for the best. He closed by wishing Mr. Nevison and family the greatest success in their new home.

Harry Jackson, I. Weldon, Dr. Herriman and Messrs. Hessor and Beall, spoke in the highest terms of the late Chief's excellent qualities as a citizen.

The watch is a 21 jewel Vacguard, in a 25 year gold-filled case, and represents a handsome piece of work. The watch bore the following inscription on the back: "Presented by the citizens of Lindsay, May 1st, 1907."

RECIPIENT'S REPLY.

Mr. Nevison, in reply said this kind expression of esteem will from his fellow citizens was quite unexpected on his part, and was very satisfactory and gratifying. He had endeavored to do his duty, and it was most pleasing to find that the Council had given to the satisfaction of so many citizens, and in such a handsome manner, expression of their appreciation. His residence in Lindsay, and his association with its citizens had been most pleasant, and it was with the greatest regret he had severed these connections, but as he had complied with the requirements of a police service he felt he would like a change, and was obliged to better his financial position, which he had every prospect of doing in a much larger place. Mr. Nevison asked the support and sympathy of the citizens for the new Chief. He had every well recommended as a capable officer and a man of good moral character. A kind word and a hearty handshake to the new appointee would stimulate and encourage him to do his best.

"Suffer little children to come unto Me, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."—Matt. xix. 14.

Rev. Dr. Gardiner, Belleville, has attained his fourteenth birthday. He has been seventy years a Methodist, sixty-six years a minister.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian church King-st., Toronto, is to have the largest organ in Canada. It will have 85 speaking stops and in consultation with the steady approach that in St. Bartholomew's church, New York.

Rev. Fr. McMahon, of Thorndhill, died recently at Brighton, Mass., after an illness of about five months. He was born in County Clare, Ireland, 55 years ago, came to Canada in 1876, and filled charges at Smithville, Uxbridge and Brechin before being appointed to Thorndhill.

His Lordship Bishop Scollard, of the Roman Catholic diocese of Sault Ste. Marie, spent a few days of this week visiting his parents in Ennismore. The work in the diocese over which he has charge, is the most portious of the province is prosperous. New churches are being erected in different parts of Algoma and Nipissing, and the membership of all the parishes is increasing. The population, which is necessarily rapidly is made up to a large extent of families from Quebec, and they are making excellent settlers. Wednesday of Vce. Archdeacon Casey, town, and gave the benediction of the Blessed Sacrament at St. Mary's that evening. Thursday morning he left for Toronto on his way north.

A MISSION SACRIFICE.

A Toronto despatch says: Rev. A. J. Vale, of Lindsay, was in Toronto yesterday and visited a number of the Anglican church offices. Mr. Vale leaves next day as a missionary to the Mackenzie River district. Where he will remain until the Spring of 1908, after which he will return to his present mission station Herschel Island at the mouth of the Mackenzie River. This mission is the most northerly one in the British Empire.

SERMONS DELIVERED AT THE CHURCHES LAST SUNDAY.

Evening Prest of May 6th.

Ven. Archdeacon Casey was the celebrant at both services at St. Mary's yesterday. Rev. Fr. Collins giving the instruction. The gospel for the day was from St. John, xiv., 23-30:

"At that time, Jesus said to his disciples, Amen, amen, I say to you: If you ask the Father any thing in my name, he will give it you. Hitherto you have not asked any thing in my name; ask and you shall receive, that your joy may be full. These things I have spoken to you in proverbs. The hour cometh when I will no more speak to you in proverbs, but will show you plainly of the Father. In that day, you shall ask in my name; and I say not to you that I will ask the Father for you, for the Father himself loveth you, because you have loved me, and have believed that I came out from God. I came forth from the Father, and am come into the world: again I leave the world, and I go to the Father. His disciples say to him: Behold, now thou speakest plainly, and speakest no proverb. Now we know that thou knowest all things, and thou needest not that any man should ask thee: by this we believe that thou comest forth from God."

At high mass the gospel was chosen for his text the words, "And He gave him to his mother." Heralding the death of the young man Lazarus, the speaker pictured the grief of the afflicted mother, which was so deep and despairing that the compassionate Saviour, at sight of her sorrow, bade He restored the young man to life. The speaker then heard Jesus Christ ta always touched by the prayer of the mother for her loved ones, and the blessed mother of God is ever ready to intercede with her divine Son on their behalf when her powerful aid is invoked. The sermon was a pathetic one, and was listened to with deep attention.

LORD'S DAY ALLIANCE WORK

Secretary J. C. Shearer Visits Lindsay—Defines the Work.

Evening Prest of May 6th.

"Science demonstrates, experience uniformly proves, that the normal vitality of body and mind cannot be maintained without one day of rest out of every seven." Thus spoke Rev. J. C. Shearer, secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance, in his morning sermon at the Presbyterian church yesterday.

A large congregation was in attendance and listened attentively to the words of the rev. gentleman. Earnest and persuasive, following his arguments with forcible and appropriate illustrations, Mr. Shearer championed the cause of the Sabbath. "The Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath," Mark, 2nd chap., 27th verse, was the text of the sermon. "The Sabbath law is of divine authority," said the speaker in a vein without only on tables of stone, but on our fleshly hearts. "Are the men on the G.T.R. working 12 hours a day, seven days a week, for 365 days a year, over the electric keyboard, under a heavy, nervous strain, and a sense of great responsibility, free men?" The day of rest, continued Mr. Shearer, is a gift to all men for their good, physically, intellectually and spiritually. There is a general disposition to misinterpret the scriptures on this point. Avarice denies the Sabbath was made for man, and claims it was made for money-making. To illustrate this point Rev. Mr. Shearer quoted from The Voice, the Winnipeg labor organ. In Winnipeg the street railway owners, McKenzie & Mann, wanted Sunday trifling, the labor unions were opposed to this, and in its editorial column The Voice said, "The Sabbath was made for man and not for McKenzie & Mann".

We should limit the licensing of aliens until they respect our laws", continued the speaker. "We are importing a good deal of avarice". An American author will encourage in the maritime provinces, informed me that it is remonstrated with for the operating on Sunday, that he "wasn't a slave of all sigma law entitled to his gospel, and would go on to sin and hell." The speaker then read an extract forbidding him. Canadians, however, are exceedingly ingenuous in finding excuses. Men are now at cost to them, and can be replaced at no expense. There is no remaining consideration irresistably compelling Christians to give their men the Sabbath.

"Ice cream soda sold on day only is a medicine," is a sign used by druggists in Toronto at one time to evade the law.

"The Sabbath was made for man in particular, and for man in general," is another and a selfish, misinterpretation of the scriptures.

"Not to accept any service which swerves labor on another on the Sabbath, unless the service is absolutely necessary," is a good motto to follow. Press (or rather improperly, irrational) Sunday League, made up of Jews, Sabbatarians and of enemies of the Sabbath, advocate the running of cars, keeping of refreshment booths and news stands, open. Selfishness is the prominent feature of their union.

The recent Lord's Day Act, which was passed, gives 100,000 Canadians relief from Sunday work, and would give many more relief if enforced strictly.

In conclusion Mr. Shearer made a pleasant appeal for prayer to God, personal service and financial aid for the Sabbath cause of God. To contributors donating over $50 annually, the Lord's Day Advocate is sent free.

Rev. Mr. Shearer preached a similar sermon at the Baptist church in the evening.

EVENING MASS MEETING

Sunday evening, after the close of the services of the Lord's Day observations in town a large and representative mass meeting was held in Lindsay city hall, presided over by the Rev. Mr. Shearer on the Lord's Day Alliance of Canada.

The speaker went on to say that in France, which had an open Sunday for 50 years, the situation had terminated in the Sunday Rest law, which was passed by 370 to 70. Other countries which had a Sunday Rest law are the Argentine Republic and even China, which by Imperial Edict recognized the Christian Sunday as a holiday.

Christian men and women possess a mighty power which few recognize. This is a Christian Parliament. The members of parliament, to do all in their power to defeat the Lord's Day Alliance Act. Everyone can write and when a member receives from fifty to one hundred of the letters a day he is liable to be influenced. When the Act was passed was not the last time Christians should be brought to Parliament. Publishing must go right along to meet new requirements.

At the time of the passing of the Act the church newspapers were in trouble over the Sunday excursion law, but after it was passed some were given; the steamboat and railway companies were not allowed to run on that day, but they did want to introduce it and might be go right on, because they said it was necessary. The main part of the fight was over Thursday afternoon, endeavoring to show that it was necessary and the people said, "Allow people massing facts to show that it was not, and nearly all railway traffic in Great Britain, Holland, Belgium and France was stopped, and therefore why was it not possible to stop it in Canada? Mr. Shearer visited the Chicago & Western and Chicago & St. Paul railway, with limitations, as also did the International Commission, and on the railway people and the Lord's Day Alliance arrived at a fairly good compromise, and it was passed in the House of Commons successfully, but in going through the Senate it was badly mutilated by amendments. While the amendments were again voted on the Senate was forced to yield to the wishes of Canada, and is to-day.

At the close of the address envelopes were passed around for contributions to the fund, the name and address of the donor to be sent in on the envelope, and those giving over 50c to receive the monthly report.

The meeting was closed by singing the doxology, the Rev. Mr. Mayah pronouncing the benediction.

GOLDEN WEDDING CELEBRATION

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Davies Showered With Valuable Gifts.

On Thursday, May 2nd, 1907, Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Davies celebrated their golden wedding under happy auspices. Mr. and Mrs. Davies, whose maiden name was Mary Ann Francis, were married in the Baptist church, Cardiff, Glamorganshire, Wales, by the Rev. Mr. Tilley, on the 2nd of May, 1857. Their children—six sons and two daughters—were all present, with the exception of the second oldest son, H. M. Davies, of St Louis, U. S. Those present were Mr. George D. Davies, East Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Thos. J. Davies and children, Lindsay; Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Pinney, of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Walker Lamb and children, Fenelon Falls; Mr. and Mrs. William F. Davies and children, Fenelon Falls; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Davies and children, Lindsay; and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Arthur Davies, Lindsay. Mr. and Mrs. Davies have eight children and 32 grandchildren.

Gifts were received from the family—a gold watch and a purse of golden sovereigns from the Lodge Friends. Addresses were delivered, respectively by the Rev. C. W. Welch. The following was read when the family gifts were presented:

"Dear Father and Mother, We, your children, have great cause to be thankful that we have met together on this pleasant occasion, and in celebrating your golden wedding. We realize that providence has been kind to you in sparing you to enjoy fifty years of married life, and we all pay that you will be spared to enjoy many more years together. We regret that one of our number is unavoidably absent, but we know she present desires to see a little small way the esteem in which you are held by your family and friends, and we ask you to accept this watch and purse of gold as a slight token of our affection and trust that you will be spared to enjoy many years as happy as those gone by.

Your Loving Children.

POTTERY CORNER CROSSING ACAIN

Another Runaway at That Point—Narrow Escape Recorded.

Evening Post of May 4th.

Late Thursday evening the G. T. R. crossing at Pottery Corners was the scene of an exciting mishap in which a horse, buggy, two people, panic, an auto, and a train of cars figured.

About 5-20 p. m. Mr. John Walker, son of Mr. David Walker, South Ops, was driving homeward, and when about a mile from Lindsay, and approaching the crossing, Mr. Dr. White, returning to town in his Winton engine, also. Mr. Walker, hearing the latter toot-toot, he jumped out to find the animal got the auto, and just than the G. T. R. train coming along on its way to Lindsay, and its whistle for the crossing sounded. Mr. Walker, who was with a few yards frightened the horse, and kindly that it dashed forward, leaving Mr. Walker to the ground, unhurt. Mr. Fac Jackson, of Bobcaygeon, Thornton, a neighbor of Mr. Walker's, happened to be at Gooch, and he caught the unalarmed animal just in the nick of time—few seconds and weaker and either would have been cast into a nearby cut, and perhaps killed.

In the meantime, Dr. White, who had passed before the runaway, happened to look back and note the unusual occurrences, and so he hastened back to aid Mr. Walker, who he recognized and which enjoyed a service shock. After a little time Mr. and Mrs. Walker and wife were driven home by Mr. Thornton.

Toronto an Ocean Port.

The two new steamers, "Dorawa" and "Moravia" of the Canadian Lake and St. Lawrence Line, recently for Toronto with full cargoes of goods consigned to M. and H. Samuel, Johnson and Co., metal merchants, of that city. Steamers will not break bulk in Montreal as in continuing as the entire cargo is for the firm above mentioned. While this is not an established service, it is an indication of what may be expected in the future, with deepened channels, regular service might be established, making Toronto practically an ocean port.

Heart Strength, or Heart Weakness, means Nervous Prostration, Sleeplessness, Palpitation, Nervousness, Nervously, not one weak heart in a hundred is, in fact, actually diseased. In the treatment of a modern life little nerve force actually is lost in fretting, worrying, fuming, fretting, and the remainder is used up in overwork, over-pressure, overstrain, under-nourishing, more sapping than anything. When the heart is weak it sends weak blood to the stomach and kidneys also have to bear the brunt of the trouble.

Dr. Shoop's Restorative is the best medicine for Heart Weakness in the world. Dr. Shoop's Restorative has in it the most concentrated, most vitalizing tonic, for the nerves, for the cause of all this painful, palpitating, sickness. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is not a patent medicine, nor a special prescription—it does not claim to cure everything, it does not claim to be a "Wonderful" cure-all, nor even a "Great" heart tonic. Heavy Berlin Licenses.

The Berlin Town Council has fixed the following licenses for certain amusements: Bowling alleys, $50, and $10 for each additional alley; rifle or shooting galleries, $25; roller skating rinks, $20; each other instrument of mechanical device for amusement, $25; each other alley, $10; football game, $10; shuffle board game, $10; a music, moving picture or concert hall, $50.

The Town's Sanitary Welfare.

Sanitary Inspector Douglas has issued posters calling upon owners or occupants of premises to clean up their premises and placed in a sanitary condition on or before May 15th, and upon Collector Smith to see that the wells or wells cleaned out before July 1st, if they desire to avoid prosecution. The notice is all right—quite in accord with the sanitary laws of the town. What is required if we are to have a clean looking and healthy town is that the order shall be enforced firmly and impartially. Last year the Sanitary Inspector now has a free hand owing to the resignation of a temperance man calling on him to consult the chairman of the Board of Health respecting every official act, the blame will be his if the old-time nuisance and miss plan is continued. In Orillia the sanitary inspector is given satisfactory during the week set apart for inspection, and looking after and inspecting the premises of every citizen, and making an entry of the state of sanitary and condition of premises.

Lecture at St. Joseph's Academy.

Those who were present at St. Joseph's Academy on Tuesday April 30 will long remember the lecture given by Prof. Kylie. The subject was "St. Francis of Assisi" in the morning and afternoon the lecturer presented the life and teaching of this apostle of poverty in a manner that charmed his hearers. A piano solo given by Miss Clapp, a graduate of the Paris Conservatory of Music, was most artistically rendered. A vocal solo by Miss McIlthurney, with violin, cello and piano accompaniments was much appreciated. The violin solo by Miss M. Cairns, accompanied by Mrs. P. Kennedy, concluded the programme and became a very pleasant evening to a close.

TO IMPROVE YOUR APPEARANCE

Retain your youthful freshness so that no one can remark, "she is past her prime." To appear younger and more attractive than the average woman you must be particular that your Hair shows no sign of being faded or grey. Use the DORENWEND TRANSFORMATION, POMPADOUR, WAVE, CURL or SWITCH will embellish nature's defects. Even if you have plenty of your own hair those light and airy artifices may be worn over it, giving the appearance of growing your hair to the waist if desired, and hair can be permanently set in color and texture, so that detection is out of the question.

Now, if you have in your mind any predjudice regarding artificial hair, it will ever be dissipated on seeing how natural and becoming our productions will prove in your case.

CONSULT PROFESSOR DORENWEND

DURING THIS VISIT

Advice regarding your hair and how you can make the most of it. Also regarding the treatment of your scalp, and the treatment of baldness will be given free of charge. We are established in Toronto, bearing in mind that our styles are originated and designed by Professor Dorenwend, and they cannot be procured from any other house. Hence you get the latest styles and novelties.

MAN TO MAN—ABOUT BALDNESS

If you are bald, or partially so, you must realize that it makes you look old. Notwithstanding the claims made by many head and hair preparations, there is no one before wearing a natural hair covering simply because you have tried everything and failed to secure a growth on your head. Thousands of men, who thought the same as you do, are to-day wearing a and instead of carrying the handicap, that baldness proved to them, they are now enjoying the advantage of "looking young"—and that is what counts today in the world of progress and success.

It is a scientific invention and may be worn without fear of detection—impossible to remove from the head unless at will; not the least clumsy or uncomfortable. They set so gracefully and perfectly and wearer so comfortably.

Now do not neglect this opportunity—come and see for yourself. A few minutes demonstration will convince you that a Dorenwend Patent Toupee is far ahead of any wig or affair that are claimed to be "just as natural."

A LONG-LIVED FAMILY

Two Generations From Culloden Moor—Ops and Lindsay interested.

The following sketch, accompanied by an admirable likeness of Mrs. McDonald, appeared in the Farming section of the Globe recently:

On the sixteenth of April, one hundred and sixty years ago, a bottle was fought on Culloden Moor which, though the numbers engaged were few and the battle a short one, has generally been held as one of the milestones of modern history. Five generations of men have lived since that day, and still there is living in Fenelon Falls a lady of fine father was a drummer boy in the small army of Prince Charles, and beat the "pas de charge" as the brave Highlanders dashed through the blinding rain and sleet upon the English ranks.

"The lady does not know anything of the early history of her father, Donald McPherson, beyond the fact that he was born in the Isle of Skye and was ten years of age at the battle of Culloden. He, no doubt, like many another Highland youth, inherited the belief that it was his duty to follow his chief to the field. Some years after he had grown up to manhood he entered the royal army and served seven years under Lord Howe, and of the seven hundred men who formed his ship's complishment only one enrolled him in physical strength. Some years thereafter he enlisted into the army, where he served out his term of service and after Culloden he never saw the smoke of battle.

"At the close of his soldiering days he took up the occupation of a gardener and married Catherine Gillespie, who died without issue. After he had passed his eighty-second birthday he married a second time, choosing Mary McKaskil; and in the year 1821, with his wife and one boy, he emigrated to Canada and made his first stopping place in the township of Somerville. Here, in Septembered the second, and the only other child and the subject of the present sketch, his daughter Ann was born.

"He secured his first employment with the late D. B. McDonald, P.L.S., who was beginning up a party to survey the township of Ops. After the survey was completed, he travelled to different points before settling in Ops, where he passed the remainder of his days. On the 16th of December, 1857, after an illness of three weeks, he passed away and his remains were interred in the Ops cemetery. Up to the 40 preceding his death he had never an hour's illness or known the taste of medicine.

"At the age of twenty years his daughter married Doyald McDonald, by whom she had four sons and three daughters. In 1879 her husband died, shortly after which she moved into Fenelon Falls to live with her daughter, Mrs. Gee Martin. Here, in the second half of her eighty-sixth years, in the company of her grandchildren, she is enjoying a green old age, with all her faculties as vigorous as those of most persons of half her years.

We are informed by a member of Mr. Martin's family that Mrs. McDonald's mother, as well as her father, lived to be more than a hundred years old.

Mill Burned at Fenelon Falls.

A sawmill in Fenelon Falls, operated by Bert Whaley, was burned to the ground on Saturday morning at an early hour. The mill was located near the Standard Chair Works, and was the property of the Pulp Company. Mr. John Carew, of town rented it for two years. About a dozen men were employed. Incendiarism is the cause of the fire are not available.

Cattle For Fenelon Ranch.

Fourteen fine stockers cattle were unloaded at the Grand Trunk on Monday morning. They were bought by Mr. Nathan Day, the well known farmer, and are for the Cattle ranch of Day Farm on the shore of Sturgeon Lake. Mr. Day is going with a Post reporter Mr. Day said he had a 300-acre ranch for his cattle. This comprises the finest of pasture land. Some 80 cattle will be pastured this year on the ranch.

CASTORIA.

A Co-ahead Fenelon Boy.

Under the above heading the Fenelon Falls Star says: The farming and live stock section of Wednesday's Toronto World, contains an excellent photograph and a short sketch of the career of Prof. W. H. Day, B.Ag. Professor of Physics in the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph. Prof. Day is a son of Mr. Nathan Day, of Lakeview Farm, Fenelon.

A Military Road.

(From the Canadian Courier.)

An important work is being carried on by the Dominion Government in North-west Canada, consisting which people in the Eastern provinces have never heard of, namely, a military road from Edmonton to the Yukon Territory. For two years the construction has been under way in charge of the Royal Northwest Mounted Policemen from Fort Saskatchewan to the road strectches seven hundred miles away to Fort Selkirk, in the Peace River, and then taken an almost direct course over the Rocky Mountains for two hundred miles to Fort Grindstone in British Columbia and thence in a north-westerly direction for seven hundred miles more to Atlin. This road is 45 feet wide, only eight feet, and at regular intervals of twenty miles small rest houses have been erected a building place. The principal work so far has been from the western side of the mountains, and last fall the construction party, under the command of Captain Cuinee, reached Fort Grindstone, where they have wintered. This summer another party of workmen in charge of Inspector Nelson Cassell, of Whitehorse, will push his work from Atlin until the two forces which they hope to do before winter.

Arrested at Penetanguishene.

News of Friday; R. W. Robinson was arrested this morning at Penetanguishene after evading the officers at Midland, charged with fraud. Robinson was a former tax-collector for the Bond Tailoring Company, 9 Adelaide-st west. After being discharged from the company he kept possession of his sample cases and credentials. It is charged that he has drawn small drafts on the Bond Co. for goods, Lindsay, Brockville, Port Hope, amounting in all to about $100

Never Touched Him.

(Washington Post.)

Captain Ryan, the new British naval attaché, sat at a dinner in Washington:

"The strength of the heads of some of our high officials is quite incredible. At a harvest supper, a feast similar in its way to Thanksgiving dinner, there was an old farmer who drank a good deal of cheap cider. The moment his glass was filled he would leave it off, and then, of course, it would be filled again. But the old fellow grew quieter and quieter the more champagne he drank. A frown settled on his forehead. His eyes flashed anxiety under his heavy gray brows. Finally when the waiter filled his glass with wine for the twelfth or thirteenth time, he shoved his hand and said:

"James, when you are going to bring the wine from the cellar, put mixtral waiters are getting tedious."

IMPORTANT NEWS OF THE DISTRICT

Told in Interesting Form by the Bright Correspondents of The Post at the Various Centres.

CAMBRAY

(Special to The Post.)

The 24th of Queen Victoria Day promises to be a day of enjoyment to all visitors to our village as well as the members of our own community. Baseball matches in the afternoon and a football match between Bryan's and Cambray scholars will be followed by a supper served at the residence of Mr. D. Bryan by the ladies of the Presbyterian church. This in turn will be followed by a good musical program in which our own excellent talent will be assisted by visitors from outside points. A good booth will be on the grounds, in which will be found all things sweet and fit to eat. Proceeds of the evening go to aid of the church fund. Admission 25c, children 15c.

KIRKFIELD.

(From Our Own Correspondent)

The Rev. Dr. Gilmour was greatly surprised on his address and a well filled purse of gold by his congregation being bearing for his 40 years ministry.

Mrs. Sukloff attended the wedding of her brother in Toronto on Wednesday of last week.

BOBCAYGEON.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The annual meeting of the Board of Trade was held in the public library last Monday evening, and was well attended. Mr. O. Monroe, the president, was in the chair, and Mr. John Conway acted as secretary in the absence of Mr. G. D. Watt. The election of officers for the ensuing year was the first business, and resulted as follows; Hon. pres., Mr. Monroe; res. pres., Mr. Hickson; secretary-treasurer, Wm. Conway, and directors, A. E. Bottum, and C. E. Stewart as members of the executive. The president stated that a buyer had visited him during the past week, with the object of starting a cheese factory here for one day in the week. The market project was fully discussed by those present, and the secretary ordered to write to a few of the towns about the size of Bobcaygeon, that has been conducting a market for some time, to find out how matters have worked in those places, and with what success or failure, and then the Board will decide at its next regular meeting what shall be done. The regular April meeting is to be the last Monday in every month.

A meeting of the Fish and Game Protective Association was held here on Mr. M. Boyd & Co's office on last Wednesday evening, according to adjournment. There was a large attendance, and thirteen new members joined, paid their fees, and sign the subjects that were discussed. The subjects of protecting the fish and game, and of hunting and fishing on Sundays were fully discussed, and the following resolution was passed, "Resolved that this Association see that the fish and game laws are not referring on Sunday fishing and hunting, and fully observed in this district, and that the secretary notify the proprietors, asking them to see that the local magistrate and the law enforced, and that the creatives of this Association have notices served and put up in the hotels and stores and boarding houses here, for the instruction of hunters, fishermen, and tourists." The meeting adjourned to meet on the 10th of June.

The Ontario Department of Agriculture has offered four prizes of $25, $20, $15 and $10, for competitions in standard field crops for 1907. This is to be limited to the Agricultural Societies of Ontario, and there are to be at least ten competitors in each, and each field must contain at least five acres. The instructions with regard to the competition arrived here by mail on Wednesday noon, and the secretary, Mr. W. Hickson, had the application filled by Thursday evening, for a competition on white oats, and sent to the Department on Friday morning. The farmers of this district took hold of it at once, and it is hoped that our application will be filled in time for the competition.

The jingle of bells, as some farmers glided along to the church on Saturday morning made us think of Christmas, and true enough, some were wishing one another a merry Christmas.

Mr. W. A. McIntyre, one of our resident citizens, was presented by his club here last Wednesday evening on the eve of his departure to Gotha, with a handsome gold ring, bearing the inscription, "Good luck." The fellows made a suitable reply and gave expression present a hearty shake of the hand, with a good by, and everyone wished him good luck in the great silver district.

Mr. Dan Whetung has made a record in cutting 600 cords in 25 days this spring. At 20 cents a cord, which is about an average price, he has made the neat sum of $119 for his month's work. All Indians, of the Hiawatha Indians, has reach the 600 mark and not properly so, Dan. If he does, Dan will be present at Kinmount with his spring catch has been good enough for Dan.

PENIEL.

(From Our Own Correspondent)

The Quarterly communion service, held here, was well attended. Our pastor, Rev. C. E. Cragg, preached a sermon suitable for the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Bailey are visiting their brother, Mr. H. L. Squires, of Peterboro.

Miss Ettie Wright, who has spent the last month at her home here, returned to Toronto on Monday.

Our annual Sunday school meeting was held last Wednesday, at which it was decided to hold our anniversary on the second Sunday in June and 24th.

We are glad to see Mr. John Trotheway around again after his severe illness.

Mr. J. Moore, of Pension Falls, visited at his brother's, Mr. W. Moore's lately.

Several of the young men of this vicinity have recently been elected as Beaverton and report a good catch.

Dr. J. A. White, of Lindsay, accompanied by his sister, Miss McWatters, had a flying visit to his sister, Mrs. C. W. Hamilton, last week, on the Oddfellows' banquet at Cannington on Friday.

The increased attendance at our Sunday evening meeting testifies to their popularity among the young people.

ROHALLION.

(Special to The Post.)

Before the departure of Mr. Lakeman and family for their new home in Clear Water, Alberta, a number of their friends presented them with the following address:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Melanjn,—We, a number of your friends and neighbors, having learned of your intention of moving from our midst to reside in one of the prairie provinces of Western Canada, have taken the opportunity of meeting you this evening to express our sentiments of regret at your departure. We will miss you when you're gone. The majority of us have lived in this locality for, nearly acquainted with you for many years, and consequently we are old neighbors and friends, have always found you to be good neighbors, and did nature allow, we would wish you to remain amongst us. Your trouble you were always ready to help and do what you could to lighten their burdens, and we, in our less will be gain to your new neighbors, and we realize that it is hard to bid farewell to friend and neighbor, but we hope for the best. The best friends must part, and now we bid you a farewell, and we ask you to kindly accept of this purse as a token of our esteem, and as a token of our love and . . . for you and your family, and we, as you are about to leave us, our best wishes go with you. Our sincere hope and prayer is that you and your family may have a safe and pleasant journey, and that God's blessing may rest on you and yours. Signed on behalf of the old friends, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick McGee, Mr. and Mrs. Francis McElroy, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Burke.

OMEMEE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The health of the village is excellent, no contagious diseases existing, not even the measles, which are rampant throughout the county.

The drunken disorder reported in last week's police court circles at Peterboro, was on Omemee lady, as reported.

There are scarcely any drunks on our streets these days, and dumb animals are no nearer in danger.

The union Sunday school service is to be held on 23rd Sabbath at 3 p. m., on the Presbyterian church, conducted by the Rev. Mr. Pecover, the very interesting and practical service is looked forward to by all.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wood spent Sunday with friends in Lindsay.

We are going to have electric light so the Council decided at Monday night's meeting.

Our Council and Board of Trade met the G.T.R. officials on Tuesday to the station, regarding the removal of our station, which is under consideration.

Our band will begin their open concerts shortly, weather permitting.

Mr. and Mrs. Keith, of Toronto, have been visiting Dr. and Mrs. Keith here.

IRONDALE.

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Owing to the cold weather and frosty nights the farmers will be a little late with their spring work.

Mr. and Mrs. Watson and family have moved to Gooderham. We wish them success in their new home. Mr. and Mrs. Walsh now occupy the station here. Mr. Walsh takes the position formerly held by Mr. Watson, as foreman of this section.

Master Lawrence Barr had the misfortune to hurt his face very badly, last week, but he is able to attend school again.

Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell, also Master Stanley Maxwell, were visitors in Kinmount Friday last.

A number of ladies took advantage of the fine Sunday afternoon of last week, to gather in the bluebell and violet, and rapids of this picturesque and beautiful portion of Haliburton County.

Last Friday being Arbor Day, a general cleaning up took place at the school. A new flag pole was purchased by Mrs. Newnall and placed in the school room.

Mr. Wm. Hinds, also Mr. Orval Hinton and Mr. J. Flood, were visitors in Kinmount last week.

Sunday School will be held in the English church here next Sabbath at two o'clock.

WOODVILLE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Markets here every Thursday.

Miss Pearl Prouse, of Oakwood, is visiting friends in town.

Mr. J. Prouse is preparing to build a stable on his property.

We are sorry to hear that Miss Gertrude Kirkland is confined to the house through illness.

Mr. Ed. Kirkland spent a few days in Toronto last week.

Mr. Ed. Grigg was in Lindsay on business last Tuesday.

Mrs. H. Robertson spent Tuesday in Lindsay.

The concert held under the auspices of the Oddfellows' Band on Friday last was a rare treat to the people. Owing to the busy season of the year the crowd was not as large as usual.

Mr. Taylor and Mr. McGill, of Fenelon Falls, were visitors here this week.

Our boys have started practising ball and expect to have a good team this year.

Mr. Herb Barnes and son of Cookstown, visited his father over Sunday.

CAMBRAY

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Lieutenant Governor Mackay is best Mode of pure lead and oil, in all the artistic shades, at Lindsay's, the local agent.

Mr. J. Eagle has purchased the house and lot now occupied by Mr. Geo. Ward.

Miss Nina Brown, who has been spending the winter in Kirkfield, has returned home.

Mr. Armour Hancock, was in Toronto for a few days this week. He visited his brother, who recently underwent a serious operation.

Mr. Stewart, teacher, of Uphill, was at our village on Sunday last week.

Mr. A. Aiguier, who opened a butcher shop in our village last fall, has moved to Lindsay.

Miss Carew, our school teacher, attended the concert given in Lindsay on Tuesday evening.

On Sunday, May 5th, the Methodists held their quarterly meeting at the Methodist church, Cambray. The service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Ashton, presiding minister, and the service was very impressive throughout. On the following Monday the official Board met to transact the regular business.

The Indian Girl met the same day, at the home of Mrs. James Hickson. The evening spent was held under the auspices of the Epworth League at the residence of the latter, the one was very large, and a pleasant evening was spent. The proceeds amounted to thirty-five dollars, which was added to the Methodist organ fund.

SONYA

(Special to The Post.)

Mr. George R. Williamson sold to Mr. George McLeod, of Fingerboard, the fancy bred colt Gordon Erskine (2830). He is sired by the renowned stock horse Erskine's Style (2432) Dam by Lewis Gordon, and dam by Scottish Champion; 3rd dam by Prince of Wales, 4th dam by wonderful Lad. It will be seen from the foregoing breeding that this colt has the best of blood, and should prove an acquisition to the district community in which he travels. It is one of the toppest stallions to be seen anywhere. With the best of feet and fetlocks, which is the great feature in the horse, he stands out to-day. We congratulate Mr. McLeod on his enterprise in securing such a fine colt, now rising four years—W.

MANILLA

(Special to The Post.)

Misses Clara McInnis and Nelson Dreiver, two of our boys who have done well in the Cobalt silver fields are spending a few weeks at home.

Citizens of all classes are unanimous in expressing their regret at the resignation of Mr. S. Chaplin and family to Bloomham. Mr. Chaplin has successfully run the commercial house for the past two years, and in his departure lost an energetic, satisfactory, alike to the dealers and the public. The gambling spirit, which was in evidence at the proceedings of Local Option, was entirely absent from Mr. Chaplin's sale, and people could play checkers for fun—but for nothing else, and yet they seemed to have as much fun as the desire of all that Mr. Chaplin was prosper in his new home. Mr. Grier Atkinson is the new lessee of the commercial and is having it fitted repaire made. We bespeak for him a successful business.

DONNEYVILLE

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Miss Gibbs in writing about a very pleasurable man who is now on this continent, says that Mr. Stead was at least three months in prison. At one time I thought he should have been sent to the penitentiary for life, but just now he declares himself a Christian and thinks that God bless him! Great men have laid down their lives for his sake, and he as yet apart from converting intelligent men, has converted a million signed. To-morrow the Home Rule treaty is to be signed between the British Parliament, but Mr. Stead says there is then the Home Rule Bill to be passed, and he hope that when cathy lords cease to exist Ireland will be a free and happy nation. At present Ireland's friends are wondering and anxious, and we hope the dawn of prosperity is at hand.

Mrs. D. M. O'Leary is in Lindsay visiting her father, who is ill. Those who know Mrs. O'Leary are real souls, wherever she is away. We hope her father may soon recover.

Again I have the pleasure of reporting two more births—a boy at John Sullivan's, and a girl at Frank Milloy's. The Donneyville babies are extremely handsome, but I have to report these matters every few weeks. I don't wish to enter into any more particulars. Some of our schools are already overcrowded, but the parents say, "Let in and additional."

Owing to the arrival of the C.P.R. gang, the population of the village are becoming somewhat crowded. They speak about repairing walks, electric lights, sewerage, and you even hear to send for and invoved the mistakes made by the people of Lindsay in days gone by.

Mrs. Coudgon, of Lindsay, is visiting her sister, Mrs. John C. O'Leary this week.

The lateness of the season did not prevent the people of this locality from observing Arbor day. In fact, Arbor Day came in A. D. 1907 in Edward Houlihan and others had been planting trees and shrubs in their places. The schools, too, have been doing considerable tidying up. We present a respectable appearance. The members of St. Luke's congregation have purchased from Mr. A. John Morrissey, a magnificent site for a Catholic church. It will be quite convenient to the church and more central for the congregation. The proprietors than the former parcel very high price. Land in this locality has been in existence for over twenty-five years, and naturally enough a great deal of money, and valuablements for it, but just now we have to congratulate the proprietors, so were reluctantly compelled to part with it.

Mr. William Rodkins, of the Inland Revenue, visited Mr. W. Fitzgerald, P. L. S. of Peterboro, were visitors at Fr. McGuire on Sunday last.

Mr. Louis Harrington died suddenly on Wednesday morning. The Harringtons are numerous in this locality and have lost one of the twenty-seventh year, was a son of Thomas Harrington, and died as he was hurt, and since has been in poor health. He was a favorite child of the family. His funeral was on Thursday morning, the remains being interred in the Catholic cemetery.

There is no one is saying a word about the weather, but from all the players that are being said now we think they will be a change.

I was glad when you called our attention to the fact that to the real need of signing our name to the letter we wrote, because at times there are unavoidable mistakes, and, ignorant ones, whose items that, if printed, would be no credit to the locality, where they are supposed to reside. Yours, Mr. Editor, I have watched this and found that the chief cause of the vexatious of vexatious of malignant items, is the ignorance of our kindness in having called our attention to it, and I will sign my name to all correspondence.

Inspector Knight visited No. 12 on April 5th. The improvements he recommended, he was pleased with. Mr. Knight's report, on the whole, is a good one. The attendance is good, and the pupils are making good progress. We have found things entirely satisfactory.

Mr. Henry Matthews was in Toronto last week on business.

THE CHASE.

(By Sir Walter Scott)

Faint from further distance borne,
Were heard the clanging hoof and horn.
As Chief, who hears his warder call "To arms! The foemen storm the wall!"
The antlered monarch on the wave
Sprung from his leathery couch in haste.
But ere his first career he took,
The dew drops from his flanks he shook;
Like crystal leader proud and high
Tossed his beam'd frontlet to the sky;
A moment gazed adown the dale,
A moment snuffed the tainted air,
A moment listened to the cry,
That thicken'd as the chase drew nigh;
Then, as the headmost foes appeared,
With one brave bound the copse was cleared.
And, stretching forward free and far,
Sought the wild heaths of Uamvar.

CORRESPONDENTS' LETTERS

VROOMANTON—BROCK.

(Special to The Post.)

A large and representative gathering of the parishioners of Beaverton, Brock and Georgina, assembled at the residence of Rev. M. Cline, P. P., Vroomanton, Thursday, May 2nd, to say farewell to him, and to convey to him in a well worded address (which was beautifully engrossed) their sincere regret at his leaving to part with a pastor, who during the seven years he had been with them had won their affection and esteem, shown by his many kind acts of heart and hand. At the same time he was presented with a purse of gold, a gift from the parishioners of the parish, over which he has presided. The address, read by Mr. T. J. Powell, was as follows:

Vroomanton, May, 2nd, '07.

Rev. Michael Cline, P.P.;

Reverend and Dear Father,—It is with feelings of the most profound regret that we assemble here this evening to say farewell to you, our pastor, counselor and friend. When we hear in mind the time, now brief yet full of joy, we have done in the work of parishing seems doubly hard since it is a short time, we have, we feel, learned to love you so well.

You have shared our joys and sorrows with fatherly affection, ever ready and willing upon the minister to the sick and dying, offering words of hope and consolation to the afflicted, and when the angel of death has been brightened by your presence, and your words, consecrated hands to open the portals of eternal life. Dear Father, years ago, long ago, have ever received from you, the kind, fatherly counsel we could give. You have instructed our children in the ways of holy faith, and their earnest, endeavored to plant in their young hearts, the seeds of that faith, that would grow up and flourish and grow from your own warm Irish heart. My word spoken in simple, you have kept alive in our hearts the Christ faith and hope which you brought to us from far away Erin.

In a word, you have been a worthy representative of our Blessed Lord, young and doing good, rebuking vice, entreating, exhorting, in all patience and charity. While attending to our spiritual wants, you have never lost sight of the material wants of your people. The beautiful altar you have raised for the worship of the Master, where your forefathers used to praise and glorify God in the holy mention of the altar, testify your zeal for God and his house.

You may not wonder then, that we find it hard to say farewell, when we consider all these many ties that bind us to your side, are more sacred than flesh and blood.

But we will try to bear in mind your teaching, and put in practice your counsel of obedience which you have always held up as the example of a true christian. We therefore bow in meek submission to the will of the good Archbishop. He has thought it best for the interest of God's holy church to place you in another part of his diocese, where your works may bear still better fruits, and where a larger field for your zeal may bring more glory to the Divine Master you serve so well.

We now take leave of Father, to accept this purse as a slight token of our good will towards you.

We know you will not forget us and our many needs in your daily sacrifice of the mass. We hope our Great Dear Lord will spare you many years to labor in your new parish. May God fill the hearts of your new home, we know, for your happiness is where duty calls.

Signed on behalf of the parishioners of Beaverton, Brock and Georgina.

During the reading of the address, many eyes were moist, and faces were in sorrow. All were, visibly affected when Father's beer was shed, at the thought of his departure from them and about to take place.

Father Cline, in a few short but words, thanked those present for the sentiments expressed in the address just read, as well as for their munificent gift.

He said in brief "Your love for the parishioners of Beaverton expressions of all that is dear and the name and power of the priesthood, no doubt, proved to be beautiful sentiments expressed and accounted for the warm, and eloquent language I which you told me indirectly, which, I know, I feel I deserve, but rather than what I really felt I was. Seven years ago I came among you, you at once received me into your confidence and affection. I came to expend in your service the prime of my life, and your loyalty, generosity and kindness never failed to sacrifice this might mean. You helped me to build churches, were my first parishioners, and to you I dedicate the Lady Chapel, in token of fidelity. My efforts, I am pleased to say, show such results that today, by my side stands, I can in a worldly sense, say as St. Paul to the Philippians, "you are my joy and my confirmation of the gospel." Though separated from you, I will ever work for you, to many acts of kindness and generosity, I have received, words of good the evening sermons, or refreshment and rest, I have received, words to express my gratitude to you at, to fine it to say that this, Beaverton, Brock and Georgina, will always be perhaps by me and will ever be remembered for many years to come.

And the Boy Caused Right.

The teacher had been telling the class about the rhinoceros family. "Now, name some things," said she, "that it is very dangerous to get near and that have horns." "Mother cars," replied a little boy promptly.

TO COLLECT SILVERWARE.

Dr. F. A. McDiarmid moved, seconded by Geo. A. Little, that a committee of three be instructed to provide a case capable of holding the silverware and trophies, for the holders of the trophies requiring the same, and that the secretary be instructed to place in the glass case aforesaid the trophies now in possession of the winners appearing on cards attached to the silverware.

It was pointed out that the case purchased last year, was not sufficient all of the silverware owned by the Club. Dr. Wood, in a few short words, thanked those present for the sentiments expressed in the address just read, as well as for their munificent gift.

He said in brief "Your love for the parishioners of Beaverton expressions of all that is dear and the name and power of the priesthood, no doubt, proved to be beautiful sentiments expressed and accounted for the warm, and eloquent language I which you told me indirectly, which, I know, I feel I deserve, but rather than what I really felt I was. MARIPOSA COUNCIL DOINGS

CONSIDERABLE BUSINESS DEALT WITH LAST MONDAY.

Tenders to be Asked for Erection of Two Steel Bridges.

Mariposa Council proceedings May 13th, 1907. The members were all present, and the minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted, on motion of Messrs. Shaver and Michael.

Mr. David Dundas protested against the division of his road beats, as it would be too small a small beat. The difficulty of keeping open the roads could be gotten over by assigning one-half the commission to one beat and one-half commission to another. Carried.

Mr. Alex. Grant was present regarding the building of a wire fence on the boundary line, lot 3, con. 7, and as this is a very bad place for drift Mr. Grant thought something more than the regular bonus might be paid.

Mr. Charles Thomas presented quite a largely signed petition in favor of a gravel to assist in building approaches to the Cross well.

Messrs. Michael and Rogers presented a report in regard to the proposed new road between lots 17 and Brock's drain. Mr. Yarnold was also present and discussed the advisability of so doing.

The treasurer reported that he had received the sum of $45.69 from the Provincial Treasurer, Mr. Mariposa's share of the Railroad Tax.

Mr. Fred Hore made application for the erection of a bridge before the Council that the gravel was getting scarce in Fred Wooldridge's gravel pit, lot 16, con. 7.

Mr. Malcolm McArthur notified the Council regarding some improvements done on the road on the third line.

The Reeve presented the report of himself and the road commissioners, regarding the repairs to all the bridges in the township, thirty-six bridges being examined, and all were found in very good condition, with some slight repairs, except the bridge on the 10th line, the Reeve said, the bridge at Lift-Lock on the Indian River, lot 13, con. 5. A small bridge at lot 10, con. 6, might be repaired, and he recommended that a part of the Davidson mill road be closed.

The treasurer presented a statement that there is some $12.35 had been paid in commutation of statute labor.

RESOLUTIONS PASSED.

Motion by Messrs. Shaver and Rogers—that this Council grant the sum of $100 towards the building concrete walks at Crescent from Mr. C. Betts' store eastward to the Presbyterian church, the understanding being that the inhabitants of the village and adjoining surrounding will complete the job.—Carried.

Motion by Messrs. Varcoe and Rogers—that the north-west part of lot 19, con. 7, be taken off the road beat of Mr. D. Dundas, beat 34 east, and the balance of the road be kept in maintenance of the road north, Mr. Dundas to be notified that he is responsible for the maintenance of the road north of the Reeve's, and in each case one half way across the concession.—Carried.

Motion by Messrs. Varcoe and Michael—that the clerk be authorized to pay the following accounts, and two riveted Warren Greene steel bridges, one between 15 and 16 and one between 10 and 11 on the 10th line, and that the Reeve be authorized to sign the agreement known as the Ontario Bridge Company, at a cost of $1,280.—Carried.

Motion by Messrs. Rogers and Shaver—that the Reeve be authorized to sign the agreement known as the Ontario Bridge Co., at a cost of the Corporation of Mariposa, where the bridge on the 10th line, lots 20, 21 and 22, in concessions 9 and 10, is about one-half, the cost of the bridge at lot 20, con. 10—Carried.

Motion by Messrs. Michael and Varcoe—that the Reeve be authorized to pay for the purchase of gravel pit from Alfred King, south half of lot 16, concession 7, the gravel pit from Alexander Grant, part of lot 16, concession 7.

Motion by Messrs. Rogers and Shaver—that the following accounts be paid; Pascoe Bros., postage and telephone account, $1.60; Frank Hopkins, part of Lindsay re Hancock drain, $1; R. N. Marsh, repairing swamp road, and culvert, $8; J. R. Weldon, expenses Washington drain, $1.80—Carried.

Motion by Messrs. Michael and Varcoe—that Edward King be appointed overseer for Beat 34, west; D. J. Sharp, overseer in beat 34 east; John Dunn, overseer in beat 35 east; Rich. overseer in beat 44 west; and that the persons appointed for those beats be relieved of the appointments—Carried.

Motion by Messrs. Shaver and Rogers,—that the report of the reeve and road commissioners regarding the bridges in the township be received and adopted, as far as practicable.—Carried.

Motion by Messrs. Varcoe and Michael,—that the report of Messrs. Michael and Rogers, regarding the changes in the course of the Brooks' drain be received and referred to the engineer for adoption.—Carried.

Motion by Messrs. Varcoe and Michael,—that the Council meet at the Court of Revision and for general business.—Carried.

J. B. WELDON, Tp Clerk.

OBITUARY.

Dr. Chas. Neill Passed Away at Chicago —Was Known in Lindsay.

A despatch from Chicago announces the sudden death in a Pullman car there Tuesday, of Dr. Charles Neill, of Toronto. He was on his way to El Paso, Texas, for his health.

Dr. Neill was born in Barrie, forty years ago and took his degree in chemistry in Toronto in 1890. He began the practice of his profession in Peterboro, where his brothers were located. Dr. Neill fell a victim to consumption about five years since, and recently has been living in Florida, enhursd and on the North Shore. He had lived in Lindsay, and was seeking an improvement in health, and at the time of his death was accompanied by his brother, A. B. Neill, on a trip to Texas. He was unmarried.

Dr. Neill's brothers are all well-known. He was the inventor of the automatic telephone and boots and shoes. Mr. Fred Neill is President of the Canadian Machine Telephone Company, Limited, of Peterboro. Mr. Nathaniel Neill has extensive interests in the automatic telephone in Stratford.

The Neil family were all in the wine manufacturing line, and some but lately went into the retail trade. Mr. Fred Neill has a store in Stratford and Mr. Chas. Neill also runs a wine establishment. Mr. John A. Neill, another brother, lives at Oshawa.

The deceased was a brother of Mrs. R. E. Hence and Mrs. Edward Gregory, of this city, and having made frequent visits here while a resident of Toronto, he was known to a number of friends, who will learn with deep regret of his sudden death, and who will sympathy will go out to the bereaved sisters and brothers.

A Valuation.

Now, which is cheaper, the bride or the groom?

Come to the answer in accents bold:
The bride, cause she's always given away.
While the groom is generally sold."

Speculation in Western Lands.

(Canadian Courier.)

It looks as if speculation in Western lands is likely to become as popular this year. For five years it has been the most profitable, and the prices have in many cases gone to the limit of reason. Land in Edmonton is selling bigger than in Toronto, and the population of that city is the latter 300,000. A recession is due, but the banks will prevent it by forces by refusing to lend any more money, and the West can use all the money and capital in comparison to its needs, as it is to-day. Unless all forecasts are wrong, land will be cheaper in many cases two years hence than to-day, and the reason is, the demand will be greater.

A young man went up to a Western town recently and started to make and selling bricks, and only with real estate agents. He made a fortune in a few days. Lots among them, selling a lot here, buying one there, taking a deposit, or a promise, or a promise to "boost" in a few weeks he cleaned up than in a year in the old country, or in Toronto. He played with the fire, but escaped to get safely home to be buried.

Land that the West will stop its progress, of course—only speculation is the straw that shows the wind, and development will proceed, but the fortune of the speculator to do so, simply mean that the fortune is being heavily discounted.

EXPERIENCE OF LONE HUNTER

TRAPPER IN NEW ONTARIO HAD A NARROW ESCAPE.

Stumbled Upon a Pack of Wolves While Visiting His Traps.

Thrilling and singular, in these days, is the story of a Toronto hunter visitor of a hair-breadth escape from destruction from a pack of hungry wolves, in the north of northern Ontario, where he has been pursuing the occupation of a trapper of wild game. The visitor is Mr. Cleary, of Toronto, who is in Chandos township. In conversation with an Examiner representative Mr. Cleary related the thrilling tale of an experience with a half dozen timber wolves on the last day of January in the vicinity of Twin Lakes, just beyond the height of land.

As stated above, he has been following the occupation of a trapper, and drew seasons pass by with the accompaniment of experiences which would make most nerve-racked nerve quake with fear. Mr Cleary had a lengthy line of traps situated along the edge of a lake in the vicinity of an old gamehunter's shack. Every day he was accustomed to go the rounds of his traps, and was doubtful in the regions beyond the height of land.

A GREAT STORM.

In the waning days of January there was a heavy fall of rain and sleet, which made his tramping through the woods somewhat difficult. Mr. Cleary was on this account forced to remain in his shanty, and carried nothing but a small hatchet in the game bag, and a short stick in his hand, with which he knocked the dumbs and twigs footed with ice while tapped to obstruct his path. For two days the storm continued prevailed, and upon each day the trapper was forced to remain in his shanty in his gun. Towards the end of the second day the storm gradually worked and on the evening of the 8th of the month he thought himself emboldened to decide, to carry his rifle in the next day.

When morning came he made ready for the trip, but happened to forget the rifle, which was hanging on from force of habit. He had just turned the latch of the door when he was reminded of his absent decision the night before, and not deeming the trouble to retrace his steps worth the trouble, he took a stick at the door, and began the journey, which very nearly proved to be his last journey.

WOLVES ON THE TRACK.

Mr. Cleary had proceeded along through the forest for a mile or two and was crossing the spongy land on the shore of a lake, when he noticed which his traps were set, when suddenly he espied a pack of wolves coming on hard on his heels, from first glance he thought them to be humans, but on a second glance he discovered to his alarm that half a dozen large wolves were on the heels of him.

The ground on the snow was not strong enough to hold up the animals, who for days had had little food, and the trapper knew the animals which they were accustomed to feed on could scarcely be kept away from them, as the latter were in the direct line of capture, the scattering of crust. The hunter took to his heels and ran for his life, he knew that the lapished beasts would overtake him if he were discovered. There was no tree within a mile large enough to bear him up, and, he was in a quandary, as the wolves animals started off down the lake, and he was left to fight the wolves in a few yards of him.

FORCED TO WITHDRAW.

Mr. Cleary had scarcely had time to had met his fate and retreated. He knew that if the Kitzl call were sounded, he would be dead in a few in a minute. The wolf followed in close footsteps, and the hunter found the first note of the strill call. It was broken off suddenly, and he knew the brutes had lifted the carcass of his fellow. The others did not hear the sound and he was left to continue his journey, and made his way from the scene in haste.

On the afternoon of the same day, Mr. Cleary came upon the wolves and found that one of his traps had been robbed of a fox, which had been caught in the trap. He also found two dead wolves, that had disappeared in some fox pit, and he killed a third wolfe with his rifle. Before leaving the scene of the fight he captured the other three and their carcasses are among the furs brought from camp.

Mr. Cleary brought to Peterboro with him a silver cup, presented by one of the rarest prizes of the hunter, which is a fine, large, Hudson's Bay mamma tannery, on Aylmer-st. He intends to present the Tamiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway. The chief for bearing animals in those days, and the chief, maybe, lynx, fisher, mink, fox and wolf.

Conditions of Comfort.

"Yes, I believe I could, if the pension next year hadn't more than $9,000 a year, and my wife knew it."

THREE YEARS IN PEN

Joseph Thompson Responsible For Gourock Collision.

JUDGE RIDDELL IS SEVERE

Scathing Remarks on Railway Accidents—Jury Found Conductor Guilty of Violating Rules—Carnage on Railroads Exceeds Boer War—Sentence Criticized—Ministers Will Be Appealed to.

Guelph, May 13.—Three years at Kingston was the sentence meted out by his Honor Judge Riddell, Judge of Joseph H. Thompson, the G.T.R. freight conductor, who was found guilty by a jury at the assizes here of violation of the rules of the company. His Lordship dwelt upon the carnage caused by railroad accidents, said more young healthy Canadians were killed in railway accidents due to negligence of employees each year than were during the Boer war. "The public must be protected," he said, in passing sentence.

A large number of petitions were presented by Mr. Jeffrey, counsel for defendant, for the clemency of the Court, including one from Mayor and Aldermen of the city, and one from employes of the company, and the jury at the assizes had added to their verdict a recommendation to mercy. But after reading a lengthy charge, his Lordship sentenced the prisoner as above, saying that he might have sentenced him to five years.

London, May 13.—The news that Conductor Thompson at Guelph had been sentenced to three years at the Kingston penitentiary was received here with considerable comment, some way men Thompson was one of the most popular men on the city on both railroads. He had of late, since the accident, so far as could be learned in the committal, been employed on the C.P.R.

The unfortunate man is the father of two bright little children, and with his wife has the sympathy of the whole railroad community.

The case will now be taken to the attention of the Minister of Justice, who will be asked to grant a reprieve. The movement to secure a reprieve for the sentence will be vigorously undertaken in this city, where railroad men regard the sentence as altogether too severe, under the circumstances.

Mr. Justice Riddell was asked Saturday night what action he intended to take in the matter of his statement at Guelph in passing sentence on Conductor Joseph Thompson. He replied that it was for the Attorney-General's Department to act.

GREAT IMPERIAL PROJECT.

Fast Atlantic Service May Result From Conference of Premiers.

London, May 13.—However truthless the Colonial Conference may seem in some respects, there is now every reason to believe that it will result in the long-looked-for establishment of a genuine fast Atlantic steamship service.

It may now be stated authoritatively that a definite plan has been made, details worked out, and it only waits ratification by the two Parliaments to commence the greatest Imperial project of many years.

The plan includes the formation of an Atlantic steamship company; the commissioning of vessels which will represent the latest developments in naval architecture, with a speed of 25 knots, and which will maintain an average of 24; this service to be subsidized by the British and Canadian Governments, each to pay probably $1,000,000 per year for the service. It also involves the Australian Commonwealth and New Zealand joining in the project, and establishing the Pacific service, which would then be increased from 14 to 18 knots, and extended to take in New Zealand and Australia.

CROP CONDITIONS NOT BAD.

Alarm Caused by Continued Bad Weather Subsiding.

Winnipeg, May 13.—The feeling of alarm over crop conditions in the West is rapidly subsiding with the more favorable reports of seeding. In spite of really very bad weather, much seeding has been done though unquestionably the crop conditions not calculated to improve the yield.

Alberta, according to reports on the Grain Exchange, is really better off than Manitoba.

Saskatchewan, too, is said to be in better condition, especially that territory south on the Soo line. The barley for speculative interests has been very heavy in Winnipeg the past week, on information of positive nature to seed in many localities. The steady advance of prices has been very generally anticipated by speculators in different parts of the West.

WIFE WAS JEALOUS.

Woman Shoots Her Little Son and Then Suicides.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 13.—Because she knew she had her husband was paying attention to another woman, who lived here in Allegheny, near her home, Mrs. Carrie Sigsworth shot and killed her little-six-year-old son then shot and killed herself, at their home, 307 Jackson street, Allegheny.

At first it was reported that the blood had been committed on account of Mrs. Sigsworth's illness. But Mrs. Sigsworth admitted to Superintendent of Police Glenn that jealousy had been the cause of the awful crime.

I in a letter which she left in her husband Mrs. Sigsworth did not upbraid him, but asked him for appearances sake not to bring home to her a woman into the house until I am gold," and not to give her her furs and diamonds. The Sigsworths are said to come from prominent families in London and the parents of both have been telegraphed for.

Penitentiary Guard Suspended.

Kingston, Ont., May 13.—On Saturday a penitentiary guard was suspended for the remainder of the year. Fused to do some duty assigned to him by the chief keeper.

DOCTOR BRIGHAM SAYS

MANY PHYSICIANS PRESCRIBE

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The wonderful power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over the diseases of womankind is not because it is a stimulant, not because it is a palliative, but simply because it is the most wonderful tonic and strengthener ever discovered to act directly upon the generative organs, positively curing disease and restoring health and vigor.

Marvelous cures are reported from all parts of the country by women who have been cured, trained nurses who have recommended it to patients who have recognized the virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and are fair enough to give credit where it is due.

If physicians dared to be frank and open, hundreds of them would acknowledge, that for the cure of ailments for Lydia E. Pinkham Vegetable Compound is more easy of female ills, as they know by experience that it will be relief upon to effect a cure. The following letter proves it:

Dr. S. C. Brigham, of 4 Brigham Park, Fitchburg, Mass., writes:

"It gives me great pleasure to say that I have prescribed Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound very efficacious; and other medicine in my practice for female weakness.

"My oldest daughter found it very beneficial for female weakness and pain, and my youngest daughter is now taking it for a female difficulty and it looks to be her health and strength.

"I feel pleased to give it as a most reliable medicine in all diseases to which women are subject, and I shall continue to do so."

Women who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, bloating, flatulency, indigestion, nervous ailments, inflammation or ulceration and backache, should at once make a trial of it by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Or if they prefer, they can write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., a confidential letter. Mrs. Pinkham's advice has helped hundreds of sick and for twenty-five years has been advising sick women. Her advice is free, and living person has had the benefit of a wider experience in treating female ailments. Her advice is worth its weight in gold. Every suffering woman should act upon it and follow her advice if she wants to be healthy.

FIRE BUGS AT WORK.

Serious Blazes in Paris Caused by Incendiaries.

Paris, May 13.—The entire fire department of Paris was called out Saturday night to fight two great fires which started within a few hours, and which are believed to have been the work of incendiaries.

The first fire was at Aubin's big carriage factory in the suburb of Paris. It was accompanied by many great explosions, but there was no loss of life.

The second was in the Monmartr district, at Hermel's manufacturing metal works. Here the flames spread rapidly to some neighboring tenement houses the occupants of which were awakened with difficulty. The work of the firemen was impeded by a number of bugs, called in Paris "Apaches," who out on the night prowled and raided houses from which the occupants had been driven by the fire, robbed and stabbed one policeman, who was trying to hold them back.

The damage is estimated at $2,000,000. Many firemen sustained injuries, and it is feared that two firemen lost their lives through the collapse of the factory roof. Fifty persons were rendered homeless and had to seek shelter for the night in the police stations.

SCHOOL BOOK REFORM

Ministers of Education In Each Province to Consider Scheme.

Toronto, May 13.—The formulation of a national series of textbooks for the schools of the provinces of confederation is the proposal which the various Ministers of Education are considering. The idea is to secure uniformity and co-operation, and to avoid such a fiasco as that which recently occurred in Ontario, Manitoba and Saskatchewan—where there will still be a lack of uniformity in public schools for some time this year.

Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta are the provinces—Alberta and Saskatchewan—which are moving on a scheme for uniformity, and contract for publishing which has been awarded to a Toronto firm, promise to now advertising for tenders, and before long a new series of textbooks will be authorized by the department.

The Ontario Ministers are hoping that the education authorities of all the provinces have been communicated with on the subject of uniformity of textbooks. All are agreeable to the proposal, but it will be some time before estimation nothing has been done.

Washington, May 13.—President Roosevelt sent King Alfonso the following message yesterday:

"I congratulate your Majesty and the Spanish nation on the birth of an heir to the throne of Spain."

Thaw Home Mortgaged.

Pittsburg, May 9.—"Lyndhurst," the pretentious home of Mrs. William Thaw, in the east end section of this city, has been mortgaged for $100,000, according to The Pittsburg Leader. The mortgage was executed some time ago and extraordinary efforts were made to keep the mortgage from

HURLED FROM TRACK

Mystic Shriners Meet Death On Southern Pacific.

31 KILLED—SCORES INJURED

Defective Switch Sends Locomotive a Somersault in Sand—Cars Piled on Wrecked Engine—Passengers Burned and Scalded — Victims Mutilated Beyond Recognition —Many Pathetic Scenes.

Santa Barbara, May 13.—Thirty-one dead and a score injured last night constituted the casualties due to the wreck at Honda on Saturday of the Ismalia special train of New York Mystic Shrine, who were returning home from the annual meeting of the Imperial Council of the Mystic Shrine of Mystic Shriners at Los Angeles.

The train, carrying 145 Shriners and guests from Ismalia Temple, Buffalo; Rajah Temple, Reading, Pa., and neighboring cities, was running north at 50 miles an hour on the Southern Pacific road line when the locomotive struck a defective switch at the sand-swept siding at Honda, near the Pacific Ocean, upon which the railroad runs for a hundred miles north of Santa Barbara. The locomotive turned a somersault into the sand. The cars landed on the wrecked locomotive, and the coaches were crushed and took fire. The flames were soon extinguished by uninjured persons from the two rear coaches. As soon as it became known that all this yesterday that definite information of the wreck could be obtained. Five hundred of the victims are now at Santa Barbara, and four hundred at San Luis Obispo. The injured, many of whom are terribly burned and scalded, may die, are in two sanitariums at San Luis Obispo.

The wreck occurred at 2.35 o'clock, an hour and forty minutes after the conclave's regular meeting, a merry party, left Santa Barbara. They had spent all the morning sightseeing. That the train was making terrific speed when it left the last active track is borne out by the fact that it covered the distance of the track from Santa Barbara to Honda in 100 minutes. The locomotive, in leaving the switch, left the track, badly twisting the steel rails. The engine car half-buried and itself in the sand beside the locomotive. It was smashed almost to kindling wood.

The dining car, on which were 32 persons eating luncheon, turned over in the air and fell directly on the locomotive, crushing to death every person in the dining car was instantly killed. Scores were scalded by steam escaping from disconnected pipes.

The first cars were buried into the wreckage, killing or injuring those who might otherwise have escaped. Several prominent men in the city, his were roasted alive.

Engineer Frank Champlain was pinned beneath the cab 25 feet beyond the engine. He got up and ran a mile, seeking help before he discovered that his arm was broken and that he was severely scalded.

Only two of the nine men, composing the dining car crew, are dead. The remainder, though cooped up in the narrow kitchen and pantry, suffered only cuts and bruises. The last call for luncheon had been sounded, but a few minutes before the disaster.

An instant after the disaster those who were not incapacitated, but a few minutes before the disaster.

Frightened women poring through the windows of the smashed sleeping cars, fainted when they saw the bodies of their friends strewn along the roadside, blood from the wounds staining the sand drifts all about. Many who had fainted in the cars, rescue collapsed.

At 4 o'clock a relief special left Santa Barbara and made the 61 miles to Honda in 40 minutes. Simultaneously another special left San Luis Obispo occupied by nurses and doctors. It covered the distance in one that left this city. But what the scene of rescue and relief had been done by those who had escaped the disaster.

Twenty-five bodies lay on the sand beside the train. The injured, many of them unconscious, were in tents scattered about on piles of bedding and pitch soak brought from the Pullmans.

It was determined at once to remove the injured to San Luis Obispo, and to take the dead to Santa Barbara. The work of placing them upon the two trains was quickly accomplished.

Twenty-Five Injured.

Monterey, Mexico, May 13.—Running 35 miles an hour, a southbound train on the Mexican Central Railway from El Paso to Mexico City, left the track six miles north of Bermejillo Saturday, injuring 25 persons.

Fireman Yates Killed.

Youthful Murderer.

Brunswick, Me., May 13.—Cherishing a revolver, a boy of 15 years shot and killed Morris W. Heath, aged 18 years, in Bowdoinham Saturday night. The crime was not discovered until Saturday, when M. S. Heath, father of the murdered boy, found the body buried under pine spills and twigs, and at the edge of a swamp.

The boy was arrested and immediately confessed.

CALLS HIS CURE A PERFECT MIRACLE

Suffered Tortures With Terrible, Dry Eruptions Since Reaching Manhood—Doctors All Failed—Became Disfigured to Leave House — Now Well and Says:

CUTICURA REMEDIES WORTH WEIGHT IN GOLD

"I cannot help expressing to you my gratitude, thanks for the good remedies which I have taken from the use of Cuticura Remedies. They represent a perfect miracle and I shall write it worth its weight in gold to suffering humanity. Ever since the age of twenty-one manhood I have been suffering from a dry eruption which at times appeared very extensively, and at other times, but to the limited degree, so bad that I compelled a number of medical men without avail, and last January I was affected with a terrible eruption on my hands, arms, and face, which was so bad that I could not even leave the house, so I finally resorted to Cuticura.

"In the morning after breakfast I took a teaspoonful of Cuticura Resolvent, the same after dinner and supper, washed the affected parts freely with Cuticura Soap, and three times a week I took a hot bath with Cuticura Soap and applied Cuticura Ointment to the parts that were painful. For my health I would recommend an occasional dose of Cuticura Resolvent, while formerly I had spent dollars upon medicine and treatment, and in months without getting cured. Needless to say, I am perfectly cured. Enclosed my last coat for Cuticura Remedies. Henry C. Kanzler, 263 Fifth Ave., New York, N. Y., Feb. 16 and Mar. 15, 1900."

A FRIGHT WITH PIMPLES

Cuticura Soon Makes Skin Clear.

"My face, a few months ago, was certainly a fright, covered with pimples. I used Cuticura Remedies, and got Cuticura Soap about the middle of January. In a short while my face was well and skin white and clear. I advise every troubled skin is full of pimples and blackheads to use Cuticura." GEN. TOLEDO ON WAY.

Will Lead Expedition Against Cabrera Revolt.

Mexico City, May 13.—It has been learned that Gen. Salvador Toledo, who assisted Gen. Barrios in the last Guatemalan revolution, and who is designated by Barrios as the coming revolution against the Cabrera government, is expected here or now en route to New Orleans, and will come to Mexico within a week or few days.

Every Guatemalan revolutionary junta in Mexico and in both of the United States and Mexico is now active. Within a week on plans for the revolution against President Cabrera, and it is believed that actual fighting in Guatemala will begin within thirty days.

Gen. Toledo is said to have completed arrangements for the invasion of Guatemala from Mexico, which order before leaving Mexiha, Nicaragua, where he has been confined for some time past. Further arrangements will be made in New Orleans, and from the Pacific will proceed to Mexico to confer with the Guatemalan refugees in this city.

It is now almost certain that he will lead the new revolution against Guatemala. It is also asserted that Barrios has arrived here the provisional Government, which is to be inaugurated for some time, will be organized, with Gen. Toledo as provisional President.

According to the refugees, a terrible reign of terror now exists in Guatemala. Over 1,000 men, more than 10,000 of the wealthy and business classes have left Guatemala since the last revolt. Example of President Cabrera's life two weeks ago. Every Sunday morning, the city of Mexican poets is crowded by the fleeing refugees.

The stories of the atrocities practiced in the Guatemalan prisons are revolting in the extreme.

Cabrera, it was learned, has now 20,000 troops in the Guatemalan army and 11,000 more on the Honduran and Mexican.

The situation in this city is unchanged. Revolutionary junta of Guatemala affair as a closed incident as far as Mexico is concerned.

"ISLAND CITY" LOST.

All Hope of the Vessel Is Now Abandoned.

Moncton, N. B., May 13.—W. H. Edgett, of this city, who some months ago formed the Island City Steamship 400-ton vessel, Island City, has abandoned all hope of the loss of her crew, and has posted her at Lloyds as lost.

The Island City left Chatham, N. B., November 28th last, with a cargo of lathes for New York, and was last reported passing through the Straits of Canso Saturday morning, five days out. Since then nothing has been heard of her or her crew of eight men, of which Edgett was one, and of the captain. The cargo was owned by Mr. Edgett and insured, but the vessel was not.

It is a strange coincidence that this is the second time that the Edgett family within two years. Captain Priddle's brother, commander of the schooner Wanderian, when that vessel was wrecked off Cape Cod a year ago last February, with the loss of all hands, including the captain's wife and two children.

Hindus Still Restless.

Simla, British India, May 13.—Although no further disturbances have occurred, the marked unrest among the Hindus continues and the Government is determined to check its spread.

An extraordinary issue of the Official Gazette contains a proclamation of the viceroy, the Earl of Minto, prohibiting persons from taking part in public or political affairs without a week's notice.

ANOTHER BIG BLAZE

Corby's Distillery Completely Gutted By Fire On Sunday.

FIREMAN WAS BADLY HURT

Had Narrow Escape From Death—Electric Plant and Expensive Copper Work Destroyed—Loss Totals Quarter of Million Dollars —9,000 Gallons of Liquor Lost and 290,000 Bags of Grain.

Belleville, May 13.—Excitement quietly reigned in this city yesterday owing to the fact that the big distillery of Corbyville, which burned last here, was found to be on fire at five o'clock in the morning, and in a few hours had been completely gutted.

Harry Hubbs, who had been firing in the engine room at night, discovered the fire, and came near losing his life before he escaped from the burning building.

His escape was almost cut off, and as it was he was badly burned and scalded before he gained the outside of the building. His skin hung in strips from his hands and arms, and, in addition, he fell down a flight of stone steps, injuring himself so severely that his recovery is said to be doubtful.

Started In Distillery.

The fire started in the distillery proper, and when discovered spread so that the flames were bursting out of the roof. There was little fire fighting appliance in the village, and by time assistance arrived from the city the distillery and the entire plant situated next to it were beyond all hope of being saved.

The city firemen who took with them the chemical engine, did good work, in confining the fire to the two buildings, and saved what they could do. In a couple of hours all that was left of the distillery and plant was the walls and the expensive machinery, comprising a new electric plant and thousands of dollars worth of expensive copper work, lately put in, being destroyed. In all there were 200,000 bags of grain, which were destroyed, and in the distillery was also lost 9,000 gallons of liquor in process.

D. H. Davis is resident manager at the distillery, and he estimated the loss at fully $250,000 to $300,000, or possibly $300,000. He absolutely refuses to give details of insurance, which, he said, was distributed among many companies. He did say, however, that the insurance would total fully $100,000 short of the loss. Mr. Davis said the insurance would undoubtedly rebuild just as soon as possible, and the new plant would be thoroughly up-to-date in every way.

Warehouses Not Touched.

About 50 men were employed in the buildings burned. There is a full stock of liquor in the bonded warehouses, which was not in any way injured by the fire, neither were any of the other buildings.

PAY TRIBUTE TO THE LAW.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Admitted Bancher of Gray's Inn.

London, May 13.—(Can. A. P.)—Laurier and Deakin were admitted to the honorary benchers at Gray's Inn on Saturday. Lord Rosebery paid a high tribute to the laws of the Mother Country, which he said had secured for its sovereign and subjects all that Great Britain, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, speaking at the Gaelic Society concert, said the Dominion was covered with Scotsmen, and Scotsmen he numbered his closest political and personal friends.

TO HIS NATIVE HEATH.

Sir Wilfrid Will Visit the Hamlet of His Forefathers.

Ottawa, Ont., May 11.—It is said here that Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Lady Laurier have planned a period of rest on the Continent of Europe and a visit to the original Scottish home which the Premier's family came in France. First of all they will proceed in Paris with Hon. and Madame Brodeur.

The Minister of Marine awaits the completion of the Government steamer Canada which is being turned improved upon her to the Baltic Sea to Copenhagen and the Scandinavian and Russian ice-breakers.

Liners Propelled From Niagara.

London, May 13.—Sir Hugh Bell, presiding at the meeting Friday of the Iron and Steel Institute, suggested that a motive power be used, perhaps hardly any machinery or crew would speed across the Atlantic propelled by electric force, generated by the Falls of Niagara and transmitted to the vessel wirelessly. Such a forecast, the speaker declared, was no more incredible than the developments of the past century.

City Treasurer Accused.

Syracuse, May 13.—The city treasurer has discovered a shortage in the accounts of the office during the term of E. F. Allen as treasurer. It is impossible to tell, until experts report, how large the shortage is. In one case Mayor Alan C. Forbes is shown, upon the local controller's books, to owe $1,900 since 1894. The mayor has Allen's receipt for the money.

Woodstock Carnegie Library.

Woodstock, Ont., May 13.—Woodstock is to have a fine Carnegie library building, the plans for which were let yesterday. The style of architecture will be renaissance. The cost will be in the neighborhood of $19,000, and the committee found it necessary to modify the plans owing to the great cost of labor and building material.

HEIR TO THE THRONE

Son Is Born to the King and Queen of Spain.

ALL THE NATION REJOICES

King Edward Receives the News With Delight—Auspicious Occasion Was Marked With All Regal Pomp—Great Enthusiasm — Prisoners Are Pardoned—General Holiday Is Proclaimed.

Madrid, May 11.—Queen Victoria gave birth yesterday to a son, who becomes heir to the throne of Spain.

The birth of the royal babe has been awaited with eager interest throughout Spain. This was intensified early this morning, when the first word came from the palace that the accompliment of the Queen was imminent. The news spread like wildfire, and crowds flocked to the great plazza fronting the royal palace.

At 10 o'clock the King convened the meeting of the council of Ministers, which was to have considered current state affairs. By 10 o'clock the high functionaries of the state and capital, with many Ambassadors and Ministers, in their court costumes, had reached the palace. At noon this assemblage of the nobility and power of Spain was received in the royal apartments set aside for official ceremonies.

Prince of the Asturias.

The birth of the babe occurred at 12.45 p. m. The announcement was immediately conveyed to the waiting officials and crowds outside the palace, who received the glad tidings with mingled feelings, of enthusiasm and disappointment. Immediately thereafter the Queen's physician, in official form communicated the fact to the company. The news was greeted with the greatest enthusiasm, which swelled into a spontaneous cheer, as King Alfonso himself emerged from the Cabinet. The Camarara mayor carrying a huge silver tray, upon which was lying the newly-born royal babe, covered with delicate Spanish lace.

Premier Maura at once advanced and relieved the mistress of the robes of the burden, and the Queen's ladies-in-waiting received the royal nurse, who returned to the Queen.

Scene In the Streets.

The news reached the crowds outside were almost beyond description. Business had been suspended, and there was an immense multitude gathered about the palace. Hundreds of people had standard of red and gold fluttered to the ground at the flagstaff on the Palace Diamente, and the streets of joy went up. Immediately afterward a salute of 101 guns announced the news to the most remote confines of the kingdom, and the population of the surrounding country.

King Alfonso, Prince Edward and Emperor William will act as sponsors at the baptism of the royal infant at Madrid.

The Queen insists that she will herself nurse the infant, despite the opposition of the royal household to such a departure from custom, as she desires to ensure its good health.

The child is described as being a robust blondin, and as having his mother's complexion.

Madrid was deserted after the birth had been announced. a Te Deum was sung in all churches of the capital, where the Holy Sacrament had remained exposed throughout the accomplishment of the Queen.

The Queen was the first to kiss the baby, and then it was offered to the two grandmothers, Princess Beatrice of Battenberg and Mary Henrietta, the Dowager Queen of Spain.

The Cortes assembled at night ordering a national holiday throughout Spain for Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

The Cabinet met yesterday, drew up and afterwards presented to King Alfonso for his signature decrees transferring the Prince of Asturias, heir from Prince Charles of Bourbon to the new born prince.

It has been decided that the baptism shall take place on Tuesday at noon. In court circles it is decided that the baby be named Carlos, but the sponsor of his baptismal name has not yet been definitely decided.

King Alfonso, in honor of the event, decreed the pardon of thousands of prisoners, including eight persons who were condemned to suffer capital punishment.

The Queen of Spain without reservation rejoices in the birth of the little heir.

The News In London.

London, May 11.—The birth of an heir to the Spanish throne was received with unfeigned satisfaction by King Edward and the Queen, who learned here, who received the first news through a newspaper bulletin.

Regrets Germany's Course.

London, May 11.—Speaking at Manchester, Henry Campbell-Bannerman, the Premier, expressed the keen disappointment felt by the Government at the refusal of Germany to discuss the question of the limitation of armaments at the Hague conference.

Oxford Honors Mark Twain.

Baltimore, May 11.—Samuel L. Clemens (Mark Twain) said yesterday he had been offered the degree of bachelor of letters by Oxford University, and would go to Oxford on June 8, to receive the honor.

Candidates In Hants.

Halifax, N. S., May 10—Hants County Liberals yesterday nominated Sheriff James O'Brien of Windsor for the Provincial Legislature. The contest will be between O'Brien and E. A. O'Brien, merchant, of Noel, who in June last was defeated by 120.

BASEBALL

EASTERN LEAGUE BALL

Syracuse takes a lucky day for the Canadian teams in the Eastern. Toronto defeated Buffalo 5-4, and Montreal bumped Rochester, 3-6.

CHANGES IN THE SCHEDULE.

Changes have been made in the schedule of the Town League, and the following dates fixed: Tuesday, May 15, C. L. S. vs. Sylvesters; Monday, May 29, Orientals vs. Wolverwikes.

SPECIAL INDUCEMENTS

The Toronto players are offered several extra inducements to hit hard. The list to date is:

Box of 25 cigars for a three-base hit on the home grounds, of which six are now collectable from a cigar firm.

Pair of shoes from Yonge-st. dealer for first home run at home.

Hat for best hitting average at home.

Cash prize for every two-base hit with a man on second on home grounds.

VICTORS 7—QUAKERS 5

Crash! Bang! Going down! Well, it did look very much like it from the Victors' standpoint in the first chapter of the opening game in the Town Junior League on Wednesday. They came in for a drifting finish however, and won by two runs.

The game was of the kind that makes the fans rise and give vent to the spasm of English knowledge at baseball slang. There were lots of them on hand, too, and didn't they coach the kids! Gingered up to the neck, the little fellows went into the game to do or die. They went for the umpire with spirit and abused him like a National leaguer.

The game, as the score indicates, was close, the teams evenly matched. The Quakers sprung a mild surprise by the form they showed, batting three runs of John Spratt's delivery in the first inning. They gave a bunch of stickers, but the superior work and the work at of their battery pulled them out of the hole. The batteries were Spratt and Dick Butler, president of the league, versus Willie McMahon and the chief run-getter for the Quakers. Three runs did the little fellows have to their credit, and Manager "Dave" Mullen promised him some candy. Bill Workman, the second, is following in his brother's footsteps, and is a chip off the old block alright.

But those Victors. They're not in the game for their health. Win or die for them, and every one of nine plays for the Victors, not forgetting Fred Coxey. Manager Harry Scanes wears a smile of the satisfied-with-himself brand this morning. Johnnie Spratt, on the mound for the winners, forced 7 men of the Mullen tribe to bit wildly at the thin air. "Cooney hasley" Sharpe rolled a on his jack knife handle after the league. Line up:

THE HENLEY TROPHY

"Resplendent with a burnished silver bowl lined with gold, the Henley trophy, donated by R. W. Henley, earl of Ir sporting goods, is being displayed in the window of his store.

The trophy is of solid silver, massive in shape and will crowd the mantel bats and a ball in the front. Its value is $200.00. Many are the complimentary remarks made upon its handsome appearance and the juniors will have a great incentive to spur them on to their best efforts.

A DIPLOMATIC GAME

Lord Dunsmore, the new ambassador to Italy, described at a dinner in Washington, a diplomatic game of baseball in Brazil.

"An Englishman," he said in the course of this description, "waited for his side, though the poor fellow was strange in the gatcher's box.

"The Englishman became confused in the second innings, missed a ball, and it struck him on the nose, keeping him down.

"What was it?" he asked, feebly, as he came to.

"A foul—only a foul," said the umpire.

"Man alive!" said the Englishman, "I thought it was a mule."—Philadelphia Record.

GENTLEMEN FIRST

The Boys' Baseball Club, of Ancaster, organizing for the season's games, decided to adopt a new rule in the history of amateur clubs. This rule, which is strictly observed by the team subscribed to, is—

"We will be gentlemen first and baseball players second. We pledge ourselves to every game to be careful of our language, to not use foul words or tricks, and to try to win fairly on our abilities."

There is healthy manliness in such a resolution, for it is the ambition of every true athlete to be a gentleman in all that he does, in order that his sport may be of the closest kind. When trickery and boyishm was get rid of, athletics ceases to be genuine athletics.

THE PITCHER

All other heroes must retire.
The pitcher doth appear.
And frenzied fans who see him coach
Feel up a jolly cheer.

He's to the fore, 'way up in front,
Amid in the public eye.
A man of great renown forsooth,
Whose fame will never die.

His mighty arm is much admired,
His wave delivery
Doth fill the hearts of all who watch
With boundless ecstasy.

His record is an open book,
Each fan knows what he's done,
The batters strike out in the pitch,
The hard-fought games he won.

The small boy worships him afar,
His name's on every tongue,
In all resorts around the town
You'll hear his praises sung.

Also, now few of us are called
By nearly healthy
To stand above the crowd and wave
The Cross of victory!

—Birmingham Age-Herald.

FOR THE FANS

Brooklyn has won only one game in the 17 played.

New York and Chicago are hitting up a great pace.

Cleveland has pulled off more double plays up to date than any other club.

Brooklyn has scored six runs in three games. Sounds like a world's record.

Chicago players have been promised a trip to Europe if they win the pennant again.

Boston Americans have made 36 errors, none of which have been credited to Collins.

Pitchers are plentiful in the T. B. L. this year. The scarcity thing is if any of them are any good.

"Tiny" Hopkins, the Sylvester finfed, fails to live up to his handle. He's about as long as Longboat.

Now, if the "bel air gretels" could do a little business, a concert in might bring on warm weather.

"Bill" Cinnamon has not come into prominence as yet, but — just wait until the umpire fails to catch a balk.

"Everybody works but father," says "Weary" Hoyt, from his chair on the third cushion.

"Cy" Perkins will chase the overthrows on the initial bag for Sylvesters.

Jack Gray, Joe Hollingsworth, Fred Bruce, and other reliable iron men are in the business again for Sylvesters.

Fielder Jones, manager of the Chicago team, was suspended for three days by Ban Johnson for rolling a lemon at an umpire.

"That's cute", is the mental opinion of every junior, as he looks with longing eyes at the coveted silver trophy in Henley's window.

Chicago Americans have released Catcher "Buck" Freeman to Minneapolis. This gives Minneapolis the "Buck" Freeman's, a pitcher first baseman, and outfielder.

In the south it is called "throwing the rotgut bottles" in the north "throwing tonic bottles," and in the west it "throwing pop bottles." But the target is the same every where.

John T. Chesbro will again stick for the greater New York Baseball Club. Saturday the famous pitcher arranged matters with Manager Selbach in Boston, and as a result the pitching staff of the Yanks will be strengthened in a short time.

The pitcher that goes too often to the rubber will get his bumps. Hughes, of Montreal, struck out 8 Rochester batters in the opening game, but allowed 10 hits, including home runs by Nettleton and Hartman, and two baggers by those two and Smith, McCormick and Connolly.

Stratford Herald: When everyone is giving Joe Kelly the credit for the showing that Toronto is making so far this season do not let it be forgotten that Ed. Barrow signed all these players. Ed. Barrow knows what he's about when he sees one is well as any in the business.

Larry Lajoie and Willie Keeler, two of the greatest batsmen in the game, are having a hard time collecting safeties this season. Keeler hit .362 for the Yankees last year, and the year, while Lajoie is out of the ranks of the elite, in which he usually travels.

Maybe Danny Hoffman isn't slugging the ball this year. Danny is in the batting lists with a bang, in the grand average of .425. He got this mark by scoring out 17 hits, 4 of doubles, and a pair of home runs to forty times up. Danny also leads the club easily in run-getting, with a total of 14 tallies.

May 14 will be flag-raising day at Chicago. The National Commission is going to provide a band of 100 musicians to toot before and after the pennant is hauled to the top of the flag pole. Ban Johnson will be there in order to hear these words on both sides: "Chicago Baseball Club, Champions of the World, 1906."

Some of the Pittsburg critics pick the Giants to win the pennant this year. They believe that the New York team has fully recovered from the weakness of last year, which was occasioned by the injuries to the players, and while they predict a close race between New York and Chicago they are for the Giants in the final.

Contrary to general expectations the National League race for the championship has stretched itself like a rubber man in a side show, and the teams are not enough apart to see daylight on both sides of them. In one group are the Giants and the Chicagos, and the Pittsburg dodging their steps in another Philadelphia, Cincinnati and Boston, with the "Phillies" somewhat the best. which is the rear the St. Louis and Brooklyn teams are trudging along in an effort to catch the notes of the life and here the boom of the big pennant is bellowed by the man with the stick.

In a 14-innings game the other day Fred Clarke, manager of Pittsburg, got 27 put outs and two assists, and he didn't make an error. There were slightly few perfect throws to first at that, but he got the Detroit fans at a disadvantage of sparking wild throws that showed plainly how he stands on his job as the world's series. Without the slightest doubt that they'd look mighty bad at times, Clark Griffith used to pull a little first baseman ought to pay to get through the gate. Griff doesn't think that either Hal Chase has been pulling his team to cop held by his wonderful play.

GOLF.

International golf competition between the United States and Canada is to be attempted this season. Ten well known amateurs, chiefly from the metropolitan and Philadelphia districts, have agreed to go across the border and participate in tournaments and team matches.

THE TURF.

THE KIRKFIELD PAIR

Kirkfield and Wicklight, the Kirkfield stable's Plate candidates are not doing well according to reports from Windsor, and it is doubtful if Kirkfield will be seen on the paddock in a race because he pulled up lame. Wicklight is apparently sound, but is thin, and has not worked well.

For the first time in the history of the Peterboro Turf Club there will be a race meeting at the exhibition track on the 6th of May. In addition there will be a five mile Marathon road race. The prizes of races will include a named cup, a twenty-five guinea and a twenty-five $20 will be given in prizes and the trial will be conducted in a fair and proper manner. The races will be run at the five eighth sharp and as little time as possible will be wasted between the races.

The Marathon race will be one of the great features of the afternoon. Road racing has taken quite a hold among the young men in the city, and it is fully expected that a large number will enter. Besides, the runners from the city will be joined by one or more Indians, and the turf promises a good fast race.

Saturday next is the date fixed for the King's plate race at the Woodbine.

RUNNING

RUNNING

Bob. Independent; Toronto gave Tom Longboat, the Indian runner, a hooping fine reception. Then it was proposed to raise a thousand dollars to put him through school, and just then the meeting adjourned indefinitely.

Tom Longboat has been made an honorary chieftain of the Onondagas. The chief of the Onondagas will smoke a churchwarden pipe twice a year in the Longboat wigwam and make a noise like one of Parkman's heroes.

Although the meeting of Thomas Longboat, the famous Indian runner held by nearly out 17 people, to raise road race at Boston with Frank Cotton, a few weeks away, there is already the liveliest talk in athletic circles over the coming match. There two crack runners will meet at Kenilworth Park Buffalo, on Coronation day, in a race of three miles, and not only Buffalo, but the entire country and Canada will closely watch the result.

August 10—Peterboro at Newmarket.
August 13—Newmarket at Orillia.
August 17—Beaverton at Toronto.

There must have been big doings when the Caps bumped up against the Duke of Argyll's team in England before a crowd of 10,000 people, including the Prince and Princess of Wale, who had with them the young prince and princess. The Duke of Argyll, Lord Strathcona, Lord Desborough, Sir Wilfred Laurier, Sir Gilbert Parker and many other big big lights were also in attendance. The Duke's team is supposed to be the best in the Old Country, and were expected to give the Caps a beating if any team would do the trick in England. As it was they ran a close second the score at the finish being Caps 10, Duke's 8. The London (Eng.) Sportsman's account of the game does not mention any of the players being ruled off, so it is to be taken that the Canadian professionals were somewhat under a pull.

GENERAL SPORTING NOTES.

A polo team of Spanish grandees will visit Canada next month, the visiting team, which will consist of the Dukes of Santo, Peneranda and Tarifa, will play a polo match and will bring with them a large number of the magnificent ponies, a number with an Arab strain, for which Spain is celebrated.

HOLD

Mr. Foxhall Keene, the distinguished American sportsman, who is among the half-dozen best polo players in the world, will play in England this summer. Among the visiting players this year will be a crack of Spanish dukes, with a Marquis as leader, and the Marquis will be accompanied by the Maharajah of Kuriani.

AN AUSTRALIAN RECORD

In view of the fact that an English cricket team will likely visit Australia next season it is interesting to note that a new Australian record stands for the tenth wicket partnership was set up in events at Melbourne, when Kyle and Robertson (who played for Victoria against New South Wales nearly a year ago) added 103 runs, of which the score from 342 to 362 before Robertson was bowled, Kyle contributed 230 runs, out of which Kyle was responsible for 86.

MAY 24 AT COLLINGWOOD

May 24th, Victoria Day, will be a gala day for Collingwood. An attractive sports programme, ranging from [illegible] on the climbing of greasy poles will compete for the prizes. Among the list of events the 10 mile road race, ten prizes the Tecumseh trophy, 2nd gold watch, 3rd prize cameo, will be a closely contested event. The McCuaig gold trophy is the prize for the five-mile race. A gold fob is the security gold a gold locket third. There will also be a one mile race, a one-half mile, a one-half mile relay, 440 yard, 220 yard dashes, a 100-yard dash, and high and broad jumping.

Thomas Hastings, father of the game of curling in Minnesota, is dead. He was a native of Dumfriesshire. He was twenty-three years old when "Tom" Hastings formed out the first curling stones ever seen in Minneapolis.

The good and present of Yamacraw greatness was represented at the meeting of John L. Sullivan and President Roosevelt the other day. It would make a good guessing contest to think name will live longer.

Vivian Austin, welterweight boxer, met with a bad accident recently. He was employed in the mines near Cripple. During the night a fire burned the timbers while the men were sleeping on the ground. A brute broke into the track and rended Austin. In some manner he stumbled on the track and was struck by the train and his leg was broken and he was badly bruised.

THE WORLD'S CHAMPIONSHIP

A twenty-mile walking race for the championship of the world will be held in Toronto on the Varsity athletic track, Saturday, May 26, contests being London, of Toronto, and Goldsing, of New York, who defeated London at Athens last year by a very few feet. Goldsing is a veteran, but the little holds good. The distance was set at Athens at 3,040 yards. In Toronto it will be two miles.

DANGEROUS PURGATIVES

Medicines of This Class do Not Cure—Their Effect is Weakening.

Nothing could be more foolish than to induce a weak, anaemic person to take a purgative medicine in the hope of curing him. Ask any doctor and he will tell you than a purgative medicine merely gallops through the system, weakening the tender tissues. He will tell you also that a purgative cannot possibly cure disease build up bad blood. When the blood is weak and watery, when the system is run down a tonic is the one thing needed—and the only thing that will give the right. And in all this world there is no tonic so good as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Every dose of these pills actually makes new, red blood, which feeds the nerves, reaches every organ of the body, and brings health and strength to weak, despondent people. Mrs. Amelia Beaudoran, Amherst Island, Prince Islands, Que., says: "I was physically worn out and nervous. I was at the least exertion, and I suffered from palpitation of the heart. I tried several medicines, which seemed to actually to make me worse. Then I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and half a dozen boxes have made me a well woman. I feel that I would be ungrateful if I kept it to myself. I would be willing to do all in my power to spread the news."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually made that relapsed miss Beaudoran to health and strength, and in the same way they will restore all sufferers from such ailments as indigestion, heart palpitation, nervous prostration, and the ailments that make the lives of so many women and growing girls a burden and by all druggists or by mail, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Railway Notes.

—By a recent decision of the judicial committee of the Imperial Privy Council, the Canadian Pacific Railway has won a great victory in the Canadian Northwest. When the company got its charter in 1881, there was a provision in it, that the 25,000,000 acres of land granted by the Crown as a subsidy should not be subject to taxation by the municipalities until twenty years after the grant. The municipalities held that the time for taxation had arrived twenty years after the signing of the contract with the government. The railway company on the other hand, maintained that the time was not up until twenty years after the patents had been issued. To test the case, two cut-throat tax municipalities imposed the taxes and the company refused to pay. The court sustained the company's contention.

MOTH TROUBLES

The evaporation from finding garments or other valued articles moth eaten and ruined is often intensified by the thought that the damage might have been prevented by the use of some good moth destroyer.

Avoid trouble now by moths this year by the use of some of the effective moth destroyers we carry.

Camphor Moth Balls,
Campho Napthaline,
Napthaline Flakes,
Bill's Moth Bags.

The price of camphor, which is very high this season, may prohibit its use in some cases, but the other destroyers will do the work just as well. The cost is low enough to allow their use in protection-insuring quantities.

LINDSAY, FRIDAY, MAY 17th, '07

AN APOSTLE OF PEACE.

In those days, when so much is being written and preached in favor of peace between nations, and when a great temple is being reared to shelter the annual gatherings of the World's Congress in favor of a general disarmament, it seems fitting and timely to call attention to an effort made by Mr. Andrew Carnegie, the editor of "Our Dumb Animals", and a prominent doer of humane works who has become famous for his philanthropy. He has done a grand work for peace by impressing on the public mind, time and again, the lesson taught by the "Christ of the Andes," and now offers, in the name of the American Humane Educational Society, a prize of $1,000 for the best drama that shall inculcate and exemplify the history of this statue.

The story of "The Christ of the Andes" has been frequently told in the newspapers, but is well worth repeating. Not many years ago Chili and Argentina were on the verge of war over some boundary dispute. The good, christian, peace-loving people of both countries, who were horrified at the very thought of war, began an energetic campaign to avert hostilities. They organized educational Society, a prize of $1,000 for the best drama that shall inculcate and exemplify the history of this statue.

The story of "The Christ of the Andes" has been frequently told in the newspapers, but is well worth repeating. Not many years ago Chili and Argentina were on the verge of war over some boundary dispute. The good, christian, peace-loving people of both countries, who were horrified at the very thought of war, began an energetic campaign to avert hostilities. They organized societies in both countries, and, as much effort that the boundary dispute was finally referred by agreement to the King of England, and his decision, which awarded to each nation a part of what each had been contending for, gave general satisfaction. To mark the happy termination of the incident, it was decided to erect on the very boundary line that had been in dispute a statue of Christ. The women of both countries took up the movement and finally a statue designed by a Spanish sculptor, was cast in bronze from some old cannon. It is twenty-six feet in height and is supported by a granite column surmounted by a globe representing the world. In his left hand the Christ holds a cross. His right hand is stretched out in blessing. Below are two tablets. One gives the history of the monument, the other contains this inscription; "Sooner shall these mountains crumble into dust than the people of Argentina and Chili break the peace to which they have pledged themselves at the feet of Christ, the Redeemer." On the summit of the Andes, and upon the boundary line that has been in dispute, the statue was placed on March 13th, 1904. A benediction to the nations that created it, and a lesson to the world."

The Chronicle, the story, says which had been secured in preparation for war were sold and the proceeds devoted to peaceful enjoyments, instead of rushing at each other's throats, were mustered out, and the men were enlarged to peaceful pursuits. The arsenal of Chili has been converted into a school and the roads and harbors of both countries have received the benefit of the money that would have been spent in war.

It reads more like a romance or a prophetic vision, than a cold-blooded matter-of-fact newspaper article, and why could not the story be repeated between other nations? Canada and the United States for instance, has done much to prepare the way for a similar statue—or a number of them seeing that the boundary line is such so long one. The agreement to make the great lakes free from hostile armaments. Fortunately there is now even a remote prospect of serious trouble between the two countries, but a statue of peace would be a constant reminder to the people on both sides of the boundary line to maintain the peace, and would encourage the people to think of peace instead of war, while serving as an example to the world of neighborly living.

A Natural Mistake.

"My best hat was delivered here and hasn't been sent to my room. Where is it?"

"Heavens, Miss! Was that your hat? I thought it was a lamp shade, and told the chambermaid to put it on the table lamp in your parlor. I'd-I'm very sorry."

BOARD OF TRADE APPROVES OF LOAN

Another Enthusiastic Endorsation of the Malleable Iron Works Proposition—Leading Citizens Express Their Views.

Evening Post—Tue., May 14.

"That the Board of Trade endorse the proposition before them, and give every assistance consistent with its dignity, individually, to the carrying of a by-law loaning the proposed Malleable Iron Works $35,000 after $45,000 had been expended by such a company, to be repaid in twenty years."

The above resolution, moved by Mr. H. J. Lytle and seconded by Mr. M. J. Carter, was carried unanimously at the Board of Trade meeting last evening. There were present about forty of our citizens, and the majority took an active part in the discussion and all displayed a lively interest in the proceedings. President K. Kylie was in the chair, and Secretary Donald read the minutes of the last meeting which were sustained. The President then, in a few brief words, explained the purpose of the meeting—endeavor to locate a new industry in town—and called on Mr. Thos. Stewart.

Mr. Stewart gave a concise account of the malleable iron industry proposition, as advanced by Mr. H. Rustad, and outlined a brief history's issue of The Post. Mr. Rustad had a wide and varied experience in the malleable iron business. Recommending the possibilities of a malleable foundry in along with other genuine proposals, he would make a new factory in Lindsay, $80,000 was necessary. They would expend $45,000, and asked a loan of $35,000. This loan would be repaid within 20 years. Fifty men would be employed at the outset, at a comparative estimate, and this number would be increased as the work progressed. Exemption from all but school tax was asked for twenty years. The town will be secured by a first mortgage on the property.

THE PROSPECTS

Mr. H. Rustad then spoke a few words re the immense possibilities of a malleable industry. "There is only one up-to-date malleable iron foundry in Canada, and yet, 'all the demand exceeds the supply—so much so that many are using a cheap grade of malleable, it is almost impossible to get large malleable castings in Canada.

Mr. F. C. Taylor was the first to respond to the invitation of the President for opinions. He said the character of this industry was of the best, but nothing should be undertaken unless the foundation of the scheme a solid one. He asked (1) Who are the people who are going to run this industry, (2) How many Dominion are there in Canada, (3) Is it necessary to have special legislation to accomplish such a thing.

(Mr. Stewart said in reply, that it would have to be voted on by the people. The legislature may be asked to confirm it. He was not in a position to mention the names of the parties interested, with Mr. Rustad's exception. They were business practical men with money.

"The malleable iron industry is out of the best," was Mr. R. Sylvester's opinion. He wanted to know how are taxed to their utmost with orders, and how are they to be met quick. To a company's guarantee is good, if properly handled, they will make money.

Mr. J. Carter—"Were after information and this one question is of every standpoint." In his opinion if Hob's proposition was accepted, that it would not be long before there would be 200 men employed. Only a few citizens that would of necessity be the people of Lindsay, their contribution to the exemption from taxation, and the balance of the town would be to Lindsay's advantage. Some guarantee of the company should be revealed to a committee of citizens, and if satisfactory no objections were raised. The matter, as a whole, appealed to the Board of Trade, and in all judging by the comments passed around.

Montreal Herald, All Canada, irrespective of party, will extend congratulations to Senator G. W. Ross upon the success of his scheme. It is more gratifying by the fact that his bride belongs to a family which has been prominently identified in the world of art not unworthy of comparison with those of Mr. Ross in the world of statesmanship. Mr. Ross by some means so and as the length of his career leads much people to suppose, and he is to be hoped that many years of happiness in the convenient leisure of the Upper Chamber are reserved for him.

The Saskatoon Phoenix not unfavorably contrasts the backward spring weather in the Northwest. It says that no matter how the seed may be sown, it does not take long very much at the same time every year. Nature seems to provide compensation for a short season of crops mature more rapidly. It adds,

Early seeding invariably is followed by a spell of drought, and the grain lies in the ground and refuses to sprout through lack of moisture. Or it may be that having sprouted the tender shoots are cut down by early May frosts. On the other hand grain sown in a cool bed under which the frost is just raising and the ice is just started for distance, and in the genial sunlight makes rapid progress.

Mr. T. Brady voiced the opinions of previous speakers, regarding the possibilities of such an industry, and asked the citizens of Lindsay, the prospects in view, to make it a paying industry.

Mr. Sylvester gave the information that Oshawa had given the Ontario Malleable Works of that town a bonus of $25,000 free of taxes for 20 years, and McLaughlin Carriage Works a bonus of $50,000.

Mr. D. Cluxmon spoke very clearly on the subject. He said he had been surprised at the splendid terms offered. "No industry," he said, "in Canada has made more headway than malleable iron." Citing the Oshawa industry as an example, he spoke of the marvellous growth of the factory, from "Starting on a small scale it has continued to increase, and it has not every industry in Lindsay could be thrown inside, and lost sight of. The company erected 50 houses in Oshawa last year and intend to build 83 houses this year." Skilled mechanics employed who draw good pay. The proposition now before the board seems to be a very plausible one. The reasons for not divulging the names of some of the members of the body have were evident. One of them was a personal acquaintance of one of the men, who, he understood, was going to be interested in this enterprise. "This man was occupying a lucrative position with a United States firm, and it would be to his interests not to have his name divulged." Messrs. Robert Bryans, W. T. C. Robinson, and B. J. Gough each spoke briefly in favor of the scheme, and its probable beneficial results.

Mr. J. P. Ryley figured out that the town would receive $450 a year as school tax; this would relieve the ratepayers to that extent. The school tax is to be paid on the building as is assessed. He said of the material who the men were who are to form the company.

Mr. Stewart explained that no one would be asked to purchase stock.

Mr. A. Fisher concurred with the rest of the speakers in thinking the proposition a good one. "The men who want their names withheld," he said, "are men who have good positions and could not afford to risk publicity. The trouble would be to get the vote out."

Mr. Geo. W. Beall asked some pertinent questions relative to the industry, and in reply Mr. Stewart explained that this meeting was only a preliminary one, and that details were not to hand.

In reply to Mr. F. C. Taylor's question that Mr. Rustad divulge the names of the company to a committee of responsible citizens, Mr. J. Carew said the best security is the money they are going to be found enough to spend $45,000 without getting back one cent of it" he exclaimed.

Mr. Taylor—"Have you full confidence in your partners Mr. Rustad?"

"If I did not, I wouldn't be here," replied Mr. Rustad.

Mr. J. M. McLennan described it as a shame to keep the business secret because if they were known other towns and cities would be after them.

"A very valuable industry, proposition," was Mr. W. B. Sparling's opinion. He will being other industries dependent on malleable iron and we have to make some little risk if we are to secure any industries for Lindsay.

Mr. R. M. Bell raised a few objections adding his testimony to the plausibility of the proposition. A city through the Board of Trade recommendation for his efforts in securing the Malleable Iron Works in Oshawa. Mr. Bell said, "Lindsay is not a city of millionaires." Mr. Bell said he was in favor of the proposition, and carried unanimously.

Mr. Sylvester moved, seconded and it was generally conceded that the industry be encouraged by the town would be to Lindsay's advantage. Some guarantee of the company should be revealed to a committee of citizens, and if satisfactory no objections were raised. The matter, as a whole, appealed to the Board of Trade, and in all judging by the comments passed around.

Dugal Smith vs. Township of Eldon.

This action was tried at the assizes jury sittings last week before the Honorable Justice Riddell, when judgment was reserved.

The plaintiff is a farmer living on lot 7, in the 1st con. of Thorah, just across the boundary between Eldon and Thorah. The water from an extensive basin of land in the township of Eldon, some 5 miles in length, finds its way to the quarter line between lots 16 and 17, in the 1st con. of Eldon, where it formerly crossed the quarter line, and passed over a portion of lot 15, same out of the town line near the centre of the west boundary of lot 15. For years ago the township dug a ditch on the north side of the quarter line, the result of which was that the water instead of crossing the quarter line as formerly, went westerly along the north side of the quarter line to the town line, and in such volumes that the culverts and ditches were not sufficient to carry the water, which the result being that the wagoners adjoined the plaintiff's land made quantities as to damage the crops on 48 acres and as he claims, this portion of the plaintiff's land unfit for cultivation. The water also carried deposits of sand for plaintiff's land.

The plaintiff claimed damages, and also an injunction of restraining the township from flooding his land in the future. The defendants denied the flooding and also claimed that the plaintiff's remedy, if any, was under the arbitration clauses of the Municipal Act, and not by action, and the plaintiff's remedy was barred by the limitation of one year contained in these clauses.

The judgment was delivered at Osgoods Hall on Friday last in favor of the plaintiff, with a direction to the mayor at Lindsay to ascertain the extent of the damages sustained, an injunction restraining the defendants from the further flooding of the plaintiffs land, the injunction not to go into force for two months, to enable the defendants to make other provision for carrying the water away. The defendants pay the costs, plaintiffs costs. Thos Stewart and M. H. Hooch for plaintiff, F. A. McDonald for defendants.

MADE A TEST OF FIRE SYSTEM.

Hose Wagon on Hand Promptly — Some of the Men Late.

Evening Post of May 9th.

Some interest was taken in a test of our fire protection system was made. Mayor Vrooman sprung one on the boys last evening, as above being sent in from the box at Carew's office corner at 7.30.

The hose wagon was on hand, Hose wagon reached corner at 7.32 1-2 with two drivers and two firemen; two lengths of hose attached to hydrant and water turned on 7.34; five men of brigade present at 7.37, six men at 7.38, also Chief of Police Vincent. At 7.38 direct pressure wasturned on the mains, and a second branch line was stretched to the hydrant in use. The pressure was so strong that the hose gave way in several places.

—It makes us very tired indeed to have merchants say that it is one of the people to trade at home and not patronize the catalogue house, mail or big city stores for their goods, and then in the same breath or in one seconds have presented to us a catalogue from some big city house or receive copy for an advt written on a letterhead which shows that they set the example.

—Our own store, please, to a free sample of Dr. Shoop's "Health Coffee." Real coffee not injurious to stomach, your heart, or kidneys. Made of roasted grains and herbs. Wonderful. Shoop his very clever imitation of Mocha and Java. Fine in flavor and taste, yet not has not even a single grain of coffee in it. Dr. Shoop's Health Coffee imitation is made from pure cereals and may be served with cream, milk, etc. You will surely like Health Coffee. Sold by druggists.

—For about five or six months of the year practically all business in rural districts and small villages is suspended. Farmers are busy, and it is a common occurrence to see them when calling on the trade to farmers along the road and thus deprive themselves of a large amount of business. It is but one of the conditions they have to face.

Coulph's Plant Pays.

The report of the light and heat commission of Guelph, which was presented to the council on Monday, is as follows; "The net gain on operating account for the month just is $19,-[illegible] as against $17,[illegible] for the same fund over 1906 of $2,155.33. A net gain for the nine months just ended amounts to $22,826.[illegible]. Deducting and after deducting a fixed liability for interest and county fund on debentures, leaves $15,148 to the good. The gain for the nine months over 1906 is $4,070.85. An increase of 1,277,150 cubic feet of gas was sold during the quarter. There was an increase in electric lighting current of 9,470 K. W. hours." Municipal ownership is evidently a paying proposition for the city of Guelph.

BUY YOUR STAPLE GOODS AT THIS STORE

OBITUARY.

Robt. Henderson, Mariposa

Robert Henderson died on Sunday, April 28th, at Little Britain, was one of the oldest residents and most respected farmers of Mariposa township. Mr. Henderson was born in Emily township 71 years ago; and as a young man of 21 years, moved into Ops and bought land, which in these days meant clearing before a crop could be raised. He was a man of a goodly share of courage and persistence; he succeeded in clearing and providing for himself a large farm of 275 acres, thus making a comfortable home. In 1863 he married Miss Ann Nicherson to whom were born five sons, some of whom are prosperous farmers of Mariposa, also Dr. W. J. Henderson and Mr. Robert Henderson of this town. Mrs. Henderson died in July of 1878. Mr. Henderson was conferred to God and joined the Wesleyan Methodists in 1848 and even but a young man of 22 years. He loved his church and was a faithful member for many years, giving both of his time and substance to the cause. He was a faithful and helpful to the community. He seemed to have enjoyed life, as was Mrs. Wm. Davidson, who with her family moved into Mariposa from Manvers township, and lived near Bethel.

Mr. Henderson peacefully passed away on Sabbath morning, April 28, at 9.30 and got Tuesday, April 30, was laid to rest. The funeral was largely attended by the community and many friends. Rev. Mr. Hooper, Order of Workmen of which Lodge he was a charter member, officiated in a body, and took part in the ceremony at the grave. The memory of the just is blessed.—Cannington Gleaner.

CANADIAN EXPRESS CO'S OFFICE

Agent Widdess Now Comfortably Established—Premises Richly Furnished.

Fitted in the most modern style with handsome metallic ceiling, varnished oak furniture, and commodious apartments, the Canadian Express Co. agent, A. W. Telegraph office presents a very creditable appearance.

Extensive improvements have been made recently, and the office has been enlarged and re-arranged. In the ticket office there is a new ticket desk; an ordered brass frieze, surrounding it, which adds to the appearance. Adjoining this is the general counter of solid oak, handsomely varnished. Behind it the telegraph operator's desk, which has been changed. There are six instruments, with a cabinet rack for relays. Back switch is also an added convenience. The private office of Mr. Widdess, the agent, is at the rear. Behind the company and its officials to the strictest account, compelling them to make such arrangements as will give plenty of rest to train crews and dispatchers, and no employe should be allowed to work an hour beyond the specified time.

THROWN FROM BUGGY

Prominent Lindsay Citizen Figures in a Runaway—Buggy Smashed.

Evening Post of May 11.

Mr. H. M. Baker, of the firm of Baker & Bryans, had a very exciting experience in a runaway this morning. He was driving down Lindsay-st. north when his horse became frightened at a push-cart being pushed by pavement, and bolted. Mr. Baker, who was driving, held his lines firmly, but the horse broke, and the horse dashed off down the street, the buggy being pure Mr. Baker was thrown out and badly bruised.

The horse continued its career, and under the C. P. R. overhead bridge broke free from the buggy, which was badly damaged. It was again laid to rest, the horse and boys. The animal was practically uninjured.

Long Hours and Public Safety.

(Toronto Star.)

The severe sentence of three years imprisonment imposed by Judge Hall on Conductor Thompson of the Grand Trunk Railway serves to draw attention to a great public evil. The conductor worked for 20 hours, the powers of endurance, and the result was that he fell asleep on duty, and a collision occurred. The chief blame lies with the officials who allowed him to work twenty-one hours. The public are concerned it is just as bad to "allow" as to "compel." So long as the matter is optional there will always be employes who will work beyond their powers of endurance, and take the chance of breaking down, or falling asleep on duty.

The railway companies have wisely decided not to give the men on a train to cap who drink intoxicants, owing to the greatest temptation. A single glass of liquor may imperil the judgment of a man who is tired out, curately, and act promptly in an emergency. The same result may follow from want of sleep. Even if the overworked employee does not fall asleep on duty he may be sleepy or fatigued of a time when all his powers are required. The chief blame hold the company and its officials to the strictest account, compelling them to make such arrangements as will give plenty of rest to train crews and dispatchers, and no employe should be allowed to work an hour beyond the specified time.

RICE LAKE MUSKRAT CROP

Trappers Enjoyed Good Season.

Peterboro Review: The biggest catch of muskrats this season must be credited to Mr. Thomas Bow of Hiswatha. He captured 650 all told, and in one night at Rice Lake bagged as many as 120 rats. This is a pretty good record. Mr. Thomas Barrie, further, of this city, bought Bell Crowe's muskrat skins, paying him 35 cents apiece for them. Merriman Bros. of Rice Lake, were also very successful getting in at 1250 skins. They also disposed of 1000 to Mr. Barrie, and during the spring bought 11,400 muskrat skins, 1000 mink skins, 1000 coon skins, and 46 lynx skins. Mr. Barrie will use all these furs in his business, and there is a good demand for them. He has bought more mink, lynx, coon and muskrat skins this year than before, both from around here and distant points. He has been the busiest season for trappers for some years, and the prices have never been better. Rice Lake has certainly yielded its share of muskrats.

Discovered Nickel Mine.

Peterboro Examiner; A report has been received from Kinmount that Mr. Hopkins of that place has recently discovered a very valuable nickel mine in Somerville township. Examples of ore have been taken up to Toronto and that nickel exists in large quantities.

Pioneer Farm in the Clay Belt.

A change has been made in regard to the location of the pioneer farm in the great clay belt of Northern Ontario. A site in the township of Cairnsmore, district of Nipissing, was decided upon some time ago, the understanding being that the pioneer farm should be on Ontario Railway would run through the property. But the farm, owing to engineering difficulties, however, a location of the line has been decided upon, and it will not now touch Newmarket township. The selection of a new site for the farm will be made by Hon. Mr. Monteith, Minister of Agriculture, and Hon. Dr. Reaume, Minister of Public Works. The farm will be at present confined to his home suffering from grippe and the farmer in the north will not be made until his is fully recovered.

The Bureau of Labor at Washington has issued some statistics relating to the increased cost of living. At wholesale prices the increase in cost of 258 commodities in 1906 over 1900 was more than 2 1-2 per cent., and compared with 1887 it amounts to 30 1-2 per cent—considerably more than one-third. The commodities include food, clothing implements and metals and building material. No doubt a similar comparison of prices in this country would show a similar result.

The Minnesota railways compelled to adopt a 2-cent rate, have set about shaping their business to yield equitably to the law. They have made drawn every form of reduced passenger rates, including excursion tickets, homeseekers' rates for points within the state, party excursion rates, mechanics' excursions and numerous other concessions, and great gains in passenger business have been made. If the 2-cent rate has been imposed on roads that have but a small share of the passenger business, it is on to make good the losses, or more business must be secured. There will be no loss to the roads, if the law, by the movement, meanwhile there is likely to be a proper readjustment.

Stratford Beacon: According to the present agreement with its street railway, Toronto gets a take-off of close upon $60,000 per annum out of the gross receipts of the road. This money has to be paid into the city treasury before a dollar is devoted to the paying of interest on stocks or bonds. Yet, notwithstanding, Toronto is kicking at the Privy Council for an interpretation of the agreement which permits the company to operate the road in such a manner that after the city's claims are satisfied something may be made for the stockholders. And so fearful are the newspapers of that city of a charge of favoring corporations that not one in a dozen entire number has the courage to utter a word in favor of the stockholders in the matter. Yet, if there is any thing Socialism must have got a strong hold on the people when such a state of affairs exists.

MALLEABLE IRON WORKS FOR LINDSAY

Promoters Want Loan of $35,000 Will First Expend $45,000.

A Proposition Outlined at Tuesday's Meeting of Council and Strongly Endorsed by Board of Trade—Aldermen Fell Into Line and Passed a Resolution to Have By-law Submitted to the People.

Evening Post of May 14.

A special meeting of Council was held last evening, the primary object being to hear a Board of Trade delegation in regard to a malleable iron works proposition. Advantage was taken, however, of the occasion to transact some of pressing business, and the aldermen sat till 10 o'clock discussing various matters. Mayor Vrooman spoke all the members were in their places when business was taken up at 8 o'clock.

THE LINDSAY-ST. WALK.

Ald. Ross, chairman of the Board of Works, reported that Aldermen McGough, Flynn and himself had again carefully examined and measured the ground on Lindsay-st. from Kenrick to Glenelg-st., over which the walk was proposed to have a new layout. The latter road, known as the grandfather walk. If all the trees were left there would be only 20 inches of additional roadway would be gained; by placing the walk outside the trees and removing four and part of another a roadway 29 ft. wide would be left from one street to the other, and the walk would use 5 ft in line with that to the south as far as the top of the hill.

Ald. Kyle—I am still open to conviction if any better plan is presented—I have come to no irrevocable decision in favor of the plan mentioned, but I fancy it is the best solution available. I went over the ground with Mr. Rae and our measurements are to be relied upon. When so little is to be gained by removing the trees I think it is our duty to preserve them. I am averse to spoiling a good street like Lindsay-st., but owing to the fact that we have to maintain the old drain I think the plan proposed is the best under the circumstances.

Mayor Vrooman—It was stated at last meeting that a load of hay and more would not be able to pass the walk we built east.

Ald. Eyres—I'll guarantee that the load of hay will be able to pass.

Ald. Begg—"Three loads! Impossible."

Ald. McGough—"By removing the bit of boulevard along the west side we would be equalized." Ald. Ross—Then went on to explain why he favored placing the walk outside the trees.

Ald. Doyle—"We ought to go slow; I went over the ground and would judge from what I saw of the drain that it will last as long as before we shall have to rebuild it. It is strange that I should be in creed idea to tile it, fill it in, and put the earth back to settle for a year or so, then we would be in the behind the new walk over it. The drain is good for at least a year yet, or longer."

Ald. Bas—"You saw only the top of the drain, Ald Devitt; the bottom of the drain is better than feet below."

Reeve Begg—"It would require 22 feet of drain tiles to pipe that drain."

Ald. McLean—"Is it proposed that the drain may have to be rebuilt at a few more to the nominal expenditure in favor of the walk being placed outside the trees? I do not interfere with repairs to the drain when they are necessary. It would be folly to remove all the earth and level down 20 inches of roadway. The property owners will be put to a great expense if the old drain and beautify the surroundings."

Ald. Ross—"I went over the ground with Ald. McGough and Ald. Baker, and there was no question raised as to the removal of the trees. When we build we should place the walk where it will be right for all time to come. By removing the trees we have a roadway 29 feet wide gained."

Ald. Bas—"At present the road only 24 feet wide—by the new arrangement we would have 29 feet."

Ald. Kyle—"Mr. Rae is willing to have the trees removed and the slope the walk on the south side. The White does not want the trees cut because they are a great property."

Reeve Begg—"Make a motion; there seems to be a doubt with the Board."

Ald. McLean then moved, seconded by Ald. Ryan, that the walk on east side of Lindsay-st., between Kenrick and Glenelg-st., be placed outside the trees."

Ald. W. Jordan moved in amendment, seconded by Ald. Devitt, the proper place, and that all interference with the trees be avoided."

Reeve Begg—"Repair the board walks and let it stand over for another year; something may occur in the meantime to bring about a better understanding."

Ald. McGough—"The question is, if it worth to go to the expense of these line trees for the sake of 20 inches of roadway? I would prefer a strong there want to improve their property, and the shade is nearer to it otherwise."

The amendment seconded Reeve Begg's amendment.

Ald. Bas—"We have two propositions before us, one being for 20 feet, but air that way of doing things is not right, but left Monday where it is to-day. I say, deal with the matter now."

Mayor Vrooman—"I know the resident property owners are willing and make improvements, at the same time, the present walk is good for another year or so. If you start in cutting down beautiful trees it will make a noise in the town—the people won't stand it. For the sake of 20 inches of road I would say: don't cut them down; I'm in strong sympathy with the people who say, 'Wait for a year,' and I'll support the amendment."

THE MALLEABLE IRON WORKS.

On motion a deputation of Board of Trade members were granted permission to address the Council. The visitors included President H. Kyle, Wm. Flavelle, Tom Stewart, J. O'Reilly, R. Sylvester, D. Hay, W. T. G. Gibson, W. B. Rogers, H. B. Clemes, Robt. Ross, Mr. Henry Russell, Superintendent of Stewson's Limited, and others.

Mr. Stewart opened the ball by remarking that Mr. Rustad was prevent in order to make a proposal to Council relative to the establishment of a malleable iron works in town. The latter had been driven to interest himself in the production of malleable iron owing to his connection with another industry requiring malleables. He had therefore secured the backing of reliable parties in the business, and stated the town to advance by way of loan the sum of $35,000, to be paid over when the owners had expended a sum of $45,000, the whole amount of $80,000 be put into buildings, plant and raw material. The works would employ at the outset 50 hands, and a guarantee would be given to keep that number steadily employed, but there was every reason to believe that double and treble the number mentioned would be needed as promoters desired the usual exemptions, but would pay water rt. The loan would cover a period of 20 years, and would be repaid in annual instalments, with interest. The town's security would be the real estate and the company's buildings and plant, and it has been proved by experience that this kind, but a number of years, and if we do not take advantage of such opportunities now, when times are good, we shall be off in the rear when a period of depression sets in. We made a good step forward when the Middleton Williams foundry was secured, and if we succeed in getting the meritable works several allied industries are sure to come. The works may in a short time employ from 100 to 200 men, instead of 50. It would be well to remember that the town would not pay over one cent until $45,000 had been expended.

Mr. Russell was next called on. In response he said Mr. Stewart had given a good outline of the proposition, and it only remained for him to tell how it was arrived at. Experience As most of the citizens know, he was interested in the local foundry, and uses a lot of malleable castings. Formerly, the Stewson's Limited, several years he had been finding great difficulty in getting castings, and if the castings he required, while there were two foundries in Lindsay, he had to go to Toronto for them. The company had lost the greater part of last year's sales owing to the inability to get the castings complained of, and it was in order for the good of the company and of affairs that he had interested himself in the proposition. The foundry works and spent his time and money in interesting men in the malleable business in the United States. The proposition was presented to Council, and it was up to them to take action.

Mr John Carew referred to the splendid record of the Madison Works, some foundry some having from 45 men being now employed. A malleable works would benefit all the member of hands at high wages, and there was a good demand for the output of such an industry. A malleable works would benefit the Bell Works told him they had arranged to get a large part of their required stock last year. Such an industry would be a great acquisition to the town, and every citizen should take an active part in having the by-law carried.

Mr. Kyle said that every member of the Board was unanimous in favor of the proposition. He knew of a number of manufacturers who had paid as high as $40 for malleables for the last 15 or 16 years, and they would be willing to have the trees removed and the slope the walk on the south side. The White does not want the trees cut because they are a great property."

Reeve Begg—"Make a motion; there seems to be a doubt with the Board."

Ald. McLean then moved, seconded by Ald. Ryan, that the walk on east side of Lindsay-st., between Kenrick and Glenelg-st., be placed outside the trees."

Ald. W. Jordan moved in amendment, seconded by Ald. Devitt, the proper place, and that all interference with the trees be avoided."

Reeve Begg—"Repair the board walks and let it stand over for another year; something may occur in the meantime to bring about a better understanding."

Ald. McGough—"The question is, is it worth to go to the expense of these line trees for the sake of 20 inches of roadway? I would prefer a strong there want to improve their property, and the shade is nearer to it otherwise."

The amendment seconded Reeve Begg's amendment.

Ald. Bas—"We have two propositions before us, one being for 20 feet, but air that way of doing things is not right, but left Monday where it is to-day. I say, deal with the matter now."

Mayor Vrooman—"I know the resident property owners are willing and make improvements, at the same time, the present walk is good for another year or so. If you start in cutting down beautiful trees it will make a noise in the town—the people won't stand it. For the sake of 20 inches of road I would say: don't cut them down; I'm in strong sympathy with the people who say, 'Wait for a year,' and I'll support the amendment."

Reeve Begg explained that one of the gains offered by the Ordnance Officer at Kingston was for the trees, the sum of $1,000 which was taken before adjournment.

"GOOD CLOTHES"

The word "Good" covers the whole question. Clothes can't be good unless made from good cloth. They can't be good unless thoroughly tailored, they can't be good unless they are stylish and they can't be good in the fullest sense of the term unless they fit perfectly.

Claim is Hollow Ones.

It is a favorite device of the merchant who substitutes to represent that the article he offers in place of the advertised product his customer asks for is a few cents cheaper. The manufacturer of the product no expense to exploit it. A moment's reflection will convince the buyer of the fallacy of this claim. Advertising decreases the cost of production of any commodity. It accounts for the popularity of the unadvertised article, made in small quantities, is almost certain to be inferior if offered at a lower price than the widely-known competing product. Purchasers who bear this point in mind are not likely to be imposed upon by unprincipled dealers who urge them to take something "just as good" as what they call for. The same reasoning holds good as a general rule in regard to the claim made by the non-advertising dealer that his goods are sold cheaper than his more enterprising rival. Experience shows that it pays no more for plenty of advertising than it does for a little. Buyers prefers to share the saving with his customers. But in dressed, occasions there isn't any saving, and if you are not advertising, and every live firm admits it.

Starving Babies.

The baby who suffers from indigestion is simply starving to death. It loses all desire for food, and the little it does take does no good, and the child is peevish, cross and restless. Mothers will find no other medicine as prompt to cure as Baby's Own Tablets—they always do good—they cannot possibly do harm. Mrs. Gomes Savoy, Little Lamoque, N. B., says: "I believe that had it not been for Baby's Own Tablets my child would have been in her grave. She was completely run down, would refuse food, and was rapidly failing. Nothing I gave her did her any good until I began the use of Baby's Own Tablets, and these have changed her into a well and growing child." Sold by druggists or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. Brockville, Ont.

the paper, so that it was down Yesterday in my last quarter's bill. Oh, yes, I assure you, the most brilliant effort to do the most incredibly foolish things."

Ruth looked relieved. Her pretty features relaxed into a smile.

"Then I thought Harry Henson has done so," she said. "I fancy I have solved the mystery of the cigar-case. I mean, the mystery of the one I bought."

"And which was changed for the one purchased at Walker's, hence these tears. But I thought that my cigar-case really purchased by an American."

"Yes, I know. And I fancy that the manager honestly thought so. But I think I explain that."

It was David's turn to look up eagerly.

"Do you mean it?" he exclaimed. "It will make a wonderful difference if you can. That has been one of the most bewildering knots of the whole puzzle. If we could only trace the ultimate fate of those notes, I suppose changed at the same time as the cigar-case."

"Indeed they were not," Ruth cried. "I have always maintained that the case was changed by Henson, as you and I have already decided. Henson knew that no change not at the time we thought."

"Not at the time of the package on the table for him to see."

"No, at least I can't say. He had the other case with him probably passed on to him by Van Steck. Or perhaps he merely exchanged what he had purchased. That was sufficient for his purpose, of course he must have frightened all about our scheme. After I had laid my trap for him on your behalf, I was waiting for him during the latter part of the evening.

"I trust there is nothing wrong?" he asked, anxiously.

"Not in the least," Ruth hastened to reply. "The whole matter is a kind of comedy that I wanted to solve. It is a long story, but you understand. And who made the exchange?"

"Mr. Gates, madam. A tall gentleman, very distinguished."

"That is quite sufficient thank you," said Ruth. "I am sorry to detain you over so silly a matter."

The distinguished-looking gentleman with an air of painful reproach that nothing would be wrong in such a place as this, bowed. He bowed his visitors out and informed them that it was a lovely afternoon, and that the question of the most disputatious could not well be raised.

"You see how your inquiries might have been utterly baffled, if I had not found a clue," Ruth said, as the two went along North Street. "We shall presently find that the Meredith American and Reginald Henson are one and the same person."

"And you fancy that he made the exchange at Lockhart's?"

"I feel pretty certain of it," Ruth replied. "And you will presently find that he had a hand in the purchase of the other cigar-case from Walen's. Go to Marley's and make your inquiries as to whether or not Walen's gave him a cigar-case, proved."

David proceeded to do so without further delay. Inspector Marley was out but David left a message for him. Would he communicate by telephone to Mr. Gates? Ruth had finished his dinner when Marley rang him up.

"Are you there? Yes, I have seen Walen. Your suspicions were quite right. Customer had seen cigar-case in question. The sketch was sent to dear. Walen dealt with some manufacturers and proposed to go to see how saw customer again. That sort of thing is the curse of shopkeepers every day. Yes Walen thinks he could recognize the man again. Nothing more? Good-night, sir."

CHAPTER XLI.

It looked like being a long, dull evening for Ruth and David, who had gone to the theatre or anything of that kind. Unfortunately, it was only seven o'clock, after which he sat up for Henson's return, thus putting out the day's task for to-morrow. Ruth felt that she could wander restlessly about her rooms and wonder what she had left here and there and wondering where the whole thing was leading to.

With a certain sense of relief David heard the front door bell trill about eleven o'clock. Somebody was coming to see him, and he hoped it was Ruth's or Stedel's present frame of mind. He was in the mood for anything a feeling of genuine pleasure as Hatherly Bell was announced.

"My dear fellow, I'm delighted to see you," he cried. "Take the big armchair. Let me give you a cigar and a whisky and soda and make you comfortable. That's better."

"I'm tired out," Bell said. "In London all day and home six with Cross. Can you put me up for the night?"

"My bachelor bedroom is always ready. Bell."

"Thanks. I don't fancy you need be under any apprehension that anybody has spirited Van Steck away. In the first place Henson, who seems to have discovered what happened, is in a terrible state of mind. He waited very badly to remain at Little Ease in case I had stated that Van Steck had left the hospital in a fainting fit, and I have travelled together. Of course he said nothing whatever about Van Steck whom he is supposed to know nothing about, but I could see that he was very much disturbed. The worst of it is that Cross was going to get me to operate on Van Steck, and Hertiage, who seems wonderfully better, was going to assist."

"Is your unfortunate friend up to that kind of thing now?" David asked.

"I fancy so. Do you know that Hertiage used to have a fairly good practice near Lettmer Castle? Lord Littlemer knows him well. I went Hertiage to come into this. I want to get at the reason why Henson has been so profoundly good to Hertiage. For years he has practically provided him with a home at Palace's. And when Hertiage mentions Henson's name he always closes so with a kind of forced gratitude."

"You think that Hertiage is going to be useful to us?"

"I think so. Mind you, it is only my idea—what I call intuition, for want of a better word. And what have you been going lately?"

David proceeded to explain, giving the events of the afternoon in full detail. Bell followed the account with the keenest interest, and Ruth proceeded to tell his own story. David appeared to be fascinated by the tale of the man with the thumb-nail.

"The Man Thirty hopes to hypnotize the man with the thumb," he said, "and I have seen more of her than I have. Bell. Does she strike you as she struck me—a girl of wonderfully acute mind allied to a plan and absolutely absolutely brilliant?"

"She is that and more," Bell said, warmly. "Now that she is free to act for herself she developed wonderful how clever she worked out that Remington's scheme, and directly she put Lord Henson, and now she helped me to find out that Lettmer's great books again without Henson even guessing at the reason and now she has forced the confidence of Henson's mother. She has saved him from a great loss which he would have blamed him at any moment, she has convinced him that Ruth is absolutely innocent of any part in the way of an adventuress, with a view to marriage. She has put me on Miss Merritt, and a fine hard-cutting tool she will be in the end.

"Where is Henson at the present moment?" David asked.

"I left him in London this afternoon," Bell replied. "But I haven't the slightest idea what he is about. I fancy he made his way to Brighton by this time. I shall be there in the morning if I can."

Bell paused as the telephone bell rang out shrilly. The mere sound of it thrilled both of them with excitement. Bell wondered what news the instrument had proved!

"Are you there?" came the quick, small whisper. "Is that you, Mr. Steel? Yes, I'm Miss Henson."

There was a long pause, during which the two men listened eagerly, the stock ledger madam had sent a gentleman to change the cigar-case in diamond bracelet previously admired. The speaker had attended to both the wife and the mother, and Miss Ella was waiting for him during the latter incident.

"I trust there is nothing wrong?" he asked, anxiously.

"Not in the least," Ruth hastened to reply. "The whole matter is a kind of comedy that I wanted to solve. It is a long story, but you understand. And who made the exchange?"

"Mr. Gates, madam. A tall gentleman, very distinguished."

"That is quite sufficient thank you," said Ruth. "I am sorry to detain you over so silly a matter."

"Is your unfortunate friend up to that kind of thing now?" David asked.

"No help for it." David muttered. "I must chance my luck. I never saw a dog yet that I was afraid of. Well, here goes."

He scrambled over the wall and dropped on the moist, clammy earth on the other side. He fumbled forward a few steps, and then stopped suddenly. He was all standing by the weird scene which was being solemnly enacted under the moonlight.

CHAPTER XLII.

Whilst events were moving outside, time at Loughton Grange seemed to have stood still. The dust and the desolation were over there, the gloom brooded like an evil spirit. And yet it was not the dull, dreary gloom that was coming to banish the hoary old spectre for good.

Still, Enid felt the monotony to be unendurable at times. There were times when she rebelled passionately against the whole thing, and there were moments to her when it seemed that her mind couldn't stand the strain much longer.

But she had hope, that blessed lies, she had that and youth. Yet, young. And there were times when she would forlorn and lonely. Then she would find the Rottingdean Road very convenient for a walk, and there Enid and sister and Miss Gates hadn't talked for long. Not a word in the garden I might not.

"Have Pattered," said poor Enid, "Ears like a hare and head like a cat. But you don't know everything, and you never will. You accidental, you creeping, crawling scoundrel! If I only dared to tell you the secret, for the honor of this unhappy family—"

"If you dare you will be sorry," said Henson, with a malicious sneer. "But the ring is gone, and the ring lies at the bottom of the North Sea."

Some passionate, heedless words rose to Enid's lips, but she checked them. All she could do now was to wait and watch and listen. Sneck must be got out of the way before anything could be done. Enid dared not dare to use the telephone yet, though she had promised to get Miss Sneck to come over and take Van Steck's place. Later on she could send the message.

Van Sneck had eaten a fairly good meal, so Enid had left the poor fellow to lie into a heavy sleep. There was nothing to do but to wait and watch. Henson came in due course, with Mrs. Henson in his train. Enid could see that he was talking to notice of Henson, who watched her furtively during the meal. Enid escaped to her own room after the afternoon, and Henson followed his hostess into the drawing-room.

Once there his manner changed entirely. The lips were pinched, and there were like points of steel. Mrs. Henson was in fear for her son, pacing to and crooning to herself. Henson touchy at her, and at the same time holding some glittering object before her eyes. It was a massive ruby ring with four great diamonds on the shank.

"Look here," he whispered. "Do you recognize this? I found it in your boy's pocket. I stored it in his proper place in the world! Last time I was here I wanted money, and I gave him this ring. It is worth £10,000.

"No, no," Mrs. Henson cried. "You will ruin me—£10,000! What do you with all this money? Where do you get it all to charity. But I know better. Mad on some way that more may come back from it. Where is money you get from a credulous public? Mad on some way that I don't expose you, Reginald Henson."

"Mad or not, I tell you I will let me have that £10,000."

"Not a penny, you will ruin me. Have you not had enough? Give me the ring."

Henson smilingly held the gem aloft. Mrs. Henson raised her arm, with the intention of snatching something from her. Then with an activity astonishing in one of her years she leaped upon Henson and tore the ring from his hand. The man was so taken aback by the unexpected from the usually gentle lady that Henson could only gasp in astonishment.

"I have it," Mrs. Henson cried. "I have it, I have it."

Henson sprang towards her. With a quick, fleet step she crossed to the window and flung out into the night. A ragtier madness seemed to have come over Henson, she laughed and she cried as she sped on into the bushes, followed by her son. In her fear and desperation the latter had quite forgotten the dogs. He was in the midst of them, they were clustered round

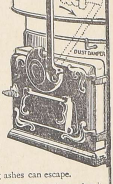
SUNSHINE FURNACE



NOT SHAKING. JUST A GENTLE ROCKING OF THE LEVER.

Shaking is a hard, back-breaking exercise, peculiar to common furnaces, while you can stand erect at the Sunshine—and moving the lever, to and fro, about half the length of your arm, a few times, is mere play. A child can easily do it.

Grates of the Sunshine are in two sections—right and left. By gently rocking the lever, a few times, the ashes are released from the right. Repeat the operation on the left and the ashes from that side drop into the ash-pan, too. You couldn't wish for anything easier than the Sunshine Method.

When this lever is not in use it can be disconnected from the grates and the opening capped. But when connected it fills up the opening so snugly that no dust from the falling ashes can escape.

Every detail is thought of on the "Sunshine"—that's what makes it the best.

TO EXTEND COLLEGIATE SCOPE

AGRICULTURAL CLASSES MAY BE ADDED TO CURRICULUM.

A Proposition Broached to the Board of Education Last Night.

The possibility of securing tuition in agricultural classes, in addition to the regular work at the Collegiate Institute, was introduced at the regular meeting of the Board of Education last Thursday. Chairman Stewart and Messrs. Flavelle, Drs. White and Blanchard, A. Jackson, D. R. Anderson, J. W. Anderson, W. McWatters, A. McIntyre, J. Carew and J. G. Edward. After the minutes had been confirmed, on motion of Mr. J. D. Flavelle, seconded by Dr. White, Mr. S. J. Fox, M.P.P. for Victoria, was heard.

"The Ontario Government," said Mr. Fox, "desires to establish Agricultural classes in connection with six Collegiate Institutes of Ontario. To this end $6,000 had been set aside, $1,000 to be donated to each school." Mr. Fox went on to say that it was altogether probable that Lindsay would have this valuable addition to the Collegiate Institute.

A communication from Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education, regarding the matter, was read. A suitable instructor, with a salary of $1200, would have to be engaged. A long list of the methods used and the branches of the subject that would be taken up were then read. The initial expense for equipment would be in the neighborhood of $700. An acre of ground would be required for experimental purposes. Dr. Pyne desired to ascertain the attitude of the Board of Education in regard to such a proposition.

The members appeared to be favorably impressed with the idea, but though that the brunt of the expense should be borne by the county, the students from the rural districts being the principal ones benefitted.

Moved by Mr. J. R. Anderson, and seconded by Mr. J. Carew, that an effort be made to secure a special meeting of the County Council as soon as possible, through the chairman of the Board communicating with the County Clerk, and that the members of the Board, and the local members of the Legislature be invited to consult at such meeting and discuss the question of procuring the teaching of agriculture in connection with the Collegiate Institute, in accordance with the suggestion of the Government, communicated to the Board through Mr. S. J. Fox, the member for West Victoria.

Mr. Fox informed that if it would be possible he would induce Hon. Mr. Pyne, Minister of Education, to be present at such a meeting.

Moved by Mr. Jackson, seconded by Dr. White, the management committee be instructed to examine into and report to the Board at a special meeting, what accommodation can be provided for the teaching of classes in agriculture in connection with the Lindsay Collegiate Institute.

Mr. Fox was thanked for the interest he had taken in the matter.

Moved by Mr. Jackson, seconded by Mr. Flavelle, those were authorized to be paid.

Moved by Mr. J. W. Anderson, seconded by Mr. McWatters, that the board accept Hedley Flavelle's tender $195 for school supplies for the public schools, and that the tender for the existing year. Owing to Mr. Hedley not having remitted the Public and Collegiate estimate separately the motion was not passed. Mr. Anderson said he would see that it was done.

In regard to the fire drill proposition, Mr. Broderick said the idea was to practice in the main hall of the Union school and a continuous alarming gave the signal. Fire drills were now practised and he suggested that a member of the Board test the system.

Moved by Dr. Blanchard, seconded by Mr. Carew, the secretary was instructed to advertise for modern languages teacher at $1000, and a High school assistant at a salary of $900.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. A. Jackson, seconded by Dr. White, that the auditor's report be published in each paper.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. J. W. Anderson, seconded by Mr. W. McWatters, that Mr. Brock be appointed to the Board of Entrance Examiners.—Carried.

The meeting then adjourned.

CATHOLIC READING CIRCLE

The Closing Meeting—Brilliant Paper by Prof. E. Kylie.

Evening Post, May 13.

Last fall, as a result of a happy idea proposed and worked out by Prof. H. J. Kylie and L. V. O'Connor, a Catholic Reading Circle was formed in connection with St. Mary's congregation, composed of about twenty-five young Irish history was taken up, and during this winter regular meetings were held at the homes of the members in turn, when papers were read on some particular phase or period in Irish civilization.

The closing meeting of the Circle was held last Friday evening at the hospitable home of Senator and Mrs. Mulligan, and as each member had received permission to invite a number of friends, the gathering was a large one, fully 75 ladies and gentlemen being present. The subject was Prof. E. J. Kylie, and his paper dealt with Irish conditions under the Stuarts and King James, and included a lengthy reference to Cromwell's expedition to "pacify" the country, which led up to the massacre at Drogheda and the numerous atrocities perpetrated in Wexford and other places. Prof. Kylie went deeply into his subject, and located the cause of the country's annihilation, as it relied, years in the land question, due to the fact that whilst under the old tribal system the land was held by the chiefs in trust for all, it resulted that when a chief in arms against the English was killed or fled, his land was lost and was portioned out among English settlers despite the community rights claimed by his followers. Prof. Kylie's criticism of Cromwell was far from harsh—in fact he gave him credit for generous motives which circumstances made it impossible for him to carry into effect. At the close of his paper Prof. Kylie was generously applauded.

Vice Archdeacon Cosgrove and Mr. L. V. O'Connor in turn subjected the paper to some searching criticism but did not forget to commend the erudition and spirit of the ideas displayed by Mr. Kylie. Short speeches were then delivered by Messrs. Thomas Stewart, J. J. Flavelle, Jas. Boxall and others, after which light refreshments were served.

Dr. Blanchard presided as chairman during the evening in a most acceptable manner.

MERRY WEDDING BELLS.

Junkin—Thurston.

A very interesting social event took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert T. Thurston, Dunsford, on the afternoon of April 17th, the occasion being the marriage of their eldest daughter, Miss Ella Mae, to Mr. Wilford Bruce Junkin, son of Robt. Junkin, esq., of Verulam. The ceremony took place at 5 o'clock p.m. and was performed by the Rev. Matthew E. Wilson, M.A., of Dunsford. The wedding march was played by Miss Maud Junkin, sister of the groom.

The bride was accompanied by his best man, Mr. R. M. Junkin, took their places in the parlor under a lovely arch of evergreens and a profusion of white roses and ferns, improvised for the occasion, and looked fairer almost immediately by the bride, bearing upon her fair form a gown accompanied by the bridesmaid, Miss Cora Hurlbut. The bridesmaid, who looked a perfect picture of youth and beauty, while the bride had her daughter, Miss Ella, assisting in the duties of the occasion, stood in a gown of cream silk composed of chiffon and lace, and carried a white bridal girl with lilies of the valley. The groom was dressed in a gown of cream silk composed of chiffon and lace, and carried a white bridal girl with lilies of the valley. The groom was dressed in a suit of white carnations and ferns. The bridesmaid, Miss Mae Thurston, her sister, was charming in a very becoming gown of Swiss muslin trimmed with lace and insertion, and a hat of pink carnations.

After the ceremony and congratulations of friends and guests, of whom there were about one hundred and fifty, the party withdrew to the dining room, where refreshments in dainty tables were very tastefully arranged and decorated. The evening was spent with music and joyous and happy intercourse, no pains being spared to make the occasion a happiest possible. The bridal presents were very numerous and showed how many friends were evidenced in the esteem in which the bride and groom were presented. Noticeable was the gift of a purse of gold by the bride, to the bridesmaid a pin, and to the groomsman a valuable stickpin and cuff pin.

Mr. and Mrs. Junkin took the evening train for a short trip to eastern points, and upon their return will reside in Lindsay. A host of friends, for both age popular young people in the community, wish them a happy and successful journey through life.

Trial Court—Before Riddle, J.

Dowina vs. Home Bank of Canada.—Judgment (O.A.B.) in action tried without a jury at Lindsay. Action for the return of certain promissory notes given by plaintiff at Cavan, for the redemption under certain mortgages which, as plaintiff alleged, rendered them invalid. Plaintiff's brother had forged signatures to a note or notes, and plaintiff alleged that he was induced to make the notes now in question in order to save his brother from prosecution, and he charged duress and misrepresentations and that the notes were given to stifle a prosecution, an illegal consideration. Held, following Williams vs. Bayley, 4 Giff, 638, L.R.H. L. 200, that the transaction was illegal and void. Plaintiff and defendants were equally guilty of a tripe moral wrong. Judgment for plaintiff for return of notes without costs. Costs of Mechanics' Lien for plaintiff, H. T. Kelly for defendants.—Mail and Empire, Friday.

A 'CROSS COUNTER TALK

Customer: "How do you know the colors in Sherwin-Williams Paint, Prepared, are durable?"

Dealer: "The colors in S.W.P. are durable and lasting because of the high qualities of raw materials used, the care taken in manufacture and the skill employed in mixing and grinding. The S-W. factory and the skill employed in mixing and grinding. The S-W. Co. has its own dry color plant and produces dry colors second to none for brilliancy and strength; operates own linseed oil mill and manufactures all pure linseed oil for S-W. Products; has its own lead and zinc mines, and employs a large staff of chemists and assays to the standard of all raw materials and finished products.

"With materials of such quality, combined with the thorough assimilating they receive in mixing and grinding, is insured the most permanent and durable colors it is possible to manufacture. S.W.P. wears as long as any paint can wear and retains its brightness and freshness for the greatest possible time."

WAS OVERCOME BY FUMES OF GASOLINE

Employee of Sylvester Works Came Near Losing His Life Last Week—Was Unconscious When Rescued—Taken to Ross Hospital.

Evening Post of May 9th.

Unconscious from the effects of inhaling gasoline fumes, and with a painful back caused by the action of the gasoline upon his skin while he was immersed in water, Walter Scott, a son of Mr. William Scott, baggage man on the Belleville train, was pulled out of a tank at the Sylvester Works this morning. Mr. Joe Bell, also a Sylvester employee, descended into the tank with a chain around his waist and held hold of the boy. Men then pulled the two up, and Dr. Brown was called. When consciousness was afforded it was found that the lad's back was badly inflamed and his clothing was removed before being taken to the Ross Hospital in the ambulance. He is progressing nicely.

Scott is about 16 years of age, and is an apprentice in the gasoline engine department of the works Attention.

THE WHITE MAN'S BURDEN.

What is the White Man's burden?
It's well you if you wait!
It's beating dusty carpets, it is as it's sure as fate;
It's taking down the stovepipes and cleaning out the soot;
It's putting tanks from oilcloths for mats a weary foot.

It's lifting down the pictures and hanging them again;
It's seeing dissolution his own peculiar den;
It's eating frigid victuals in weariness and woe;
It's lugging some things upstairs and then down below.

It's helping with the housework; it's raking off the lawn;
It's crooning to the baby what's got its nightie on;
It's spanking of the big ones and putting them to bed;
It's hustling to business to earn the daily bread.

It's digging up the garden and planting sundry seeds,
And later on it's gouging and extirpating weeds.
This is the lonely Man's burden he totes upon life's road.
Say, aren't you sorry for him with such a heavy load?

Mr. Jabez Thurston is getting down a large lot of timber on the road, large quantities of black birch in logs, which he has been laying by for cabinet purposes. This wood is admirably adapted for cabinet purposes, and in no immense quantities in the north country.

December 27th.—An unsuccessful attempt at burglarizing was made by a woman Saturday at Wesse's bazaar. She had been canvassing some lots nearby where a $10 coat was hanging, but seeing, as she said, nothing fit, left the shop. Mr. Wesse's suspicions were aroused by seeing her carry an old coat out of the shop. He induced her to return under pretence of finding a suitable lot for her and then accused her of having stolen the coat. She acknowledged the crime and was let off with a warning.

Some Remarks on Things in General

By "THE STROLLER."

We see that there was spent on liquor in Great Britain last year the enormous total of $166,425,911, or over 800 million dollars. We have not got the figures handy, but it seems to us that if that money were turned into the public treasury, it would not be many years before the national debt was paid off. In this connection we have just been reading a very interesting report, made by a company of workingmen sent over to Germany to study and report on the condition of the workingmen in the Empire. Outside of the economic condition mentioned, the phase of the report that appealed to us through them all (and the workmen were all sent to different places to report independently) was the superior sobriety of the German workman to his British confrere. We think it was Lord Rosebery who warned the British workingman, that if he did not want to lose his supremacy in the manufacturing world he must quit drinking to the extent that he did, and we can well believe it. Suppose that 800 million more were spent in extra work, either to cheapen it or make it better, what national debt would there be?

The aspect of it, however, that appeals most to us, is the ruin and degradation that follows its trains. The workhouse, the police court, the ruined lives strewn all along the way, and yet we find citizens of good repute—like Goldwin Smith—fighting on the side of the men every time a family case we can find for them is that they like a "nipper" at the bottle, and are not prepared to be insulted enough to do without it, for the sake of the men who work for them. As we have remarked in these columns on other occasions, the ordinary saloonkeeper does not wish drunkenness in his bar, for the very reason they are to be found there is that he cannot help himself. He prefers the workingman, or clerk, or businessman who must have his one or three or four drinks a day and yet be able to attend to his work and support his family, to any other class. His concern is to have the man's family live, and the average thinking man would know that no man earning $2 a day or less could afford to spend the or 30c. a day on drink and do justice to his family. The sensible saloonkeeper for the steady drinker is most it merely obeys the demand, and that that in double-quick time from the time it starts to drink.

This town is supposed to have a park. That of it is all right and part of it is not. We are pleased to thank for some citizen to rise up and lend us in the matter, and buy those houses that are on the square, and fix the whole thing up in decent shape and make it worthy of Lindsay. Better still would it be were one of our more wealthy townsmen who wanted to do a good thing for the town, to do the thing on his own book and present it to the citizens. In the meanwhile the authorities are making frantic endeavors to keep people off the grass, and more especially from cutting across the park from the Avenue to Sussex-st. With one policeman on duty at a time this is very difficult to do and it has to be left like most other things of that nature, to the honor of the citizens themselves, which all will admit is in matters of this kind does not amount to much. We think that a message who made its nest building a wide cinder path, instead of trying to keep the people off it, fast may as well be recognized that the people will come there, by-law or no by-law, and it would be a good think for both citizens and park were a wide path made as suggested.

We have often wondered why it is that other wise good citizens, possessed of the Christian persuasion of that—will deliberately (you would almost think with malice aforethought) walk over another citizen's lawn in order to save a few feet by going around the sidewalk. We have been trying for years to get our citizens to make their places look nice, and we think we have so far as the suggest that fences be taken down and the lawn left open. It is all right for those who do not happen to live on the corners, but the wonder is that man has to stand the expense of putting a cut-off walk up or spoil his trees and lay out look of his place by putting up some kind of a fence to keep the people and his neighbors and those that are not his neighbors, cut up his lawn in order that they, please. There is very little encouragement to beautify a place where one is rich enough to have a man around to keep off intruders, and as a rule the places of the people who can afford a man are those that are wickedly left alone by the careless or, indifferent citizen aforesaid.

The other evening we happened in to a board of public trustee, talking school. Some of the things said were not very complimentary to some of the teachers and the question was raised several times during the session. "Why does the School Board permit these teachers, especially the chairman of the Board, and the chairman of the Management committee, to back up the teachers in matters of this question have been brought before them, and in which two or three of the men were very lately about school matters, and expressed the opinion that if their grievances had been spoken of in the way other girls were spoken to there would be trouble in store for some one. We not being directly interested, merely listened, but if half the stories were true that were reported for our benefit, certainly some attention is needed in this phase of school teaching, by the School Board. Our position has always been to let the youngsters fight out their own battles and make up the teacher every time, and we believe it is the best and safest way, but on an age of people of diverse thoughts and views, everyone cannot be brought to look on these things in the same light. Another pater spoke of his boy, who was in a certain school, and whose teacher seemed to have a particular "pick" on him. According to the boy's story, the same question was asked of the teacher by another scholar brought out a civil reply, while the question put by him, he was not to be salty, or had some other than "civil" reply made out to him. We could well believe the father when he said his boy would rather take a licking twice over than have the teacher "chewing" at him all the time before class.

We think, sometimes, that children are to be not blamed, when they imagine that the teacher is singling them out when, as a rule, the teacher at all, as does never entered the teacher's head, at the same time, when you get it day after day from a child that you can't blame the child that there must be something at the bottom of it. We are aware that a teacher's lot is not a happy one, and at some time it displays a lack of one of the first essentials that go towards the make-up of a good teacher, if he or she be constitutionally sour in temper, and cuffing and kicking and cursing would not be the side-issue under their care—either bodily or mentally. Life is not only pass through that life were we only know well try and curb the evil that is in us and only let the good shine out. Children will be children, and they are a rude lot, as a rule, but, from choice, nor have they a consuming desire to stubbed a pitch on, or the desire they have to get out and play or go to a circus, or to a teacher who overlooks these things, and expects them to work like beavers at their lessons all the time, evidently has not mastered the A. B. C. of managing children to the best advantage.

A Our readers are aware that money is scarce. To some of our readers it is frequently scarce at times, but to the majority we imagine it is, as it is with ourselves, when we hear the banks are feeling it, and when they are loaning out less than last year, we are doing now, there must be a dearth somewhere. No one supposes that there is one cent of Canadian cash in the country and yet we are all hunting. Why is it? We notice that last year there were put into the savings accounts of the nation 67 millions of dollars more than the year before, but against that the banks loaned out some 92 millions more, so that the banks had 25 millions of dollars less money in their possession than they had the year before. The amount is not much, quite a jump to have tied up in a country of seven millions of people, of course there are 30 millions of money yet up in "hard money" and it is to it it gets to its final destination—in the pockets of men who do not go broadshoes here—we may expect to hear things springing for want of it. There is no doubt but that the good government should stop, and not be permitting of the drawing of land money in New York or Chicago, or in any other country, Canadian banks are shorted by Canadians, with Canadian money, and Canadians, the Canadian bride, and whatever may have been seemingly necessary years ago when we had more money than we were worth, but we do not see why New York afforded a good market for its use, to-day Canada is big enough and strong enough to do at every cent of her own money on her own industries. Say we know it does not seem very patriotic to have citizens who profit to know better, and some of whom are not royal enough to be offering out for every dollar anyone cares to invest. Banks are a good idea when they are not, some are content to work up slowly and methodically and to be dubbed small fry, while others must try and get up amongst the big fish without the usual preliminary of work. Lately we have seen one bank go to smash because the manager would play with fire in New York, and that institution was not the only one in directorate rearranged because of the management wanting to be able to walk, in paths where angels fear to tread.

If this is all that happened it would be very unfortunate, but it is far more. The customers of the bank, that is, those who have put up the necessary money to conduct their business, are squeezed up, and if they are not very careful and do things in good shape they have to pay up, or if they refuse they have to sacrifice their goods to pay their debts. Well, it happens some big-headed jay wanted to "clean up" New York. My! have those New Yorkers used laugh at some of the 20 millions they clean up out of now and then, in appearance, and we verily believe that if our banks were prevented lending Canadian money in the U. S. a great temperance would be the result, and all the pains of our bankers who, up yet, are not entirely intoxicated.

INTERESTING FARM NOTES

SHIPPING OF GREEN CHEESE.

The following important circular forwarded by J. A. Ruddick, Dominion Dair and Cold Storage Commissioner, should be read carefully and HEEDED by the patrons of every cheese factory in Victoria and adjacent counties. The English market for cheese is sure if we continue to send an honest article; if we get a reputation for inferior goods or trickery the Englishman will from the Canadian article and Canadian farmers may in the end lose millions. The circular says:

Dear Sir,—I am informed by some of the dairy instructors in Ontario that many of the cheese factories are shipping their cheese in a very green condition, in fact, one instructor writes that he has seen Monday's cheese boxed and shipped on Tuesday. It is difficult to understand how intelligent men can be induced to act so foolishly in the face of the positive warnings which they have received from time to time during the past year, as to the injurious effect of such a practice on the cheese trade of Canada. If we continue to ship green cheese to Great Britain at a time of the year when they are most likely to go into storage consumption there can only be one result, and that will be to check the consumption of cheese consequently with a corresponding decrease in the demand which is bound to have the effect of reducing the price before the season is over.

If would seem to require scarcely a second thought to convince any person that it is most unfortunate for any to allow the cheese to be shipped when they are in such condition that it will rot and when their presence on the market will have the effect of reducing the consumption of cheese, and encouraging the consumers to refuse for some other article of food. It is useless to throw all the blame on the buyers, for we know it is not that. The buyers know the danger of this sort of thing well enough, and the fact that they are offering to buy cheese in good condition is not so much in the interests of the producer whom it serves their purpose to deal fairly. The factory manager or salesman cannot escape his responsibility for the protection of his own business, or the business of his patrons, by saying that he was the only way to deal with this question is to refuse to make or to offer to sell the cheese until they are fit for market. I appreciate the difficulties and individual action is a matter of this kind, owing to the strenuous competition between factories, but there is nothing to prevent the cheesemen on the different cheese boards from agreeing as a body not to allow cheese to be offered for sale until they have attained a reasonable age, say at least ten days or two weeks. Some of the cheese boards have already done so, and I venture to say that the cheese thus presented will reap a handsome reward before the season is over, because the district which absolutely refuses to allow the cheese to be forward until they are in a proper condition, will and very naturally so, have a decided advantage. I know of no surer way of forcing the market down than by using green cheese.

Those who are following the sales on the cheese boards closely will have noticed that certain factories are receiving a handsome premium over others, simply because they have a reputation for uright and good business judgment to recognize that it pays them to protect the reputation of their cheese in every possible way. Those who patronize these factories come to fully realize how vitally they are interested in the actual condition of the cheese as it reaches the consumer. I know that the cheese maker will make it warm for any factory manager or salesman who allows cheese of poorly quality to be shipped from the factory. What is the use of the Government spending money for the purpose of instructing men and women to be wise before anyone can determine anything about their quality? The factory men might just as well remain at home, under such circumstances, for all the improvements which have been made in recent years, and the money spent in trying to help the cheese industry, will be almost wholly wasted if this sort of thing goes on.

With the knowledge that I have as to the effect of this practice on the British market, I cannot but be sad due to protest as vigorously as possible against a continuance of this practice and point out the inevitable results if it is continued.

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES

The Establishment of God's Kingdom on Earth—Articles Bearing on Church Work at Home and Abroad—Carefully Selected Contributions will be Received for Publication in this Column.

"Suffer little children to come unto me, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

A man never has much trouble about his home when he is carried away by some great work.

Success often means to get what others want, but when you no longer have any appetite for Many pulpits waste so much time on an invisible devil that there is heather light nor heat left for God.

It is a good deal easier to preach things heroic and divine than it is to practice them ordinarily humble and decent.

The Methodist church is vigorously pushing its plan to have at least one new church building for each 25,000 of its membership, and to raise $6,000,000 annually to keep up the work.

A new religious movement has been started in Boston, to be known as the Parish of All Strangers, being primarily for Christian people, but really for all travelling classes, who can have no permanent church home.

Tired of the life he has been leading, Joseph Dwight, son of one of the professors at the Harvard Medical School, has entered the Trappist Monastery near Lonsdale, R. I., where silence is mandatory and all the inmates lead the life of clubes.

Down Town churches in Toronto are not regarded as profitable institutions. When Jerusalem was the queen of Judaea the people were called for days in order to reach the temple, and spent days in city in attendance at the services. Christian people do not suffer much on account of it nowadays.

And now comes Rev. Joseph Cook in record of the Episcopal church of Beloit, Wis, who, in an address given before the Congress of religious fellowship, at Madison, Wis., on April 26 declared "half the people who say Chicago is a pocket collection of the devil's hell is only a pocket edition of Chicago. Thieves, grifters and criminals of all kinds rule Chicago."

A little man preached in a high pulpit. His two little eyes appeared just above the cushion. The sermon text was "Be of good cheer, it is I, be not afraid." In the afternoon he stood on a footstool and announced his text. A little voice he shall see me, again, a little while and you shall not see me. The footstool slipped during the discourse, and he verified his text.

BLAMES "SOCIETY" FOR THE RECTOR'S FALL.

New York, May 7.—"You may say and you may expect that the man who preach the gospel of Christ crucified shall be lynched."

"No, they wouldn't do it. But you will find that in all times and in all places from the very beginning of things—the priest has always been the scapegoat, the victim to whom he ministers."

The high Rev. Frederick Burgess, Bishop of Long Island, gripped the pulpit. St. George's pulpit—the pulpit abandoned by its priest for the love of a girl he cannot marry—pulpit worn smooth from the lips with impassioned force on Sunday. He leaned forward and his eyes seemed to scorch every face in the congregation of "the millionaire parish" at Hempstead, L. I.

The bishop did not spare. Jera Knode Cooke, who deserted the rectory of St. George's on Wednesday last to flee with Loretta Wheeler, his ward, beyond the pale of kings, orders, honor and everything that most men hold precious.

"There is an old German proverb which says: 'Money loss is little, loss of honor is great, loss of the Heart loss is all loss.'" So I have come here to-day to say something that may help you to beat your foes.

"When all has been said one would desire that ecclesiastical trials should be magnified as Christ magnified them that infidelity and immorality should step up among the priesthood and the church's trusted officers. But because one man has done wrong we should not be unchariitable to the whole order. There are men in holy orders to-day sacrificing self, filled with modesty and working with a energy of Christ. The man the complex demands in this age of immorality—in this age, I say, when the worship of money is carried to the very extreme.

"Have you been true to your church? The church has never been known such a day as the present. She has never been assailed so effectively before with infidelity on the one hand and immorality on the other. Dark and doubtful is the arraignment that can be made of society—by saying that society is not a big S?"

The bishop uttered the word scarcely with a contemptuous tone, and as the big S emerged his lips followed it a half-suppressed exclamation of disgust—"ugh!"

The newspapers, he said, are made by the sentiment of the community, social ever and vice versa. Society, divorces and scandals in large cities are a source of pollution and spreading of germs of vice.

The sentiments of those who heard these humorous remarks were soundly divided. There was a good amount of applause. There was also a distinct manifestation of disapproval. One venerable clergyman actually burst into tears—he was all shocked by Mr. Ruth's Aerocapic humor.

Seventeen ballots were found in the box at a Bluffton, Ind., church election after only 11 membership voted.

The executive of the World's Fifth Sunday School Convention has agreed that May 19, should be made all over the world, a day of special prayer for Sunday school work. The next day the convention will be in session at Rome.

The Japanese Government has ordered a copy of Goldie's painting of the death of St. Francis Xavier, for the public library in Tokyo. St. Francis was a great Christian missionary in Japan and China during the sixteenth century.

Francis Murphy, the noted temperance doctor, is believed to be growing blind at the age of 71. In 36 years of work in his chosen field he has addressed about 25,000 meetings, travelled nearly 1,000,000 miles and persuaded 12,000,000 persons to take the pledge.

Outside a Polish church in North Winnipeg a notice was recently seen announcing that a dragon would be seen on the next Sunday, to be followed by a dance, at which the admission fee would be 25 cents. It is understood that members of the Winnipeg Lord's Day Alliance have had their attention called to the peculiar circumstance of the new Sabbath Observance Act being enforced against a church congregation to a probability.

At the 12nd convention of the Episcopal church, diocese of Massachusetts, the committee on Public Morals brought in a report which, in part, is as follows: "We call upon parents to feel their sacred responsibility for judicious attention of children to sex and female to the question of personal purity to health and happiness. The nurtures and cultivation of social life and the increased cost of living are rapidly rendering the postponement of marriages; and the marriage life is in part answerable for immorality. The average age of the first marriage of man has within a century increased from 25 years to 27 years. Public sentiment should encourage young people and willing to endure comparative poverty and privation in order to establish a home."

MORNING HYMN.

(By Rev. Jos. Hamilton, author of "Our Own Land and Its Worlds", "The Spirit World," etc.)

O Eternal Father! throned in heaven on high
Yet to Thy feeble children always nigh
We rise to bless Thee for the morning light,
And all Thy tender care throughout the night.

Strong Son of God! who gre creations more,
Before the angelic host the worlds were born,
To Thy Son sinners want ordained—O, may
Thy precious blood wash all our sins away!

Spirit divine! Thou fount of life and fire,
With holy zeal our hearts and lives inspire;
Gold, earth, neutral; allay our needless fears
Revive our hope and wipe away our tears
Thrice, holy Trinity, Thou throne in Thine,
Whose love eternal, like the circling sun,
Sweeps round our sinful world; for this we pray,
That all the world may see a heavenly day.

SERMONS DELIVERED AT THE CHURCHES LAST SUNDAY.

AT ST. ANDREW'S.

The power of the gospel of Christ was very explicitly expounded by Mr. Brown in his evening sermon at the Presbyterian church yesterday. A decided impress is noticeable in the sermons preached by Mr. Brown. Perfect confidence in himself is shown and a resultant distinction of vivid expression and an added force of earnestness to his words. Though little, if any, louder than a whisper his voice is impressive.

The words of the text chosen for the sermon were, "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth; to the Jews first and also to the Greeks. For therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith: as it is written, the just shall live by faith." Then were the words of a man of the learnedest and the greatest intelligence—of Paul, the apostle, seers of years of experience (Here summed up in those words the Christian religion. Christ is righteousness and it is the power to save men. Everyone is a sinner and for salvation. Many have unspotted lives, are of great intellectual pleasure-loving, have full minds and peace to the soul. Many, like Paul, have lived in perfect peace and earnestness, but have mistaken righteousness. Only through the gospel is man a free river of life. He only is satisfying in life who has life in pending. We must meet and overcome temptation and sin, not only through the power of God we can so live more complete and nobler in the life that meets and overcomes the trials and temptations which intervene life of the child who lived its short, spotless existence free from temptation.

SENTENCE SERMONS.

Assume a good that never fails, a barren evil.

Virtue for profit will become vice for more profit.

The best friendship is that which brings out the best in us.

What we call destiny is often only a matter of determination.

The man who never thinks of the feelings of others is sure to be devoid of epidermis himself.

If you would lose all force think always of your own feelings.

The true man fears the power of sin more than its punishment.

Mending your ways is the best way of mourning over them.

If you cannot help hypocrisies and evil you are not likely to love virtue.

Many a man who is proud of being wicked is really only weak in the head.

It will not give you wings to have your name on the fly leaf of the bible.

You can tell the character of an age by the place it gives to character.

An abnormal sense of your rights soon will hide your neighbor's righteousness.

You can never meet the needs of a thirsty world by packing water on your shoulders.

In the light of heaven we may find the greatest heroes have been hidden from earth.

SUMMER SCHOOLS

Teachers Desiring Special Study in Science May go to Guelph.

Hon. Hon. Tyne, Minister of Education, has under consideration the advisability of omitting this year the summer schools held for Public School teachers in the various Normal Schools, in view of the special summer schools to be held for Secondary School teachers.

President J. E. Creelman, of the Ontario Agricultural College, has suggested to the Minister that the summer school for nature study and natural sciences be held there, to be attended by all the teachers of the Province who desire to take such course, and it is probable the suggestion will be acted upon. The tendency in this work is towards smaller classes.

It is not probable that the summer schools will be permanently abolished, but it is expected important changes will be made in them next year, with a view to giving them a greater practical value.

Weak Women

To weak and ailing women, there is at least one way to help. But with that way, two treatments, Dr. Shoop's Restorative and Dr. Shoop's Night Cure, both are important, both essential.

Dr. Shoop's Night Cure is the Local.

Dr. Shoop's Restorative, the Constitutional.

The former—Dr. Shoop's Night Cure—is topical and is intended to be used, locally, where the pain, ache, or weakness is which is local, not general. The Restorative is for the general, the constitutional, the general weakness, the result of an area all tissue, and all blood alimentic.

Dr. Shoop's Night Cure, for backache, does its work in just a few days. It soothes sore and inflamed nerves, it stops the ache, it brings quiet and comfort. Dr. Shoop's Restorative, nourishes, enrichment, gives renewed vigor and ambition, builds up wasted tissue, brings back lost nerve and strength, vigor, and energy. Take Dr. Shoop's Restorative, and Dr. Shoop's Night Cure, together, for the system. For positive local help, use as well

A List of Superior Sires Travelling This District.

HORSE OWNERS, READ THIS.

Have You a Stallion This Season?

If you have a well-bred sire it will pay you many times over, to advertise him through the columns of The Weekly Post. The paper goes to every point in the county, along your line of travel and is a weekly reminder to the farmer that it pays to raise good stock. Of course if your horse is not of reliable breeding it would not be worth while wasting money in calling attention to him, because our reports would in once spot the weak points in a defective pedigree.

In former years those who took advantage of our advertising columns may their money was well spent, and we are in a position to give every better service to-day. Owners, send in your copy at once.

Below we give the names, routes and a sketch of the breeding of a number of the well-bred horses making in the season in this community:

CHEESE PRICES ARE STATIONARY

Canadian Cracer Says 30,000 Boxes Were Exported From Montreal.

Cheese has not changed very much since last week. Prices have fluctuated more or less, but still hover around the figure which ruled a week ago. Twenty-five cents is open, and for this reason there is a little more interest taken in this article. Quite a lot of cheese is being exported by this week's steamers from Montreal. In all there would be not far from 30,000 boxes. Most of this is held cheese, that is stock that was kept in store in Montreal during the winter awaiting instructions from buyers in England, which had earlier in the season purchased it. This cheese probably no more than cost duty of the lot to be shipped which could be called strictly new made.

Returned cheese merchants say that there is no very great interest took taken in Canadian cheese in the old country at present. Dealers across the water appear to feel that Canadian cheese is not half with the cheese purchased last fall they should watch their market closely. A great many lost goodly sums of money and they are wary lest a like loss is in store for them this year. Dealers report local trade quite moderate.

There is lot of interest is being taken in butter. Receipts, while a little larger last week, are not yet as good as dealers would wish. All lots arriving are sold in short order, so that producers may be kept busy securing sufficient stock to fill daily orders.

The reason for the short receipts is apparent. Various points throughout the country, such as Ottawa, Toronto and all other cities and large towns, are calling for supplies and the creameries are shipping small lots to these centres, sending the remainder along to Montreal. The amount consumed locally is by no means small. As a result stocks are not accumulating even in a small measure.

Prices are lower than they were last time of writing, having gradually worked down. Still lower figures are expected to rule in the near future.

Butter dealers are unanimous in the opinion that the quality of the creamery and the dairy arriving this year is superior to that which was received last season.

Dealers for export business appear more too bright. As may be seen present figures are too high to tempt buyers in England. Again the market on the other side is not too ready to receive the Canadian article at present.—Canadian Grocer.

Protect Our Songsters.

Reports are continually coming to us that the sand bill and the ranger ones, for that matter, are again at their spring killing of birds. There is plenty of robins on hand in the dead birds, robins and other songsters, to be seen lying on many of our lanes, Parents, weird your boys. If he goes off with an air gun or catapult, caution him. Remember that a boy with a gun is quite bold circumference of earth.

IMPORTANT NEWS OF THE DISTRICT

Told in Interesting Form by the Bright Correspondents of The Post at the Various Centres.

LOWNEYVILLE

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Mr. Marion J. Dorgan died in Lindsay, Monday, May 6. He had been a resident of Emily until within a few weeks of his death. The Venerable Archdeacon Casey had charge of the funeral, and the remains were interred in the Downeyville cemetery. A large number of friends from this parish attended the funeral. Mr. Dorgan has the sincere sympathy of the community.

The members of Branch No. 288 C. M. B. A. received Holy Communion in a body on last Sunday morning.

The weather is fine, and everybody looks pleasant.

SCOTCH LINE

(From Our Own Correspondent)

The work of constructing the line of the Dunford Telephone Co. is rapidly nearing completion. The men engaged in digging the post holes have had hard work owing to the rocks in many places being quite near the surface, but from this on they expect to meet with less difficulty in that line.

Owing to the lateness of the spring many of the farmers have most of their seeding yet to do.

The recent hard frosts have almost finished the fall wheat in this section.

A most instructive sermon was delivered in the Baptist church last Sunday last by Mr. Moss, of Moulton College, Toronto.

It is expected that Mr. Bingham will take up regular work amongst us next Sunday.

The makers of maple syrup on the Scotch Line have had a most successful season. Mr. J. Hunter having made over 40 gals.

Sheep raisers have experienced considerable trouble with the young lambs owing to the cold weather.

The following is the result of an April examinations of the 2nd, 3rd and 4th classes in Scotch Line school: S. S. No. 1 Verulam. Names arranged in order of merit: Jr. IV—Howard Kennedy, Maggie Kingsborough, Jessie Robertson, Sr. III—Cora Thompson, Nellie Brien, Bruce Robertson, Joseph Robertson, Emma Bendall, Robert Kingsborough. Jr. III—Maggie Burgess, Hans Burgess, J. Thompson, Harold Lewis, Morgan Lewis, Vernie Burgess. Class II—Maggie Robertson, Joseph Hunter, Wesley Brien, Eva Robertson, Desmond Kelley. May Kingsborough, honors in spelling, Jessie Robertson, Nellie Brien, Jane Burgess. Perfect in attendance, Nellie Brien, Florence Hunter, Bruce Robertson, Mansel Lewis, Wesley Brien, Joseph Hunter.

(Too late for last week.)

SCOTCH LINE.

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Many of the farmers on the line have some seeding to do yet owing to the bad weather.

Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Lewis, of Lindsay, visited Victoria last on Sunday.

Rev. Mr. Bingham occupied the pulpit on Sunday last and delivered an appealing discourse from the text, "Behold now is the accepted time, behold now is the days of salvation", emphasizing the uncertainty of life and the surety of death by means of vivid illustrations. A solo was rendered in good voice by Miss Jessie T. Robertson.

Mr. Lamentor, of Dunsford, assisted service at the Baptist church on Sunday.

KIRKFIELD

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Mr. and Mrs. Alex. MacKenzie, of Toronto, spent a few days here the first of the week.

Mrs. Mitchell is spending the week in Toronto.

Mr. Jos. MacKenzie, of Toronto, returned out from the city with a party of friends last Saturday and spent Sunday with his mother here.

Rev. Mr. Keith, of Uxbridge, will occupy the pulpit in this Presbyterian church next Sabbath.

Rev. Mr. Greene, the newly inducted pastor of Knox church, Beaverton, will conduct the anniversary services on May 20th in the Presbyterian church here.

Mr. H. Lacey, sailor, is doing a rushing business and is showing a variety of up-to-date goods to choose from.

Mr. A. A. Sangster returned from the Cobalt on Thursday of last week and spent a few days with his family here. He is going to the lake and quantities of snow in the Cobalt region, so prospecting has yet been done by Mr. Kirkfield.

Mr. John Waterson, Mr. L. Morrison and little Norman Truman have been seriously ill for some time, but are recovering under Dr. Howe's careful attention.

Mrs. C. Taylor has opened her ice cream parlor for the season.

The Kyle Concert Co. played to a very good audience here on Tuesday last, under the auspices of the C. O. O. F. Their programme was exceptionally good, and they should return again, doubtless they will be received by a much larger crowd.

Baker and Bryans' tug, Marie Louise, came up Monday to tow a block of logs for the firm, brought from the north over three weeks.

R. A. Callan, lime manufacturer, was accused a great deal of income the price last week owing to the falling of his large derrick, used in lifting the stone from the quarries to the kilns. Luckily none of the men happened to be in the way, for the falling mast, or there certainly would have been some serious accidents and probably deaths. The failure of the mast was caused by the breaking of one of the guy ropes. Mr. Callan was forced to close down the kilns for a few days last week, but he now has a new derrick erected on improved plans, and everything is working order again.

LITTLE BRITAIN.

(From Our Own Correspondent)

The Methodist church pulpit was filled last Sunday morning by the Rev. Mr. Downs, of Toronto. He delivered a fine sermon on practical religion. On Monday evening following he gave an address on Sunday school work. The attendance was not very large on account of it being a busy time with the farmers, but those who were there received many instructive hints on the Sabbath school work.

MILLINERY

That's because they know they can get Trimmed Hats of exquisite newness, and of most approved styles of fine materials and workmanship, and at less than city prices.

And that from $4 to $10 they can get a hat—such a hat as you would want to wear. Many of them reproduced in our workroom from elegant expensive New York pattern hats or modified to suit more conservative tastes. Also a good showing of ready-to-wear trimmed hats. A trial order will convince you that it pays to buy your trimmers. A trial order will convince you that it pays to come here for your Millinery requirements.

Know that There the Best Ready-to-Wear Garments are to be Found

—and you'll save yourself a lot of useless travelling around. Scarcely a day goes by without bringing us some customers who says: "I have looked everywhere else and nobody has the styles and the satisfactory prices that Ford's can give."

Good practical garments, everyone of them, that's what we are making a reputation on.

IMPORTANT NEWS OF THE DISTRICT

Told in Interesting Form by the Bright Correspondents of The Post at the Various Centres.

PLEASANT POINT

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Mr. Wm. Hogg is rather sick woodlot at present.

Most farmers are busy sowing their crop once more.

Misses Addie and Aggie Beatty, of Bobcaygeon, spent a few days with friends here.

Miss A. E. Brien spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Kirby, of West Ops.

Mr. J. Carew has a gang of men cutting cribbing logs in Drummond's Bay.

The people are beginning to return to the point for the summer.

Mrs. Jones was in the village on the death of Mr. A. Clarke, of North Ops.

SCOTCH LINE

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The growth of the crops seems to be very slow, and will be slow so long as we continue to have young winters and cold springs.

A fine year-old steer was found dead on the farm of Mr. Wm. Cox, on two ops. It is not known to us when the animal died, or the cause of its death.

Mr. Ingram, public school inspector, inspected our school on Monday, with an eye to Entrance work.

Service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Bingham at the lighted school on Sunday morning. In the evening prayer meeting was held, at which a forward advance movement for tenting will be held each Tuesday evening, at which Mr. Bingham will be present to take up the life of Christ in a series of addresses, illustrated by chalks, which will make clear his field of labor among the cattle.

EMMERE

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The program is now fully arranged for Victoria Day for the reception of the Trent Valley engineers on 11.30, followed by a good program of sports. We shall look for a goodly crowd from Lindsay. They can come around by water, so long as they are at Bexgen, Pigeon Creek, The yachts, canoes and guides will bring all visitors up the river.

Our village will show up well with decorations on Victoria day, and there will be a good display of flags.

The Trent Valley engineers consider Pigeon river one of the most valuable tributaries on the canal.

There will be a ball game match between Omemee and Peterboro Wanderers on Victoria day, seeing our boys were victorious at Peterboro last Saturday week.

The village is clear of contagious diseases at present.

Isaac Bonnell, stock dealer, says our new stock yards are not in the proper place.

Dr. Cameron, Peterboro, formerly of this place, is in the hospital with appendicitis.

Bi-weekly court sittings here June 7th.

The sudden demise of the late Alex Clark, of Ops, was sad news for his many friends, his father, the late Jas. Clark, being the first station master here on the old Port Hope, Lindsay Branch of the G.T.R.

HIGHLAND GROVE

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Mr. Wm. Hogg, one of our popular grocery traveller for Davidson & Hogg, spent Sunday last with his old our town last week, "Billie" is getting his name up among the "Ops" shots.

Mr. Stewart Covert has returned from visiting her daughter, Mrs. Hoff, who resides at Springbrook.

Mr. Lorne Hoff was unfortunate attending the funeral of his mother, who died in Toronto.

Quite a number from here attended the basket social and ball at Fort Hill last Friday evening. They all report a good time, especially Carl Ann, Betsy and Bridget.

DOWNEYVILLE

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Rt. Rev. Bishop O'Connor, of Peterboro, spent Thursday in Downeyville. He visited the two Catholic schools, and drove several miles through the parish. He saw the grounds selected for the new Catholic church, and pronounced them as highly placed. The Bishop took a long look at Lindsay.

Mr. John Carmody is seriously ill, and his friends are hoping for a turn for some weeks.

Mr. Michael Dorgan is building an addition to his store. This is necessary owing to the increase in Michael's business.

During the past week considerable work has been done in the new cemetery grounds. They have been graded, and look very well. Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald, P. L. S., Peterboro, was here on the job.

The township grader is at work in this locality. The roads do not seem to understand their business, and our roads are being much improved.

Thomas Mahar has rented Tom Kelley's place, and is now busily engaged putting in the crop. All wish Mr. Mahar success and a peaceful tenancy.

Just now there is a scarcity of news; the farmers are too busy engaged to visit a Correspondent, and even your correspondent, owing to lack of help is working from daylight till dark to get his work done. However, this can't continue, and when the 24th comes, you may look for something more interesting.

JANETVILLE

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Miss Ruby Kennedy, of Dunsford, is the guest of her cousin, Mrs. John Bradburn.

Our cheese factory will commence operations June 1st. All the cows have secured a cheese maker, Mr. Murphy, of Oak Hill. Murphy comes well recommended, and we wish him a successful term in Janetville.

Mr. Wm. McGill, who has been siding for some time with the railway over the border, intends this better and on Tuesday, May 14th, he returned to Janetville cemetery on Thursday, May 16th, to be interred in the family lot. Mr. McGill has always taken a keen interest in the church, and, having been a member, and class leader in the Methodist church for years.

Mr. Henry Anderson, of Lindsay, has been visiting his old friends around here during the past week. Mr. Anderson looks healthy, and is as round again, after a hard twelve months' grind.

Don't forget the concert in the Methodist hall, Janetville, on Mr. J. Lloyd, of Toronto, will be there, also Miss McGill, of Carman. Man Admission 25c and 15c.

NORLAND

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Mr. Wm. Hogg, of our local community, taking one of our old friends and neighbors, Mr. Robert John Gourlay remarkable to his reward. Mr. Gourlay was one of the old settlers of the village, and he was also a member of the Salvation Army for a number of years. He leaves a wife and five children to mourn his loss of a kind, loving father and husband. Mr. Gourlay's age was sixty-nine years of age, and well I greatly missed by his many friends.

The Methodists have purchased a pipe organ for their church here.

A little baby girl has come to the home of Mr. Albert Henry, to stay.

Mr. Lucas, of Peterboro, the Provincial government agent, and Mr. George Stevens of Coboconk, spent Norland a flying call on business last Friday.

House cleaning is the order of the day here.

MOUNT PLEASANT.

(Special to The Post.)

Farmers are nearly done seeding, although the spring has been cold and backward.

The cheese factory is now in full blast under the management of Mr. Ward, of Lindsay. We hope, will be not only in pleasing the patrons, but turning out a first class article and the list for making the best quality of cheese.

The project of the Cavan swamp drain being made is brightening, the authorities digger ready to begin for work. With the opening of goods and roads, this drain will soon be shortened to our market city of Lindsay. If this city will use the terminus of Peterboro's street cars it would add greatly, to our convenience.

We were glad to see Mr. Harry Simpson after his long illness, and we hope he will soon occupy the pulpit vacated by the Rev. Mr. Webster. His magic art and use of the oiled leather bands are in great demand west of in these business.

Fruit buds were injured by the severe frost on the night of the 20th inst.

Passed Examinations.

Mr. Harold Richard, of Linden Valley, a former student of Lindsay Collegiate, is to be congratulated on his success in the recent examination in the course of Mechanical Engineering, at the School of Practical Science. He has accepted a position with the Canadian General Electric Co. at Peterboro, during his summer vacation.

Struck by Lightning.

Peterboro Examiner; On Sunday afternoon during the storm, the barns of Mr. John McCarroll, of Emily, were struck by lightning and burned to the ground. The stock, however, escaped, the heaviest loser in Emily township, as both barns, which were frame, were destroyed, together with a quantity of hay, grain and quantity of hay. Luckily, as the fire had not started, the chicken football team have in and around stolen the owner in getting out everything except the above mentioned things. The barns were almost new so that the owner's loss will be considerable.

Cost Borne by Municipalities.

A clause embodied in the Ontario statutes last session, which the Legislature settles the vexed question as to the maintenance of High School pupils from outside municipalities. The clause provides that the cost shall be borne by the municipalities whence the pupils come. This will be for one year, and if it does not work out satisfactorily, may be subjected to still further amendment. The question has caused a great deal of trouble. Judges have had to adjudicate between the parties, the present law, and municipalities and school boards have quarrelled about it.

Two Headed Calf a Curiosity.

A Pickering dispatch says, Mr. T. Fairbairn, caretaker of the Pickering College, has a great curiosity that is attracting scores of people to his residence in this place. It is a well developed white calf, two legs in the front, two perfect heads and one neck. The back part of the heads are joined together. It is a very fine specimen of a freak of nature, which took in opposite directions. It has two ears, two eyes, two noses and mouth complete. It has several teeth on each side, which can bawl from either mouth. It is very weak and cannot live long.

Y.M.C.A. Quartette Took Part.

A concert in aid of the baseball team was held at Hartley Mon. evening, and was a decided success. The Y.M.C.A. quartette took part and in the program, and rendered several pleasing numbers. Mr. Bradford, secretary of the Y.M. C. A., delighted the audience with reading and recitations, which filled the position. The Lindsay people took with them a good corps of the local able treatment they received. The quartette comprised Messrs. Hills, T. Moyses, W. Perkins, and Parrish.

The Railway slaughter

(The News, Toronto.)

It is as bad to kill a megawith a railway train as to kill a man. It should be understood by Railway Boards and their officials. When accidents are to be prevented, much sheer negligence, they should not be punished, but rewarded. Not so liability. As fatality under such circumstances is a mere matter of bad luck. It is a crime and should be so recarded and so punished. Railway Boards who permit their officials to work dangerously long hours should be punished, and punished more severely than their servants who, through fear of dismissal, need of the high wages or love of money, submit to unreasonable situations and put the lives of travellers in constant peril.

B. J. GOUGH'S PLANS

The Big Lindsay Clothier's Important Announcement

BUILDING TO BE COMPLETELY REMODELLED AND IMPROVED.

Stock to be Offered at Sacrifice Prices in Order to Get Goods Out of the Way.

Rumors have been current in people of Lindsay and Victoria County that news of the rise and fall in valued Gokoff mining stocks is that announcement made elsewhere by Mr. B. J. Gough, Lindsay's big clothier, that his store is about to be completely remodelled and fitted up in the most modern style. As it stands at present the store will compare favorably with almost any other to be found outside the city, and we must have it to the imagination of our readers to conceive what it will look like when Mr. Gough's plans have been carried out—it would be a breach of faith on our part to reveal the plans for publicity displayed by a glance at the plans.

As announced at the beginning the news is of vital interest to the purchasing public because it means that the $40,000 stock of seasonable men's and boys' clothing and furnishings, up-to-date, regardless of cost, must be sacrificed in order to make room for the alterations and fitting, necessitating the necessity, and moving to the top, available, Mr. Gough owned the great sale on Wednesday, May 29th, and will be carried on from day to day until the contract, for lands for extra floor space is signed (that will know no let-up, and an opportunity for every man and every member of the staff to shut his eyes to the losses incurred for the sake of accomplishing the end desired—the reduction of the huge stock to manageable proportions. The sale means an opportunity for closing buying, the like of which has not presented itself to the people of the district since Lindsay's march commenced, it behooves them to take full advantage of it.

OBITUARY.

Philip Farrelly, Ops.

A resident of Victoria County for nearly 60 years, passed to his rest in Philip Farrelly on Tuesday, May 21st, takes away one of Victoria's oldest inhabitants. He was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, and was only three months old when his parents emigrated to Canada, where he was successful farmer, and was widely known and universally respected. The wife predeceased the deceased by 21 years; four daughters and three sons survive him. The daughters are Mrs. D. M. O'Leary, Downeyville; Mrs. Ed. Cleary, and two daughters in the Loretta Sisterhood, one in Guelph, and the other at Hamilton. The sons are Jas. P., James Farrelly and Mr. Dan Farrelly, all of Ops. Mr. Philip Farrelly at home. The deceased was a zealous conservative in politics, and a consistent member of St. Mary's Roman Catholic church.

The funeral took place this Thursday morning, to St. Mary's church, Downeyville, and thence to Dunsford cemetery. It was one of the largest witnessed in this community for some time.

Victoria Educational Association.

The Victoria Educational Association will meet on Saturday, June 1st, at 10 o'clock, in Lindsay. A program of addresses and readings has been prepared, and a good time has been arranged. A large attendance is expected at the convention.

SIR BEN

(Imp.) (5408) (12739)

The undersigned again wishes to give his patrons and people that know has the pure breed Clydesdale stallion, "Sir Ben" (Imp.) (5408) (12739) for himself to be one of the best stock horses in this section of the country. Ben is a dark brown with white marks, and having so much good breeding, he is sure to be a great improvement in this class of the horse industry. Ben is as to form, of good quality, heavily built, with good bone and of strong quality, and dark brown, with strip on face, and four feet, and, with flat, silky feather. He stands 17-1-2 hands high, and weighs about 2000 lbs. He was bred by Peter of Ogle, Old Mains, Renfrewshire, Scotland.

PEDIGREE.

Sire, Sir Simon (5406) (10495), is a horse of great breeding qualities, standing in the front rank of stallions in Scotland, being a full brother to Baron's Pride. The Sumitt, and Dr. Jameson, sire, Sir Everard, has been champion at many occasions, having won the Glasgow premium, and the Highland premium, and has left an everlasting impression on the minds of breeders to be one of the best ever owned, prizes, and the dam of Sir Simon and other noted horses tracing back to Prince Lothian.

Darnley—last dam, Lily of Old Mains (7444), vol 2?, by Kyles of Rubie (6890), a horse of great substance and quality, having on many occasions been champion of the West of Scotland Shows. 2nd dam, Nancy, by Gleam of Beeps, at the Top, bred by Wm. Dunn, sire, by Darnley (2822), 3rd dam, Jean, by Scotsman (7583), 4th dam, Lilly, by Prince Royal (1617)

SIR BEN will stand for the season 1907 at his own stable, lot 11, con. 13, Emily. Terms—To insure $14, to be paid 1st of February 1908.

Parties from a distance wishing to have their mares can arrange for pasture.

EDWARD COSTELLO,
Downeyville.

TO THE FARMERS

I have 7,100 Acres of Unimproved Land north of Indian Head, which I am offering for sale at $10 per acre. This is A1 land with some small ponds Of water good enough for domestic purposes, some small timber mostly adapted for fencing and fuel, soil black loam about six or eight inches deep, and in places reaching fourteen inches deep. This land lies in Township 23, Range 12 and 13, west of 2nd Meridian. Most of these two townships are ranked as first class agricultural land according to the report of the Dominion Government surveyors, which I have in my possession. This is an excellent chance for a party of farmers wishing to obtain a block of land with the object of forming a syndicate.

I have also 43 other Parcels of A1 Land in Saskatchewan, comprising of full sections, half sections and quarter sections, some of which is improved and some unimproved, ranging in price from $9 per acre to $30 per acre, according to the location and improvements. All of this I will guarantee A1 farming land.

I have also a Quarter Section, 160 acres, 6 miles from the Town of Reaburn, in Manitoba, within 6 miles of the railroad and elevators, that I will sell for $8 per acre.

Another Half Section, 320 acres, about 12 miles from Moose Jaw and nine miles from Pasqua, on the main line of the C.P.R., A1 farming land $15.50 per acre, $4.50 per acre cash, balance on very easy terms.

I will give the best terms of sale possible to any farmer purchasing any of the above lands. Call and see me when in town and get full particulars.

THE LIBRARY BOARD MEET

ROUTINE BUSINESS DEALT WITH—BOOKS TO BE REBOUND.

Reports Received and Passed—Local Dealers Invited to Tender for Books.

The Library Board held a special meeting in the Public Library on Saturday evening. Those present were: R. M. Reill, chairman, Judge Harding, A. P. Devlin, Mayor Vroeman and J. H. Knight. Mr. F. D. Moore came in later.

A communication was read from the Charles Chapman Co., London, book-rebinding specialists, enclosing rates for the rebinding of books. This was an interesting item for the Board, there being many books stored in the basement needing rebinding badly. It was left standing towards the librarians to prepare a report of the books which needed repairing.

The grant from the Treasury Department represented some $20 less than the Board had expected to get. Secretary Patrick had written to the proper authorities, who explained it satisfactorily. The amount in question will be received next year. The grant of $223.19 was accepted.

COMMITTEE REPORTS.

The Finance committee advised the payment of the following accounts: Freight and cartage ..... $ 8.75
Light, Heat & Power Co 39.95
Jas. Munster & Son 2.00
Flavelles Limited 5.50
Wilson & Wilson 4.25
Elias Rowe 1.00
Workeman-Wardle 5.25
Poole Publishing Co. 38.35

Moved by Judge Harding, seconded by F. D. Moore, the accounts were ordered to be paid.

The Library committee had selected a lengthy list of books from the Poole Publishing Co and advised their acceptance by the Board. 638 worth of books were accepted, on motion of Judge Harding, seconded by A. P. Devlin. The committee presented a list of books for which they desired to advertise for tenders from local dealers.

Moved by Mr. J. H. Knight, seconded by Mayor Vroeman, that tenders be asked for the books as read and that the chairman and secretary of the Library Board have the power to accept the tenders.—Carried.

LIBRARIAN'S REPORT.

The Librarians' report was received and adopted, as follows:

Librarian's report for month: Circulation in detail—History 108, Biography 39, Voyages and Travels 77, General Literature 191, Juveniles boys 270, girls 109, little ones 75, Bound Periodicals 29, Poetry 44, Science 92, Religion 25, Miscellaneous 59, Fiction 1031. Total circulation for month, 2042; number of new tickets issued, 31. Cash receipts for month, $1.95.

A book entitled, "Our Own and Other Worlds", by Rev. Joseph Hamilton, father of Mr. Harry Hamilton, organist of the Presbyterian church, was referred for consideration. It was accepted.

The meeting than adjourned.

SOLAR PLEXUS TO ASH BURNING.

Prof. Gill Says New Formula Does Not Possess Any Merit.

Dr. A. H. Gill, professor of chemistry at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Boston, writes as follows:

"A remarkable ashes-burning formula enabling 10 mills to cut fuel expenses one-half by its use:

"Common salt, one pound; oxalic acid, two ounces; water, one gallon."

When such statements as these are published in reputable papers of our large cities it would seem to be high time that we had a scientific prosecutor to prevent the people from being fooled. Statements like this quoted above may perhaps be described as "pipe dreams", fairy stories, etc, but it seems to me that the short word "rot"—and I use it advisedly—is the proper characterization to be employed.

I have seen a number of recipes similar to this, however, in addition to an ingredient like Chili-saltpeter, which, when heated hot enough will give off little oxygen. None of these are of any value and all have been shown to be useless in a number of tests. The formula does not even have this advantage, as it contains nothing, nor can it make anything, that in any way will aid combustion. Possibly the salt may be of advantage with certain coals, as it is in railroad use, but that is all the merit I can see in it.

The explanation given of its behavior is utterly wrong and misleading, for soda lye cannot be produced by bringing common salt solution upon quick lime, even, nearly less upon coal ashes. It is difficult to see how by any possible acetylene could be formed, using this formula, and if it could it would be produced from two ounces of oxalic acid, supposed all the sodium contained in it to be changed to acetylene (which it cannot), would be about two-fifths of an ounce, equal in bearing value to a piece of coal the size of a large nut.

When this mixture comes into the furnace the fire appears brighter from the volatization of the salt, which excites all the flames intensely yellow; this salt condenses on the socalar parts of the boiler and recommizes and corrodes them. The oxalic acid is broken up by the heat of the fire into steam, carbonic acid and carbonic oxide—all products of combustion, and with the exception of the latter, valueless gas fuel. The quantity of carbonic oxide produced is about two-fifths of an ounce, equivalent in heating value to a piece of coal the size of a pea. The effect of this mixture is to corrode, Prof. Fischer, the eminent German chemical engineer, said of all such formula, "Such nonsense should not be patentable."

AWAY.

I cannot say, and will not say,
That she is dead—She is just away!

With a cheery smile, and a wave of the hand,
She has stepped into an unknown land,

And left us dreaming how very fair,
It needs must be, since she lingers there.

And you—O you who the wildest yearn
For the old-time step and the gold return,

Think of her faring on, as dear
In the love of These as the love of Here.

Mild and gentle as she was brave—
When the sweetest love of her life she gave

To simple things—where the violets grew
Pure as the eyes they were likened to

The touches of her hands have strayed
As reverently as her lips have prayed,

When the little brown thrush that harshly chirred
Was dear to her as the mocking bird;

And she pitied as much as a man in pain—
A writhing bunge bee we happened on—

Think of it still as the same, I say;
She is not dead—she is just away!

SPRING THOUGHTS OF ENGLAND.

(Sir Rennell Rodd, K.C.V.O., K.C.M.G.)

As England, island England, such leagues and leagues away,
It's years since I was with thee, when April wanes to May.
Years since I heard thy skylark, and caught the throbbing note
Which all the soul of springtide sends through the blackbird's throat.
O, England, island England, if it live been my lot
To live long years in alien lands, with men who love thee not—
I do not love thee better, who know'st each wind that blows,
The wind that stays the blossom the wind that bids the rose;
The wind that shakes the taper mast and keeps the cupsail furled,
The wind that braces nerve and sem to bid life with the world.
I love thy moss-deep grasses, thy green scarlet-tipped trees,
The cliffs that wall thy harvest, the wild sea-surge of thy seas.
The dreamy river reaches, the quiet English homes,
The milky path of sorrel down which the springtide comes.
Oh land so loved through length of years, so tender and caressed,
The land which never strange wronged nor foeman dared to waste,
Remember those thou speedest forth round all the world to be
Thy witness to the nations, thy warders on the sea!
And keep for those who leave thee and find no better place
The wide smile of welcome, the unchanged mother-face!

OMEMEE NOTES

(Special to The Post)

The opening game of the intermediate series of the Midland Football League was played at the Exhibition grounds in Peterboro on Saturday when the Omemee eleven started their reputation by defeating the Wanderers of that city, by a score of 1 to 0. There was no goal in the first half. In the second, however, the visitors got busy, and on a pretty piece of combination drove their first counter into the opponent's net. It was a fast game, and reflects credit on both teams. The return game of this series is scheduled to be played in Omemee on May 24th.

RUNNING.

ENGLISH CRACK WANTS RACE

Alfred Shrubb, of England, one of the greatest distance runners of the world, has arrived in New York, and will tour America giving running exhibitions.

Tom Longboat says he will not join Shrubb, if he waits until he has won the Marathon race at London in 1908. Shrubb became amateur champion of England in 1903, when plan of handicapping was adopted on the southern cross-country runners, Shrubb with 240 runners. He is now 36 years old, and will be 40 in running exhibitions of 10 miles. He came to New York six years ago, but he had been at once suspended by the Amateur Athletic Association, because he was not allowed to compete. The fact that Longboat was suspended prevented Shrubb to come across, thinking a professional match would be in order.

The reports from Ottawa, Collingwood, and a dozen other places, that Longboat is considered by you there at the coming athletic meets, are all denied by the great Indian runner himself, who states he is emphatically stated that he will only run once during the summer, once at the T. M. C. A. games in Hamilton's Point on June 8th, and at Caledonia on July 4th. He has no other engagements, and, despite reports to the contrary, no Marathons of any nature will make him change his mind, he says.

LACROSSE

CHECKERS WILL PLAY

The Beaverton Checkers will play the Toronto Islands on May 24th. Mr. Cass Cameron, a former president of Lindsay, is manager of the Checkers this year.

FOR AUSTRALIA

The Australia trip of a Canadian lacrosse team is now assured. Mr. Milner, ex-president of the C. L. A., has received a letter from Sydney, Australia, that the whole of the promised guarantee for the visit of a Canadian lacrosse team has been passed. The team, which will be made up of Bostonian players will play a match with Beaverton, Newmarket or Peterboro. They will sail from Vancouver on June 21st, reaching Brisbane on July 5th. They will spend a week in and around that city, and will afterwards visit Sydney, Melbourne, Ballarat, Adelaide and Perth. They are weeks of sail from Fremantle on June 2nd, and coming by way of Suez Canal, France and England, expect to become about the 1st of November.

THE CHAMPION 'CAPS'

The Capitals played their last match in England on Friday, against Stockport. The latter team put up a fine article of lacrosse and surprised the Capitals, holding them down to a tie score of four all.

The Capitals are on the way home, and are due to arrive at Quebec on Victoria Day. On Saturday they will play the champion team of Ottawa, while the factory town team is their opponent.

In the sixteen matches that the holders of the Minto Cup have played in the Old Country, they have scored 168 goals and have been scored on 41 times.

Manager Byrne, of the Hamilton Lacrosse Club, thinks Hephawk, the Indian player is a "bird."

THE TURF.

The Broncho, the champion pacing mare, has gone home herself, perhaps literally so, and her owner, E. J. Rochon, of Winnipeg, will breed her to the stallion Willie Boy, which is a pacer with a record 2.06 3-4. The great little mare has a record of 2.08 3-4, and is built on material lines, and Mr. Rochon thinks that the young stallion shows all merits of a good trotter. By breeding the mare to him he will have a doubling, of the blood of George Wilkes in lines that have proved fruitful of extreme speed in both the trot and the pace.

The Ontario Jockey Club have determined upon a Toronto meet, at which the Woodbine crowd will gather them on the Woodbine track, which will pay 50% of the stakes, and $150,000 for the property, which includes about 75 acres of land, a fine library of water lots, and which is assessed at $1,500 per acre. Without the proceeds of this transaction, the Club will become the sole proprietors of a property in connection with which they have during the last three years expended something like $150,000 in improvements. It was estimated that the Club would net across from Ambridge's Bay, the land factor that on which the back stretch of the two tracks made by the club now is, $ 1,000 was expected. The property listed has also been made firm. The total mortgages value of the property is $114,865, of which $25,000 is for building.

The property was purchased in 1870, by Mr. Joe Duggan for $5,250, and transferred to Mr. J. J. Dixon, in trustee for Mr. Simon Duggan, and subsequently to Mrs. Annie N. Dixon, the consideration in each case being $1.

World; John P. Cavanagh, lessee of the betting privileges for the Woodbine, on Saturday, will not be at the Woodbine owing to his similar interests at Belmont Park, the latest his right-hand man, Mark Mulvey, will be on the ground collecting the half-century per book for advance tip bookmakers. No definite arrangements have been made for the next season. The authorities appear satisfied with the proposed method of operation, and if the bookmakers do not attempt to quote prices the betting problem will be as easy as before the Sunday sets was sited before Col. Denison.

Nellie Kessler, a mare owned by Mr. Patrick Hickson, of Bowmanville, is entered in the Grand race at Toronto on May 24th, and is booked you as sure of a place.

Peterboro Exhibitor: Lady Guinand and Harry Direct, have been working in spring and are in good condition. These two well known horses will be entered in the Kingston, Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal, Quebec, Peterboro, Brockville and Belleville circuits. Mr. Hickson has brought $43,100. (Major Delmar, 125 3-4, was sold to W. A. Bradley, of New York, for $12,000. Hickson purchased George C., 2.05 3-4, for $10,000.

BASEBALL.

KILLED BY A FOUL TIP

Baseball is not without fatal results. Among the first victims of this season's game had been a boy who was killed at Troy, N. Y., on Sunday last. The lad was looking on at a school game when a foul struck him on the head. He was removed to the hospital, where he died later.

TOWN LEAGUE PLAYERS

The following players are eligible to play in the T. B. L., and the official certificates:

MAY GO WEST

Bill Cunningham has received a tempting offer from Dunphin, Minnesota, and may accept it.

THE HEAVY HITTERS

The best hat in J. W. Walsh's store: That's what you'll get if you call the T. B. L. in hitting. The popular scorer, whom everybody knows, is the donor.

TO THE PITCHERS

An enthusiastic baseball fan, who views an interest in the fortunes of the game, has offered to put up a "fiver" to the T. B. L. pitcher who strikes out the most men during the season.

JUST A MINUTE

Citizens, you should see the game to-night. The champion Wolverines and the Orientals will play, and we are assured ting that the quality of baseball served up will meet the most shoddy variety. Just while you think of it, bring a nickle along for the T. B. L. benefit. You'll see a ball game.

TANK WARNING BOYS!

A decoy from Athens says: Because he whipped his 12-year-old son for playing baseball on Sunday, Jas. Arnold, a travelling revivalist, was rescued six months on the charge of pole by Jacob Dorsey. Dorsey testified that the boy was lashed to a tree till his flesh was pulp, and that he had not spoken to his father since. He believed it was a deadly sin to play baseball on Sunday, and that he had ordered his son not to play, but the latter disobeyed, and was even expelled from the school.

THE EXPRESS NINE

Following is the line-up of the Express Nine, as well it seem. It will have a bustling bunch of ball players, and if the Express Nine, they will be what they it will be at strong team that gets it. Catchers, Hayes and Gilman. Pitchers, Jas. Ferguson, Lendo, V. Hickenbotham. 1st, Sam. M. Hewn. 2nd Base, K. Randall, G. A. Barry. 3rd, V. Hickenbotham. Fielders, Sanders, Bryans, Zahn, Bates, and others.

BASEBALL AT SUNDERLAND

A meeting was held in the Western Bank at Sunderland the other evening for the purpose of re-organizing the baseball club for the coming season. Prospects are bright for a good team for this season, and steps are being taken to arrange a series of high-class games. The officers elected were as follows: Hon. Patrons—R. Grant, M.P., W. H. Boyle M.P.P., S. S. Sharpe; Hon. President, G. Rutherford; Hon. Vice-President, W. A. Fallowdowa; President, Frank Lavery; Vice-President, T. E. Mason; Secretary-Treasurer, J. A. Thompson; Captain, Frank Bennett. Cameron, Manilla, Sonyea, Little Britain and other villages have ball teams, and a strong league could be formed.

A WONDERFUL FEAT

When an outfielder sprints forty yards at top speed, in less than 9½ seconds, keeps his eyes on a flying ball and grabs it with both hands as easily and gracefully as if he were taking a birdseed by of its wings, few persons who are watching the game consider that he has done a wonderful thing. As a matter of fact he has performed a feat which is simply marvellous. Take the chance of running that far at such speed, taking of the ball, and then of flying through the air at the rate of eighty feet, is a simple matter. Think of calculating at one glance where that flying spitball fall and time being there to meet it, and you can see some idea of the skill of an outfielder must meet half a dozen times, perhaps in one afternoon. It would take a professor of mathematics half an hour, perhaps, to figure out where a sphere of a certain weight, struck by an object of a certain weight, travelling at a certain force, and driven at a given angle would be a point. Any outfielder, even in a minor league, takes the calculation in a fraction of a second. He doesn't do it by geometry, but by nature.

SYLVESTERS 12, C.L.S. 5,

Evening Post of May 18.

The Sylvester rooters say, "The world is now in our engine. World-eaters are our baseball nine." Marked up a most delightful score. And made the C.L.S. rooters sore.

The rooters of the Sylvester Empire Butler had taken his station on the field, where he stood "Pop" Perkins and tapped the pitcher with his bat. Perkins swung his right arm and bowed the ball over the Sylvester batter, who viciously at it and tapped out a weak roller, resulting first out on error, and the Town Baseball League team had nominated.

It was a wild and fearful game, but the Sylvesters had the luck to sign on their opponents from the first. Perkins commenced and dished out a poor baseball brand, and a cool 10-cent evening train kept the order of every fan, and kept the crowd subjection. A splendid crowd was in attendance, and the Sylvesters made as yet in its infancy—it's too early in the season for full show vigorous growth. The game fairly sizzled with errors, and opportunities—signs of commission and omission. Well-earned runs were written on paper, but to the umpiricem it seem of that the C.L.S. rung in every poor chance, and left runners stranded, and neither field nor hit, and secured their runs by a fluke or error. The Sylvesters Joe Cain, a short-stop, is their best man, and if he keeps his pace down to a nicety. Gray had their outfielders in shape, and made a catch on a first base bandout, and tangled, a couple of times in the fence.

The Iron Men cruelly mutilated Foley's delivery, and the rank fielding of the C.L.S. piled up tallies in runs. Ernie Wathington's pitcher to have his goods all right, but have not struck their fair yet. Pony Workman was in good convincing end, and had many miscalls chalked up against him. Pony's delivery is pretty sheet. He should help his team, however, this summer. The outfielders are a clever bunch, and are capable of pulling a game out of the fire with the best at any time.

FOR THE FANS

You'll seldom hear the rooter root when his team is on the hog.

Joe Kelly, manager of the Toronto Club, is said to be the highest salaried player in the Eastern League. He gets $5,000 for 1907 season.

Joe Johnson gives out that the American League will open later next year.

Harry Berthong's fast in 1898 of eleven strikeouts in 34 1-3 seconds, remains unequalled.

The first game in the Midland league will be played on Saturday, when Cobourg visits Oshawa.

Excelsiors, Karenofs, Lakeviews, Fire Fights, Elks and Bowmanville are the teams in the Peterboro City League.

Cass Fatten, the Washington pitcher in the Eastern League, is being defeated them twice since the season opened.

Among the numbers on the program for the large celebration at Bowmanville on June 24th, is a tug-of-war between Bowmanville and Port Hope.

Strikeout called Umpire O'Loughlin at at the ball grounds. "Did you hear that?" he asked the gang, conglomerate peacefully at work on the wharf—and they promptly struck.

Umpire Silk O'Loughlin has written to Secretary Farrell, requesting calling attention to the dilatory action of Manager Jennings, in not circuit into the American League and suggesting a better way to correct this fault.

—Coaching the batter with no one on base is the cause of the most an intolerable nuisance in the American League. Ban Johnson, on the trail of the offenders, and has instructed the umpires to give the word to present all off it.

Mrs. Kelley, wife of the Toronto manager, with her three sons, will be the guests of the Toronto club at the Toronto return from their next trip. The boys are Joe, 9, Tad Jr. and the elder chap is one of the brightest little fellows in the baseball as well as I do, and after a month's absence from Toronto made on the field." said Manager Kelley.

DOCTORS USING PATENT MEDICINES

The Honest Physician is Anxious to Cure and Uses the Best Available Remedies.

The proposed legislation through the Dominion Parliament for the regulation of the manufacture and sale of patent or proprietary medicines is of the utmost importance, and it is being discussed in medical circles not only by the proprietary medicine manufacturers, but also by the leading doctors and surgeons. Every manufacturer of reliable and high class medicines welcomes the bill as a step in the right direction. The discussion has brought out the fact that the best physicians in Canada and on the continent approve of and prescribe Psychine in cases of the most difficult character. In a recent instance of very severe throat and lung trouble the patient had been using Psychine. The leading United States specialists were consulted, in addition to two eminent Canadian physicians. Upon learning what the patient was using, a sample of Psychine was taken and analyzed, with the result that the physicians advised its continuance. They prescribed a combination with Psychine, with the result that the patient has fully recovered and is a splendid walking and talking advertisement for the wonderful curative power of a remedy that "stand up" before the keenest professional criticism and analysis. As a builder up of the system and restorer of all wasted conditions, Psychine has no equal, and the best and most earnest physicians recommend it.

Psychine cured me when nothing else would, and I am now well." Sufferers from weak lungs were in a terrible condition, and I had tried everything for them on my lungs and I kept steadily growing worse and worse. Psychine is the only medicine I had a consultation of doctors, and they said they could do no more for me. I am now able to use Psychine and I look the medicine for more than one of my friends. I feel that I owe it to my fellow-sufferers to make this statement."

MRS. H. BOYE.

Psychine, pronounced Sideen is the greatest of tonics, building up the system, increasing the appetite, purifying the blood, aids digestion, and acts directly upon the throat and lungs, giving tone and vigor to the entire system. TWO FEET OF SNOW IN THE WEST

Mr. Neville Sharpe, a Lindsay Boy, Writes From Hovrm, Man.

Mrs. E. E. Sharpe, Fairview, is in receipt of an interesting letter from her son, Mr. Neville Sharpe, who is with a Dominion surveying party under W. G. McFarlane, Chief Surveyor, at Hovrm, Manitoba. Neville Sharpe left for destination on Monday the 13th after spending Sunday in Winnipeg. While in the Manitoba metropolis he had the pleasure of hearing Rev. J. W. McMillan, formerly pastor of the Lindsay Presbyterian church, preach a sermon. He also listened to a sermon by Rev. Joseph (Cobb, Comer).

"There is two feet of snow here," Mr. Sharpe writes. "Everybody here has not become acclimatized as yet. Mr. Moyse, he says, are getting, and some Indians shot one in the vicinity of the survey one day. Three Toronto University boys, besides himself, are in the party. One of them is a rookie, and is a Lindsay boy."

Mr. Sharpe has been very successful in his examination at Toronto University. He may remain in the West for one or a year before resuming his studies.

FACTORIES OPEN ARE CLEAN

Are in a Better Sanitary Condition Than Ever Before.

Chief Inspectors G. G. Publow and Frank Herns, successor to Mr. C. H. Bell, have completed their annual tour, and find the closer factories and creameries of Ontario well upon the year in cleaner condition than ever before in the history of the trade. While improvement has been made in the sanitary conditions, the special reason for the marked better condition of the factories is due to the change in the system of dairy instruction, by which the inspectors are given authority to close down dirty conditions at factories and cheese factories. Mr. Publow said: "There is no complaint being received, because such is not required, but the fact that they have the necessary authority is a great spur to efficiency. They are going on much as in previous years all they could in the old way, but they are able to apply the instruction by. Now the Provincial Government stands behind the inspectors that all are looked after. This has caused a change in every factory and creamery in the Province, and I have the best of expert advice; (2) that every factory must be made and kept sanitary. The law gives it, all they require is that the factory must be clean inside and out, and that all the utensils necessary to make finest goods

A REHUMATIC WRECK

After Hospital Treatments Failed Dr Williams' Pink Pills Cured Him

"I suffered the greatest agony from rheumatism. Leading physicians of Ottawa had my condition but with unsatisfactory results. I was compelled to go to an hospital, where I remained for three months. When I took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and to-day I am a well man."

These words were spoken by Clifford L. Forbes when interviewed at his home in Perth Maitland, N.S. Mr. Forbes is a well known man. He always been very healthy, until some three years ago while fishing off Grand Manan he contracted a very severe attack of rheumatism. In his own words he says: "I was fishing on the Grand Manan in the early spring of 1903, when I was stricken with rheumatism. I could not work at all. I was in agony and helpless unbearable. My case became so serious that I had to be landed and for weeks I lay in the hospital. I was just as helpless as a cripple. The hospital doctors prescribed different remedies, but they did me no good. I then left the hospital and was taken home with rheumatism apparently completely fastened upon me. I lay all night I could not sleep and I felt the trouble seemed to fasten me and I became despondent and discouraged. But a friend advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I was skeptical, but my wife urged me to try the pills so highly that I determined to try them. I began to improve from to-day. I am fully cured and have not eaten food since I began the dreaded affliction. I cannot say too much in favor of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I urge all rheumatic sufferers."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured Mr. Forbes because they strike straight at the root and cause of the trouble, causing rheumatism. They don't act on the bowels, they act on the blood. They do it well—they actually make new blood in the veins. They reach out all common blood diseases like anaemia, headaches and backaches, indigestion, nervous, neuralgia and the secret ailments of girls and women where they cause pallid cheeks, redness and regularity of their blood becomes deficient. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all dealers in medicine or you can get them by sending a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Lindsay Minstrels.

Uxbridge Journal: The Minstrels from the neighboring town of Lindsay had a large audience, and the music had have on Monday evening and put up a good amateur show. The choruses were good, and the jokes were good. Mr. Thos. Perry Mulhern, in "Dreaming, Love of You," was most pleasing. Next was a good show, "Dancing Through Army", and J. Marsden's "Wanting Sweetheart." Duet "Sweet Lady Marie". The quality of some of the jokes showed a smatch of good taste. The music was good. The orchestra was good, but often too loud for the vocalists. The dog dancing was exceptionally good. The stage effects, selected by colored lights, were very fine. The boys gave an impromptu street parade at 6 o'clock on the arrival of their special train. They started for home about midnight. Best Wishes to Lindsay Boys, was one of the end men.

GIRL BABY'S AWFUL ECZEMA

Sight of Eye Destroyed by Disease—Tried Five Doctors but Grew Worse—In Agony Eight Months—Parents Discouraged, Until They Tried Cuticura Remedies

IN ONE WEEK ALL SORES DISAPPEARED

"Our little girl, one year and a half old, was taken with eczema and doubted what the doctor said it was. We called in the family doctor and he gave some tablets and said she would be all right in a few days. The eczema grew worse and we called in doctor No. 2. He said she was teething and as soon as the teeth were through she would be all right. Doctor No. 2 left and doctor No. 3 said it was eczema. By this time she was covered with a terrible greenish sore. Well, he said he could help her, so he came to see her twice a week. One morning we discovered a little spot underneath her left eye. Of course we phoned for doctor No. 3 to come immediately and looked her over and said that he could not do anything more for her and that we should take her to some eye specialist, since it was plain to see that she was going to doctor No. 4, and he said the eye was destroyed by the disease. We thought we would try a new doctor, and he treated her the same, only he charged 15 times more than the 3 we had been previously discouraged. I saw Wm. Cuticura's advertisement in one of the leading newspapers and read the paper and thought we would try the Cuticura Remedies. We bought and purchased a set of Cuticura Remedies, and in less than two weeks all gone, but our daughter, who had been sick about eight months, was improving and improvement, and in one week all sores had disappeared, and she commenced to gain before the eyesight, but if we had used Cuticura sooner we felt confident that it would have saved the eye. We think there is no remedy so good for any skin trouble or impurity of the blood as Cuticura. Mr. and Mrs Frank Abbott, R. F. D. No. 9, Fulton, Oswego Co., N. Y., August 17, 1906."

A SERIES OF RUNAWAYS

Three Horses Frightened by Sign Boards

Mr. Jas. Hunter, of Omemee, painted in bright colors, and placed right beside the road near the entrance to Omemee, Cowgo's new signboard, whilst admired by the lovers of art, proves a bugaboo to passing horses. It is located just beside the point where the railroad crosses the highway, and has already caused several runaways.

Mr. John Gannon, wine clerk at the Butler house, had a most exciting experience yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock. He was driving to town with his wife and two little children in the buggy, when his grey, high-stepping driver took fright at the sign and madly galloped to town. The buggy was rolled along for a short distance, when it slewed into the ditch, and the occupants thrown out. Fortunately they were uninjured. The animal continued its mad career unchecked, and Mr. John Hunter, the Harness was broken in several places, and the horse-clad buggy badly wrecked.

Mr. Gannon informed a Post reporter that the sign was enough to scare any sensible horse. His brother, Mr. Jas. Gannon, he said, was driving to town on Saturday with an old nag, when he saw the splash of color ahead, the ancient animal immediately took fright, tired, however, and so was stopped.

A gentleman named Williams also had some trouble with his horse. The other evening at the same spot. As a result he is minus a $350 buggy.

LINDSAY, FRIDAY, MAY 24th '07

TAKING UNTENABLE GROUND.

Evening Post of May 22

For some months past The Post has been publishing, under the very appropriate main heading, Some Remarks on Things in General," a series of racy comments on local matters and public affairs that have been looked looked forward to each week with pleasurable anticipation, and perused with profit and enjoyment by our many readers. The subjects chosen for comment are handled in an engaging style, and as a rule their treatment displays a fine breadth of view, considerable originality and a wealth of good common sense. The writer being a modest person—one of 8,000—prefers to remain unknown, and availing himself of a privilege and a right always conceded to literary people, he signs himself, "The Stroller."

In his last letter our esteemed contributor had something to say about school matters, of which the following paragraph formed a part:

'The other evening we happened into a bunch of paters-familias talking school. Some of the things said were not very complimentary to some of the teachers, and the question was asked several times during the confab. "Why does the School Board permit these things?"—more especially the Chairman of the Board, and the Chairman of the Management Committee, to both of whose attention the matters in question have been brought several times.'

Apparently the above rather commonplace bit of gossip has thrown our school board, if not our teachers, into a ferment, because it provoked a letter—published in these columns Saturday — in which Thos. Stewart, chairman of the Board, and J. W. Anderson, chairman of the Management committee, cited the paragraph in question and called upon us to furnish the Board with the names of the "bunch" of men referred to. Upon receipt of these they would ask the men for particulars of their complaints, and same would be investigated, etc., etc. Every complaint which had been brought to the attention of either of them had been dealt with on its merits, etc., etc. The writers also complained that another paragraph of the school matter charged some teacher or teachers with partiality and improper treatment of pupils, and the assertion was made that this reference was most unfair to the whole staff, inasmuch as the omission of the name or names left the innocent to suffer blame that should be the portion solely of the guilty. We were asked to proffer explanations and make amends, because—

"This purports to be from a correspondent who does not sign his name. We cannot deal with a man who conceals his identity and remains in ambush. We therefore decline to answer him. We can only treat the publication as your own—you are responsible for that which appears in your paper."

The Post contends in reply that our correspondent has a perfect right to adopt a "nom-de-plume," if he so pleases, and in doing so he but follows the example set by scores of newspaper writers. A few of our readers recognize in "Bystander" in The Weekly Sun no less a person thatt Prof. Goldwin Smith, the Sage of the Grange, but how many Mail and Empire readers who scan "The Flaneur's" racy but frequently biased comments on men and things would be able to call that gentleman by his name if taken to his sanctum? We might multiply instances, but what's the use? All we wish to do is to establish "The Stroller's" right to adopt a pseudonym, and we fancy the instances given will be taken as establishing our case nor are the editors of the papers mentioned ever called on to defend the miscellaneous opinions expressed weekly by the above writers in the columns set apart for their use.

Chairman Stewart, at least, must be well aware of the literary rules referred to, and for that and other reasons we object strongly to the tone of his letter. It is more than probable that "Stroller" states a fact when he declares he heard a number of parents discussing school affairs in a fashion not complimentary to the Board or a few of the many teachers—as the chairman acknowledges near the close of his letter. "You could not but expect that "with eleven hundred pupils upon the "rolls and twenty-seven teachers on "the staff, there would be com-"plaints, some of them reasonable "and some unreasonable." Just so —then what's all the row about? Because "Stroller" mentioned that some citizens had been heard muttering with heads together who have not as yet made up their minds to court publicity by making definite complaints to the Board. What! Are the parents of Lindsay to be given to understand that it has been decreed a serious offence by our Board of Education for them to indulge in a little grumbling about school matters in a tone above a whisper, and that those who dare to comment upon the actions of any member of the teaching staff are guilty of lese majestie! It would seem as if things were tending in that direction, and we submit that it is unfair and unjust. The man who pays has a constitutional right to grumble.

We would also beg to point out to the Chairman and the Board that The Post has at no time manifested a spirit which could be termed antagonistic to the betterment of education in Lindsay. In case we do have a crow to pick with the Board the question at issue will be discussed fairly and freely in our editoroal columns, where this reply is made.

Now, with reference to blame resting on innocent shoulders. The reasonableness of some of the complaints voiced by parents is admitted by the Chairman — possibly the fruits of mental introspection. He must by virtue of his office be well aware of complaints that have been "switched" and never reached the Board in an official form, and he likewise must be aware that the admitted usefulness of one or two of the teachers is greatly marred by a temper over which they seem to exercise very little control. We have no desire to aggravate matters by mentioning names, because in that case the citizens might take the matter into their own hands and insist that they would not continue to pay high salaries to persons hired to guide and control their sons and daughters when they gave proof of their incompetency in their inability to control themselves. Suppose we stated that two members of the Presbyterian or some other congregation had been guilty of an offence —would all the good members insist that they rested under an implication. Not at all—suspicion would rest upon some one of the half-dozen or so whose record was not quite spotless. Our teachers are sized up in much of the same fashion — the black sheep are known.

CHARGED WITH FAULT-FINDING.

(From last Friday's Evening Post.)

'Tis a parlous deed to comment upon or criticize the actions of a town functionary who happens to have a stake in a newspaper — the interests of the other partners are likely to made subservient to the proud one's desire to annihilate his supposed opponent. An incident which seems to bear out the above conclusions has just transpired in our midst, and at the same time the cause of the extreme torridity complained of by our citizens a few days ago has been explained to the satisfaction of a curious public. 'Twas due to a leakage from The Watchman-Warder strong room, where the new editor and his mentor were inditing a RED HOT diatribe against The Post. The article is wonderfully and fearfully fashioned, and betrays in every line its dual authorship. It reads like a romance—like Mark Twain's favorite, in fact, which, it might be well to explain, was written during a fit of delirium.

The Post is described in the article as The Wonderful Lindsay Knocker, a phrase with which the writer appears to have fallen in love, as it is made use of many times. It is charged that we are continually finding fault with town affairs, institutions and conditions, and that we call attention to trivial matters. We believe we understand the mission of a daily newspaper fully as well as anybody on the staff of our cotem, or at their beck and call, can have grasped it—indeed, a shade better, if the accusing article represents honest views. We HAVE found fault—in a town the size of Lindsay there naturally is room for an enterprising journal, anxious to remedy faults and build up a model community, to deal out mild blame and even harsh criticism at times. We have considered it our duty to do both occasionally, and have beyond doubt been instrumental in bringing about many desirable improvements. We have not been actuated by malice, nor unfairness — we have not made fish of one and flesh of another.

No, the head and front of our offending, we fear, in the eyes of The Watchman-Warder mentor, is that on several occasions we have deemed it is necessary to aim our shafts of criticism at the Mayor of Lindsay. This horrid offence is one of the first mentioned in the article. The gentleman occupying that exalted office made a fair parliamentary representative, and does not do badly as Chief Magistrate of Lindsay, but he is not perfect and so is liable to error. But he takes unkindly to criticism, and so we are subjected to an eruption of abuse, and unkind insinuations about dyspepsia and things. We stand ready to wager the Doctor or the Watchman-Warder editor that all the medical men in town cannot find a trace of that nasty trouble in our person. We'll make it a barrel of flour for the hospital if his Worship can show as clean a bill of health.

AN INTOLERABLE SITUTION.

The Public Health Act appears to be rather peculiar in some of its rulings. A man who thinks of conducting a soap-rendering business, for instance, is frankly told that that industry belongs to the nuisance class, and he must take it far afield. The man who desires to conduct a livery stable has the law's backing to establish such a business in Lindsay wherever he may buy a lot to build on. It doesn't matter one jot whether citizens whose homes the stable is likely to ruin fyle an objection with the local Board of Health—they are told that the Board is powerless in the matter until the stable shall have been erected, the adjoining dwellings befouled and made practically uninhabitable — then, and not until then, can action be taken.

What are the effective measures then available for the relief of the suffering people of the neighborhood? The Board may instruct the Inspector to keep his eye on the premises and order the proprietor to have the foul-smelling manure piles removed every few days. But some manure is there always, and in summer the reek of the stalls is constantly escaping from the livery windows and tainting the breeze upon which the people of the neigborhood are depending for relief and health.

The situation described by Drs. Drs. Burrows and Simpson at the Board of Health meeting the other evening should appeal to every citizen, and if, as stated, their unpleasant and undesirable experiences and serious losses owing to property depreciation would have been rendered impossible if there had been a town by-law in existence regulating the erection of stables, then the sooner such a by-law is passed, the better.

We do not blame Mr. Fanning for selecting the most desirable location possible — that is business. But we must blame the Aldermen who granted the permit to create the nuisance if, instead, they might have passed a by-law preventing it.

PASSING OF THE YOUNG MEN.

Fast life—a day lengthened out unduly by its dissipations—is killing off the young men of the larger cities, says an exchange. The actuaries have been at work, and with laten data they have decided that there is more sickness among these between the ages of eighteen and twenty-five and fifty, and the morality is also very much higher. The conclusion is that something must be done to preserve life, and one eminent only safe course is to educate the masses upon the questions of sleep, diet, sanitation and hygiene.

The necessity for reasonable rest, for good food, for pure air and clean living should not need much demonstrating, and yet everywhere, and in the larger cities particularly, there are multitudes who are cutting a pace that the human system can't stand. Men are acting as if there were no limit to the strain they put on bone and sinew and nerve. Night is turned into day, and tired nature is deprived of its restorer. Life is being threatened and shortened by gross abuses in foods and drinks and narcotics. The young men of New York are going down in thousands from consumption, Bright's disease and heart failure, all of which are superinduced, in medical opinion, by the excesses of the times.

The larger cities have their attractions, but they have their disadvantages. It keeps one busy, amid the tumult and the rush, to maintain a comfortable demeanor, to pass the hours of day happily in business and profitable pursuits, and to use the time they have otherwise in seeking the rest or recreation that preserves the health. The report of the hour, that "reckless habits, overworks, bad food and housing are responsible for the awful slaughter of young men, many of them before they are twenty-five," is startling in its effects, and enough to make every thoughtful one sit up and reflect upon the meaning of it.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Montreal Gazette announces, on good authority that Mr. Armand Lavergne, the member of Montmagny, and the follower of Bourassa, will not seek re-election when the present Parliament is dissolved. It is understood that he will not again be nominated by the Liberal party, and without the nomination his chances of election would be slim indeed. By his alliance with Bourassa, Lavergne has apparently committed political suicide.

—The Manitoba W. C. T. U. say drunkenness is increasing in that Province and is "fostered and encouraged" by the Roblin Government.

(Hamilton Times: Four more of the faithful have been given their reward. The Whitney Government has appointed four more "inspectors of apiaries." Whitney gives the boys honey, which is probably just as welcome as the party 'sugar." And what does the name of the office matter? It's the salary that counts.

Globe: Sir Wilfrid Laurier has carried his Atlantic and Pacific fast service proposition, and has secured a promise that the cattle embargo question will be considered in a highly critical mood. If both are decided in our favor, or even one of them, the Imperial Conference was certainly worth while.

The New York Journal of Commerce pays a high tribute to Canada's banking system, and its advantages to business, its security, and its elasticity. It says; 'Canadian bankers and financial writers have a right to congratulate themselves upon the superiority of their banking system, which is more nearly perfect than any other in the world, and puts to shame the clumsy and disordered national system of the United States."

The Brockville Recorder, the editor of which is the leader of the Opposition in the Ontario House, says the present Ontario Government having seen fit to deprive the voters of the privilege of getting their names on the list by simple registration, other means must now be adopted by those voters in self-defence. It adds:

It is the duty of every householder to give the assessors on their visits the name of every man, a British subject, 21 years and over, who resides under that roof. This will protect the voter and save him much annoyance and possible loss of time in getting his name on the list. Every man who is on the list and who who is not a householder should instruct those with whom he resides to hand his name to the assessors, and he should also see that his name has been put on. This is the surest and most convenient way to get your name on the list.

The people of Chicago are congratulating themselves upon having the services of a chief magistrate with a backbone—who "does things" when the public interests demands it, with decision and despatch. Already the political clique in the police force have been put out of business, some of them relegated to their native obscurity and others looking forward to the seclusion that Joliet grants. And the meddlers and muddlers whose pernicious activity have seriously menaced the usefulness of the public school system have their day coming.

It is a pity, though perhaps natural enough, that these Englishmen who claim to have been refused employment in Canada because they were English, should carry their tale of woe to their home papers rather than to some Canadian organ of opinion, and thereby delay investigation of their case for a fortnight or more and make it very probably impossible to accept their story exparte, without the reservation that there may have been some other or additional reason for the refusal. If there was not, they may rest assured that the public opinion of Canada is very strongly with them.

Laurier's scheme for an Imperial highway between Great Britain and Australia, with Canada as a link, and fast lines on both oceans, has been approved of by the Imperial Conference. The object is to lessen the time occupied in a voyage from one part of the Empire to the other, and to build up an all-British traffic. It is said that between Britain and Australia twenty to thirty days might be saved. It is a good subject for the consideration of the Conference, but it should be treated with disregard of business principles. No colony must be required to pay too much to make such a service profitable.

LUMBERMEN ARRAIGNED AT THE BAR.

A Haliburton Co. Assessor Charges That They Escape Proper Assessment Whilst Running Township Roads and Retarding Settlement.

The following letter, which appeared in last week's Minden Echo, deals with a matter in connection with which there is considerable feeling aroused in the entire north country. As will be acknowledged by most of our readers, the case is well presented from the settler's point of view by the writer, Mr. Remey, and some of the arguments seem unanswerable. We predict that the questions raised will in the near future occupy the attention of the legislature. The letter is as follows:

(To the Editor Minden Echo.)

Dear Sir,—Will you please publish the following, re assessing lumber camps, timber, dams, and slides.

What I speak of is the Court's decision re the townships of Sherbourne, McClintock, etc., and I wish to say that it has caused a deep feeling of dissatisfaction throughout the municipality, and I am sure if the honorable gentleman knew the real facts of the case, their decision would no doubt have been otherwise. But we are glad that their decision was not unanimous and that we still have hopes that it will only be a few months before a decision will be given contrary to this one. And we ask every gentleman, working man and farmer, to take up this subject and that it be made a general topic throughout the Province, and by this join forces to put into action the law as it is intended, or as it reads or least as we read it. We were aware that the interest of the Crown in the land was not assessable, but contend that the timber held under license is real property and is assessable. If timber is not real property, what is? It was not the land we assessed, but the timber growing up on the land and which has a value as it stands, five times what it was assessed at, as well as being under estimated. What business is there in the province to-day that can show as many well-to-do men as the lumbering trade? None. Who is it that is destroying our forests and devastating it of its wealth? The lumberman. Who is that has taken, as it were, the cream out of our forests, and are back now for the skim milk? The lumbermen; now they do not want to pay the small tax that is put on them in the municipality where the timber has grown. Who is that could not afford to pay $3 rent for 640 acres of timber, worth from $5,000 to $20,000? and if a settler wants a little timber he cannot get it. Why? Because the lumbermen have the country blanketed for a matter of a few dollars, and this act stops the country from being settled up; there are many places here that would make good farms and good homes for many if they had all the timber, "except the pine." But the lumbermen brought the pine, and because they did, they think they should have all the other tauber thrown in. It's a case of buying a beef for its hide and after it is skinned, oh we ought to have the carcase for skinning it. The hemlock timber is worth more to-day than the pine was seven years ago, and yet the lumbermen do not pay anything for the privilege to cut it, so I am told—only pay the dues, which I understand are only 50c. per thousand. Just think. 22 logs to the thousand by measurement, and when cut makes two thousand feet of lumber and sometimes more. Just think, seven years ago pine was sold for $175 on the bank, and now they pay $8.35 for hemlock per thousand and every thousand feet per measurement in the log is calculated to turn out one cord of bark, which is worth here on the bank to any settler, $5.25, making the value of every thousand feet of hemlock worth $13.5? and yet they do not pay for the privilege to cut it, and more than this I understand that the lumberman gets about $2 or $3 more a cord for their bark than the settlers. How is this? It seems that the fat hog is to be greased again, and out of six companies who have holdings in our municipality, there is only one who have placed any value at all upon hemlock, and they put it at $1.00 per thousand and again, gentlemen, I will appeal to you; is it right that our municipality be skinned to build up another? Take it to home, you certainly will say no it's not. Then, how are we going to rectify this? Only one way, and that is to asses the lumbermen for their timber and holdings, and there are no reasons why they should not be assessed. Section 35 of the Act is very clear on this point. Make it still clearer, turn up clause 137 of the act S.S. (3). When the interest so sold of any person is that of a lessee, licensee, or locatee, the tax deed shall be valid without requiring the consent of the Commissioners of Crown Lands.

What is the difference between an hotel man and a lumberman? None. The only difference is that an hotelman has to pay the most money for his license, according to the business, and yet he is liable for all taxes, even if he rents the house and has to help repair the roads, and the lumberman destroying them. Out of the hotel license we get 50 per cent and nothing out of the lumbermen, and the 2 per cent. of the timber dues is not enough to repair the roads the lumbermen wear out, let alone build new ones. Now, as to the business assessment that was put on the lumbermen was for goods sold out of their vans or stores at a good profit, and which comprise the following; boots, shoes, shoe packs, footwear of all kinds, sox, mittens, coats, shirts, pants, patent medicines, pills, stationery, tobacco, and the tobacco account very often equals that of the flour account.

Take this for instance—out of the millions of dollars' worth of timber taken out of this municipality there is not in the township of Sherbourne alone more than two miles of good road (and it would be rated as third class,) but there are miles of wagon trails not fit to draw an empty wagon on, let alone a loaded one. The railroad companies have to pay a tax, and what better are the lumbermen? The R. R. opens up the country and makes our land and timber more valuable, and more than this, it is known for a fact that as fast as our timber goes out, so does our fish and game, why? Because the men employed often net and spear our fish and hunt and often trap on Sundays, and lots of companies buy all the moose meat and venison they can, and so the man who is a good hunter kills all he can. Now, gentlemen, you have heard the part of my story, and I am satisfied that with this short letter that you will agree with me that the lumbermen certainly should be assessed and none of their employees allowed to carry fire arms. The above are the earnest views of one who has the interests of the settler at heart and believes in equal rights of all, and that the man who makes the most money should pay the most taxes.—Yours truly,

JOHN A. REMEY,
Assessor, Sherbourne &c.

SAY STABLE IS A NUISANCE

BOARD OF HEALTH DISCUSSED A RIPE QUESTION FRIDAY NIGHT.

Provincial Board's Inspector Will be Called in to Decide the Matter.

Chairman A. Horn and Messrs. Jas. Keith, Jos. Staples and Geo. Mills constituted the quorum of members present at Friday night's Board of Heatlh meeting. Medical Health Officer McAlpine and Sanitary Inspector Douglas were also on hand, and Drs. Burrows and Simpson were in attendance in the hope of being able to address the Board.

Right at the outset Mr. Staples found fault with the resolution passed at the previous meeting releasing the Sanitary Inspector from the necessity of securing the Board's endorsation of all action taken — he tthought the inspector should at least report to the chairman.

Inspector Douglas—"I am acting in conformity with the Public Health Health Act."

Mr. Mills—"We cannot override the act.

Inspector Douglas—"I'm compelled to report to the Board all refusals to comply with notices served by me."

In a letter Miss F. A. Logan asked that the Board assume an account of $25, incurred during illness.—Laid on table.

In his report Sanitary Inspector Douglas said that on April 27th he had ordered Mr. W. F. Fanning to clean up his livery stable premises and remove manure, and not complying he had summoned Fanning before Magistrate Jackson, who dismissed the charge on a technicality.

The attention of the Board was directed to the unspeakably foul condition of the premises occupied by an aged woman named Jackson, in the east ward. It was stated that she kept her hens in the house, and that on her cow dying she had stored the body in the cellar and fed the decaying flesh to the fowls. A motion was passed asking Council to have the old person removed to the Home for the Aged and the house destroyed. It seems the old woman is being aided by the town, although she has an interest in the property occupied by her.

THEY'RE UP AGAINST IT.

On motion Drs. Simpson and Burrows whose residences adjoin the Fanning livery were heard regarding their experiences. Dr. Simpson the first speaker, said that last summer his houses had been invaded by swarms of flies and at times the wind carried an abominable stench that was almost unbearable. The drainage from the livery yard ran down his driveway. In winter he had frequently been awakened by the moaning of shivering cattle penned in the yard without shelter from the weather.

Inspector Douglas explained that Mr. Fanning received cattle to sell on commission, and used the livery yard as a byre. Cattle had been kept there from Friday till the following Monday for a long time, and the yard was in a filthy state.

Dr. Burrows pointed out that the blank end of the stable overlooked Dr. Simpson's property, while the open windows of the stalls were scarcely 20 feet from his (Dr. B's) dining room table. The condition of things was unbearable, and he had been forced to take steps to secure another home. He had been offered $3500 for his present home before the stable was erected, and now it was a question if he would be able to sell for more $2000. Negotiations were on foot to perpetuate the nest of livery stables in that locality by erecting another, and in that case the Montreal Bank property, as well as others, would suffer another depreciation. Dr. Burrows maintained that the Board of Health had power to act and submitted three clauses of the Health Act, which he claimed covered their case.

Mr. McAlpine said the Act permitted the erection of stables anywhere, but gave rules for their regulation in the way of cleanliness. The town might pass a by-law prohibiting the erection of stables in certain places, but the Board had authority to act only when the stable had been pronounced injurious to the public health.

Moved by Mr. Mills, seconded by Mr. Keith, that the south ward committee examine the premises complained of and report to this Board. —Carried.

Moved by Mr. Keith, seconded by Mr. Staples, that Council be asked to pass a by-law making it illegal to keep more than one cattle beast in any stable within the fire limits. —Carried.

Dr. McAlpine—"Council should pass a by-law regulating all stables."

Chairman Horn—"Lindsay is like a small city now and people should not be allowed to erect stables where they like."

It was agreed that should the south ward committee pronounce Mr. Fanning's stable a nuisance, then the Provincial Board of Health will be invoked.

Before adjourning the Board made reference to the frog pond in the town park, but Town Clerk Knowlson threw oil on the troubled waters by stating that Council was about to remedy the nuisance.

The House of Refuge.

Under the supervision of Keeper R. G. Robertson, the most of the planting and seeding at the House of Refuge farm has been done. There are ten women at the House of Refuge, and thirty-seven men, making a total of forty-eight. The number is exceptionally large.

MUCH FARM HELP NEEDED.

Eighteen Hundred Men are Wanted in the Province.

At the Ontario Government's immigration quarters, Toronto, on Saturday, there was scarcely a newcomer in sight. The pressure week has been a very great one so far as arrivals are concerned.

The latest party to put in an appearance, was one comprising fifty Italians, who came over on the Sicilian. They were booked after by Prof. Salve, and were almost immediately distributed in various points where such labor is required.

A contingent of 138 for Toronto and 26 for the west, as the S.S. Victorian, left Quebec at an early hour Saturday morning on a special train and have arrived in the city.

There has been no difficulty whatever in getting work for the new immigrants. Applications for farm hands are coming in so fast, that notwithstanding the hundreds that have been placed during the last two months, there still remain fully 1800 requests to be filled.

So large has been the competition for farm hands that not a few of the immigrants who have hired with one farmer and received their ticket, later on have changed their allegiance and gone with another as a result of offers of a higher rate of wages.

Mr. H. J. Tutt, the government's immigration officer, says that the quality of the immigration this year is much superior to that of last.

MERRY WEDDING BELLS.

Moase—Culbert.

On Wednesday afternoon, May 16, at half past three o'clock, a very pretty wedding was solemnized by the Rev. A. H. Foster, of Smithfield, Ont., when Myrtle Eva Armory, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Culbert, was united in wedlock with Mr. Charles J. Moase, of Llewellyn Farm, Manitoba, at the home of the bride's parents, Bayside, Marmora. The bride's dress was attired in cream silk Rem Top, with bridal veil, and carried a bouquet of cream roses, was assisted by her sister, Miss Gertie Culbert. Mr. Moase, cousin of the groom, the groom was supported by Mr. Walter Moase, his brother, and Mr. Ernest Culbert, brother of the bride.

The presents were useful and well chosen. Subsequent to the ceremony and congratulations the guests repaired to a sumptuous repast after which the bride and groom departed amid showers of rice and good wishes for Toronto, Niagara and points west.

Cows on Track.

On Friday last the crew of the Bobcaygeon train had an experience with one of the stubborn kind, said to be the most obstinate creatures on earth. The train was coming along on the other side of Dunford, when three cows passed over the cow-catchers and ran along in front of the train. The engine was stopped and the whistle was overed numerous times, but to no avail. Finally the crew got off and gave the frightened animals ways, though not without difficulty.

—Inquest in Montreal: A Winnipeg magistrate has sent a burglar to jail for seven and a month, and to jail for 14 years. Those magistrates should have engineered a hand out of the hot seat, instead of allowing thieving is so horribly vulgar. Yet it is not so much the thieves as the magistrates who should be hanged. Thieves are comparatively harmless. Yet they are more noxious drugs when brought into contact with our social system than whom he had got into trouble. Sometimes they are the legal machinery.

—More faultfinding! Why are the members of the Board of Works see these things? What can't they do the little work that is needed on the surface of these streets in good order? It is a disgraceful thing to see in teamsters' wages and allow holes and ruts to be in the streets to injure the gutter. At the inter-section of streets, there were ruts and ruts, deep mudholes. The wonderfully constituted Board of Works drew a small load of gravel, and left it in one of the holes on the side of the street, and mudholes in the gutter were neglected. Sounds funny, but it is true. Sounds funny, but it is true. The Post is not fault-finding, but is trying to help the Turbero Examiner criticizing a city spending department in a recent issue, and we think that if our crew that Watchman-Warder, is respectfully advised to do the detectorship, spread or our bad example.

Runaway in Ops

Mrs. Stevenson, wife of Mr. R. Stevenson, of Ops, had an experience with a runaway team on Saturday last. She was driving home with her little son, when the animal took fright at a large rock lying on the I. B. tracks, on the Little Britain road. It galloped at a breakneck pace for some distance, Mrs. Stevenson bravely held on to the lines and the horse was finally brought to a standstill.

Both Bones of Leg Fractured.

Mr. Julius Johnston, an employee of the Canadian Pacific Railway, had both bones of his right leg broken, at the switch last Monday just before six o'clock. The injured man was assisting in carrying a heavy door, which slipped and fell on his ankle. He lives on William-st. north, and is the father of Mr. Bert Johnston, baker at Morton's confectionery. His friends hope for a speedy recovery.

LIABILITY OF MUNICIPALITIES

Legislature Proved Unwilling to Lessen Their Burthen.

Among the most debatable sections of the Municipal Act has long been that one which seeks to determine the liability of municipalities, for the upkeep of highways. An attempt was made during the recent session of the Legislative Assembly upon the representation of the Municipal Union, to limit the liability of municipalities to damages to cases where specific notice had been given of the defective condition of the roadway. Had, of course, would mean that no casual user of the road would have any chance of obtaining redress, while even a resident of the municipality would be debarred unless he had taken the trouble to give the notice required by the term of the Act. This was felt to be stripping of all responsibility, and other amendmentations had been suggested, it was finally decided to leave section 606 undisturbed. The section reads as follows;

"1. Every public road, street, bridge or highway shall be kept in repair by the corporation, and on default of the corporation so to keep the same in repair, such default being subject to any punishment provided by law, shall be ground for an action for all damages sustained by any person by reason of such default but the action must be brought within three months after the damage sustained shall have accrued.

"2. No municipal corporation shall be liable for accidents arising from any defect, arising from to snow or ice upon the sidewalks unless in case of gross negligence of the corporation.

"3. No action shall be brought to enforce a claim for damages under this section, unless notice in writing of the accident and the cause thereof shall within ten days be mailed through the post office to the mayor, reeve or other head of the municipality, or clerk of the municipality, within 30 days after the happening of the accident, which notice shall be served in the township, and in the seven days, where the township is against a city, town or village.

"4. Provided that in case of death of the person injured, such notice shall be not bar to the maintenance of the action."

The municipal councillors have found this section too strict, too stringent and to invite actions for damages, but the disposition of the Assembly seems to be to make the liability of municipalities for the upkeep of highways rather too rigid than too lenient, such relaxation as might invite negligence.

AN ABSURD CONTENTION.

(To the Editor of The Post.)

Sir, The Public Health Act, issued by the Provincial Board of Health, has its special sections and sub-divisions, which are distinct and separate in their application. We have the "Provincial Board", defining its duties; then we have the "Local Board," and under it the section "nuisances." "Schedule A reads, it "shall be the duty of the Medical Health Officer to assist and advise the Board and its officers." One would think that in this case he would have a little more discretion with the several provisions of the Public Health Act, as I respectfully advise."

I had occasion to appear before the Board of Health on Friday last as complainant of a nuisance, which is not only disagreeable in itself, but seriously affects the value of my property, and my neighbor's and his neighborhood. A respectable citizen, Mr. Palmer Burrows, lives directly in front of the nuisance, and upbraiding the Public Health Inspector, I respectfully stated that "he would not accept as a present the building and lot of Mr. Peel, at Lindsay." Such a fair and correct report of the proceedings of the Board, Mr. Burrows said the Board had authority, and ONLY ONE, to declare the nuisance had been pronounced INJURIOUS to the public health, and that, that is the expense of abating a nuisance cost over $100 the Board had not power to do it, and the question was deliberately given. I will take the liberty of quoting the words of the Act which I take to apply to nuisances, and the reader can judge for himself, and draw their own conclusions as to the intent of the Act and the authority of the Board.

Clause 58.—Information of any nuisance or unsanitary condition, may be given to such local board by any person, or medical officer thereby."

Clause 59.—Whenever such information has been so given, it shall be the duty of the local board of Health to investigate the cause of the complaint.

Clause 60.—Whenever the local Board of Health is satisfied of the existence of a nuisance, it shall serve a notice on the person by whose act, default or sufferance the nuisance originates.

Clause 62.—All reasonable costs and expenses of abating such nuisance shall be deemed to be money paid for the use, and at the request of the person by whose act, default or sufferance the nuisance originated.

Clause 63.—In case a person establishes, without the consent of the municipal Council of the Township, any noxious business, he shall be liable to a penalty, etc.

I have given the exact wording, so that there may be no misunderstanding as to the reading. Two points are, I think, very plain; that a nuisance must not be injurious to health that action be taken by the Board of Health, and that the $100 limit does not apply to nuisances. I do not wish it to be inferred that the Board are in any way exercising tact in the matter, but I do wish to be understood that the offensiveness of the livery and sale stable in question, is a nuisance intolerable to passers-by, the neighborhood generally, as well as us.—Yours truly,

P. PALMER BURROWS.

Forest Fire up North.

Evening Post of May 17.

Tuesday last afternoon the yard's extensive forest fires were raging along the east bank of the Burnt River, between the Grand Trunk Tracks. Someone, in burning off a stump field, had evidently allowed the fire to get out of control, and the woods close at hand. The smoke was exceedingly dense, and made a fine sight from the windows of the train.

Officers of Lord's Day Alliance.

The local branch of the Lord's Day Alliance held their annual business meeting on Friday evening. The principal item of business was the election of officers for the year. The following were elected: Hon. president, Mr. A. D. Kilcheney; president, Mr. Jas. Low; secretary, Mr. Billingsley. The resident ministers of the town were re-elected vice-presidents of the branch, and the church representatives were also re-elected, one to represent each church, as follows: St. Paul's, Mr. E. E. W. Mcdaffey; St. Andrew's, Mr. Jas. W. Anderson; Congregational Methodist, Mr. E. Thurston; Queen-st. Methodist, Mr. A. Carter; Baptist church, Mr. A. Clarke.

May Snow Storms.

The St. Catharines Standard prints the following extracts from the diary of an old resident of that town, which go to prove that snow storms as late as the middle of May are not such unusual happenings as we imagine.

May 1,1870—Snowed and rained very hard in the afternoon.

May 10, 1878—Very heavy rain, and a snowstorm in the forenoon.

May 9, 1885—Rain and flurries of snow.

May 10 1885—Snow storm this morning.

May 1, 1888—Snow and sleet.

May 15, 1888—Snow.

May 5, 1891—Snow.

May 14, 1895—Snowed nearly all day.

May 12, 1901—Hail and snow.

May 1, 1903—Light snow.

KAWARTHA SUMMER SCHOOL

United Camp to be Held at Chemong Park —Splendid Accommodation.

The plans of buildings and recreations combined with a series of studies of the Bible, of missions, and other practical subjects, will shortly be realized by those who spend a week or so this summer with the Kawartha Summer School. This school is a union of the Twelve O'Clock and Bobcaygeon schools of last year and the assistance of the Epworth Leagues of the Methodist church, and will be held at Chemong Park this summer.

A program has been arranged, and among the speakers are Rev. Dr. Williams, Rev. J. G. Bishop and R. J. McLaughlin. Arrangements have been arranged on the railroads at a rate of a fare and a third plus 25c. The fare will be one fare return on the T. V. R. C's boats. Ample accommodation has been made to board and lodge those attending. The rate is $3 per week for board, lodge and $3.50 for a limited number, about 30, boarding privately.

No better summer outing can be enjoyed than a stay with the school, and a large attendance is expected. Further summer arrangements can be had from C. E. Cragg, Fin-Sec., Mrs. Ella.

THE TOWN PARK

Some years ago Mr. Richard Sylvester purchased a piece of land on the north side of the park, with a frontage of 70 feet on Peel-st. and a depth of half the block. Mr. Sylvester now offers it to the town for practically what it cost him—$300, and at that price it would be snapped up by any builder as a bargain, but as Mr. Sylvester's original intention was to turn it over to the town for park purposes, he still adheres to that purpose.

The filling of the addition to the park is now well under way, and as the ground is not considerably higher a large amount of soil could be taken from it and applied as top dressing to the years old spectacle of unsightly ruts in the adjoining lots, and the town could in a manner repay itself in this way for the expenditure necessary to acquire the lot.

We understand the Council intends setting out trees in the annex to the park, and we think it would make no mistake in getting the plot in shape as soon as possible, that it may be used during summer. Every citizen is proud of our present park, which has more than repaid the expenditure, and the small addition east of the proposed extension will undoubtedly be endorsed by the citizens. The park's permanent value for may not be available next year, and should be closed with as once.

CLOSE SEASON FOR FROGS.

(Toronto Globe.)

The request that a close season for frogs be established on the Trent River, during May, June, and July, has been warmly supported by the local branch of the Fish and Game Protective Association. It is claimed above that the active members have a keen appreciation of the necessity of maintaining natural and easily established balances and avoiding violent interferences with herring and pickerel. Frogs and all amphibious are extremely prolific, and the balance of power is maintained by the fish and birds that feed upon them from the spawn and tadpole state until they reach full maturity. In their tadpole stage of metamorphosis they are food for black bass and maskinonge. They are also devoured by the wild duck that breed in south-ern Ontario and as they grow into maturity and transform into breathing animals are sought after for food for herons and other fur-bearing animals. male.

The chief interest of sportsmen in the preservation of the frogs is on account of the food they supply for game fish and birds. The opinion that has taken place during the last few years in meeting the demand of American cities for frog legs as a popular table delicacy has upset the natural balance, and has tended to drive some of the feeding grounds by lessening the supply of fish food. There are other circumstances that make it advisable to prohibit frog-hunting during the spring months. If the frog catchers are moving about through the marshes night and day they drive out the few mallards, black ducks, wood ducks, and teal that still breed in the older parts of the Province. They also drive away the rail and other smaller game, and it would be over-sanguine to expect that they would carefully refrain from molesting the nests of the game birds. There is also the need of protecting what has developed into an important and profitable industry in many parts of the Province. In this regard it is fortunate that the frog catchers and dealers are alive to the advantages of establishing a close season, and in that way avoiding the wholesale destruction of an important industry. (The Government should be able to do this restricting that will ensure a perpetual and abundant supply in the permanent swamps where frog-catching has developed into an industry.

Action looking to the protection of frogs had its inception with the Lindsay Association, and the proposed step was cordially endorsed by other Associations, although none displayed like energy in bringing the fields to the attention of the Minister. If the request be granted—and of this we have no doubt, whatever—the effect should be clearly perceptible a few years hence all along the line of the Trent waters. With complete Fish and Game Protective Associations at work at many points, and an increasing supply of food for bass, fish, birds and fur-bearing animals, there should be a steady growth in the numbers of each, thus insuring good sport both to our own citizens and the many American tourists who are always willing and ready to spend their money freely where there is a likelihood of capturing game, whether dressed in scales, leathers or fur. Let us bear in mind that as a result of successful efforts to protect the fish and game of Maine, it is estimated that the enormous sum of twenty-three millions of dollars was expended in one season by tourists, and that great windfall is certain to occur periodically, and even increase, if the fish and game continue to receive protection, as in the past.

Will go to the City.

Evening Post of May 18.

Mr. Thos. Robson, who has sold his cottage on Wellington-st. to Mr. J. A. Campbell, intends to spend with his family to Toronto. Mr. Robson's removal from Lindsay will be very sincerely regretted, as he has been connected with the business life of this town for many years, and for all he may not be available next year, and should be closed with as once.

Drugging Children.

All so-called "soothing" syrups and most of the powders advertised to cure childhood ailments contain poisonous opiates and are overdose may kill the child. They Deserved It.

(Governor Hogg's Address at New York, in Leslie's Weekly.)

Our food treatment of Canada, is another illustration of what we call politics. Our Canadian fellow-citizens are always crying out against our tariff laws. The Dominion has now made up her mind to treat us as we deserve, if she can be devised, and her decision is wise and right. For a quarter of a century she has been ruled politically by one president after another, and one party after another, who have deliberately voted treaties intended for the benefit of Canada and the United States. Every time the Senate, imagining itself to exist for equal and equitable treaties, had the treaty mutilated, has protected its clients against the consideration of the people. Certainly, at length, Canadian leaders have seen that the treasures of our tariff have been used for the benefit of the United States, and that our people have not made the slightest complaint. We wish her well. Whatever she may do, we shall not be slow to give her full and painstakingly deserved.

GRUESOME FIND IN THE SOUTH WARD

Dead Body of Infant Discovered by Three Boys in a Garden.

Encased in a Pillow Slip and Newspapers—Evidence at Coroner's Inquest Points to Infanticide—Investigation Adjourned.

Evening Post of May 17.

The finding of the body of an infant, encased in a pillow slip and wrapped up in newspapers, last evening, created a good deal of excitement in town. The body exhibited marks of foul treatment, being cut and bruised. It was found by three lads—Jas. Bailey, Jas. Ward, Wm. Workman, Harry Watson, and Earle Thurston, who were hunting for a base ball.

Carefully placed in the hedge on the east side of the property owned by Mrs. Maher, corner of Richmond and Hickory-sts., the body had lain there for a period, probably estimated over two weeks. It was in a splitting condition, decay having commenced. Indications point to infanticide, death in all probability resulting from criminal neglect.

The three boys thought it was a dead animal lying among the weeds and had been a parcel of strawberries, the bundle being smeared with blood. On investigation they found the true contents and immediately notified Mrs. Maher, the owner of the property. She had called in neighbors, and Chief Vinnett was sent for. He placed the bundle and contents in a box, and informed Coroner Burrows. The body was placed in Undertaker Nagent's morgue.

THE INQUEST.

Coroner Burrows ordered an inquest into the cause of the infant's death, and the following were impanelled as a jury this morning: Jas. Fleury, William Brooks, James Cassidy, Joseph Brown (foreman), J. J. Walsh, Thomas Brady, R. J. Hunter, Thos. Carter, N. Williamson, J. Braund, A. J. Campbell, Daniel Trevor, A. J. Mallory, Richard Cooley, Geo. Foster.

SCHOOL BOARD MATTERS.

(To the Editor of The Post.)

Dear Sir,—In your issue of last Monday the following statement appears:

"The other evening we happened into a bunch of pater-familias talking school. Some of the things said were not very complimentary to some of the teachers, and the question was asked, several times, 'Why don't we have the School Board present there things?'—more especially the Chairman of the Board, and the members of the Management Committee, to both of whose attention the matters in question have been brought several times.'

This reports to be from a correspondent who does not sign his name. We cannot, unless he or she gives us his identity and intimate in ambush. We therefore demand of the correspondent that he or she treat the publication as your own you are responsible for that which appears in your paper.

We also demand that we with the names of the "bunch" of men referred to. We demand that these we shall ask the men for particulars of the complaints made, that we may receive our best consideration and shall give the names of the "bunch" and give the names either through the columns of your paper or by letter to your readers and you prefer. You have published the above statement and we do not think it right for our teachers to yourself and to us and the schools.

Every complaint which has come before the Board has been dealt with on its merits, and has either been dismissed or referred to the proper officers concerned or has been brought before the Management Committee or the whole Board, as the case may have demanded, when the person complaining has refused to either have the matter dealt with or complaint to be formulated. In a number of cases the parties feeling the complaint with such restraint.

In the same article you charge some teachers of teaching partiality and improper treatment of pupils. Now, if you do not name the teacher it cannot be done. Your reflection upon all. If you are going to discuss a matter of this kind in a public journal you ought to be sparing, for, so that the innocent will not suffer, but surely such conduct on the part of a teacher is not a matter which you refer in such a manner for newspaper discussion, except where you have some well-grounded reasons and objectionable in this case, whether the teacher is at fault or not. You could not but expect that well-informed people would on the rolls, and twenty-seven teachers in the employ of the Board, the complaints some of them reasonable and some unreasonable, the Board has always endeavored to deal fairly and with the interests of all, and will be glad to give every attention to any person who wishes to bring a matter before the Board in a fair and honest manner.

DONALD SMITH TO BE A DUKE.

Will be Succeeded by Sir Frederick Borden as High Commissioner.

For some time rumors have been afloat that Lord Strathcona would resign his position as Canadian High Commissioner in London. The latest report is that on May 24, announcement will be made that his Majesty has been pleased to confer a dukedom upon his Lordship in recognition of his distinguished services to the Empire, and that Lord Strathcona will shortly afterwards relinquish the High Commissionership of Canada and be succeeded by Sir Frederick Borden. The Dominion Government will, it is understood, recommend the allowance of the Hirh Commissioner, from $10,000 to $25,000 a year.

Settled Near His Old Home.

Mr. Jackson Reid, the well known lumber man, who for the past quarter of a century has conducted business in Bobcaygeon, Lindsay and Huntsville, finally decided last week to settle down to the ill-health of Mrs. Reid, who will devote himself to fruit and vegetable farming as a healthy and pleasant occupation. Some weeks ago he purchased the Hamilton farm, the finest residence erected years ago by the late Mr. Hamilton, a prominent lumber, and located in a commanding position about two miles south of Bobcaygeon. There is a plot of about 25 acres of land in connection, and Mr. Reid expects that the cost of this will suffice to keep him busy.

himself and Mrs. Henson, before he was aware of the fact.

"Give me the ring," he said. "You can't have it yet. Some day I will restore it to you. Be sensible. If anybody should happen to see you." Mrs. Henson merely laughed. The dogs were gambolling around her like so many kittens. They did not seem to heed Henson in the joy of her presence. He came on again, he made a grab for her dress, but the rotten fabric parted like a cobweb in his hand. A warning grunt came from one of the dogs, but Henson gave no heed.

"Give it me," he hissed; "or I will tear it from you."

CHAPTER XLIII.

David Steel stood contemplating the weird scene with almost doubting eyes. In his wildest moments he had never imagined anything more dramatic than this. The candle in its silver sconce that Mrs. Henson had snatched up before her flight was perilously near her flimsy dress. Henson caught her once more in a fierce grip. David could stand it no longer. As Henson came by him his right arm flashed out, there was a dull thud, and Henson, without having the least idea what had happened, fell to the ground, with a very hazy idea of his surroundings for a moment or two.

Equally unconscious that she had a protector handy, Mrs. Henson turned and fled for the house. A minute later and she was followed by Henson, still puzzling his racking head to know what had happened. David would have followed, but the need for caution flashed upon him. If he stood there perfectly still Henson would never know who his antagonist was. David stood there waiting. As he glanced round he saw some little object glittering near to his feet. It was the ruby ring!

"Be you there, sir?" a rusty voice whispered close by.

"I am, Williams," David replied; "I have been waiting for some time."

Williams chuckled, making no kind of apology for his want of punctuality.

"I've been looking after our man, sir," he said. "That Dutch chap what Miss Enid said you'd come for. And I saw all that business in the shrubbery just now. My! if I didn't feel good when you laid out Henson on the grass. The sound of that smack was as good as ten years' wages for me. And he's gone off to his room with a basin of vinegar and a ream of brown paper. Why didn't you break his neck?"

David suggested that the law took a prejudiced view of that kind of thing, and that it would be a pity to hang anyone for such a creature as Reginald Henson.

"Our man is all right?" he asked.

"As a trivet," said Williams. "Sleeping like a baby; he is in my own bed over the stable. I'll show you into the harness-room, where Miss Enid's waiting for you, sir, and then I'll go and see as Henson don't come prowling about. Not as he's likely to, considering the clump on the side of the head you gave him. I take it kind of Providence to let me see that!"

Williams hobbled away, chucking to himself and followed by David. There was a feeble oil-lamp in the harness-room. Enid was waiting there anxiously.

"So you have put Henson out of the way for a time," she said. "He passed me just now using awful language, and wondering how it had all come about. Wasn't it a strange thing that Van Sneck should come here?"

"Not very," David said. "He is evidently looking for his master, Reginald Henson. I have not the slightest doubt that he has been here many times before. Williams says he is asleep. Pity to wake him just yet, don't you think?"

"Perhaps it is. But I am horribly afraid of our dear friend Reginald, all the same."

"Our dear Reginald will not trouble us just yet. He came down as far as London with Bell. Of course he had heard the news of Van Sneck's flight. Was he disturbed?"

"I have never seen him in such a passion before, Mr. Steel. And not only was he in a passion, but he was horribly afraid about something. And he has made a discovery."

"He hasn't found out that your sister——"

"Is at Littimer Castle? That is really the most consoling part of the business. He has been at Littimer for a day or two, and he has not the remotest idea that Christabel Lee is our Chris."

"A feather in your sister's cap. She has quite captivated Littimer, Bell says."

"And she played her part splendidly. Mr. Steel, it is very, very good to know that Hatherly has cleared himself in the eyes of Lord Littimer at last. Did Reginald suspect——"

"Nothing," Steel said. "He is utterly and hopelessly puzzled over the whole business. And Bell has managed to convince him that he is not suspected at all. That business over the Rembrandt was really a brilliant bit of comedy. But what has Henson found out?"

"That Chris is not dead. He has seen Walker and the undertaker. But he does not know yet that Dr. Bell was in the house that eventful night, which is a blessing. As a matter of fact, Reginald has not been quite the same man since Rollo nearly killed him that exciting evening. His nerves seem to be greatly shaken."

"That is because the rascal feels the net closing round him," Steel said. "It was a fine stroke on your sister's part to win over that fellow Merritt to her side. I supplied the details per telephone, but the plot was really Miss Chris's. How on earth should we have managed without the telephone over this business?"

"I am at a loss to say," Enid smiled. "But tell me about that plot. I am quite in the dark as to that side of the matter."

David proceeded to explain his own and Chris's ingenious scheme for getting Merritt into their power. Enid followed the story with vast enjoyment, tempered with the fact that Henson was so near.

"I should never have thought of that," she said; "but Chris was always so clever. But tell me, what was Henson doing in the garden just now? Williams says he was illtreating my aunt, but that seems hardly possible even for Reginald."

"It was over a ring that Mrs. Henson had," David explained. "She was running away with it, and Henson was trying to get it back. You see——"

"A ring!" Enid gasped. "Did you happen to see it? Oh, if it is only——. But he would not be so silly as that. A ring is the cause of all the trouble. Did you see it?"

"I not only saw it but I have it in my possession," David replied.

Enid turned up the flaring little lamp with a shaking hand. Quite unstrung, she held out her fingers for the ring.

"It is just possible," she said, hoarsely, "that you possess the key of the situation. If that ring is what I hope it is we can tumble Henson into the dust to-morrow. We can drive him out of the country, and he will never, never trouble us again. How did you get it?"

"Mrs. Henson dropped it and I picked it up."

"Please let me see it," Enid said, pleadingly. "Let me be put out of my misery."

David handed the ring over; Enid regarded it long and searchingly. With a little sigh of regret she passed it back to David once more.

"You had better keep it," she said. "At any rate, it is likely to be valuable evidence for us later on. But it is not the ring I hoped to see. It is a clever copy, but the black pearls are not so fine, and the engraving inside is not so worn as it used to be on the original. It is evidently a copy that Henson has had made to tease my aunt with, to offer her at some future date in return for the large sums of money that she gave him. No; the original of that ring is popularly supposed to be at the bottom of the North Sea. If such had been the case—seeing that Henson had never handled it before the Great Tragedy came—the original must be in existence."

"Why so?" David asked.

"Because the ring must have been copied from it," Enid said. "It is a very faithful copy indeed, and could not have been made from mere directions—take the engraving inside, for instance. The engraving forms the cipher of the house of Littimer. If Henson has the real ring, if we can find it, the tragedy goes out of our lives for ever."

"I should like to hear the story," said Steel.

Enid paused and lowered the lamp as a step was heard outside. But it was only Williams.

"Mr. Henson is in his bedroom still," he said. "I've just taken him the cigars. He's got a lump on his head as big as a billiard-ball. Thinks he hit it against a branch. And my lady have locked herself in her room and refused to see anybody."

"Go and look at our patient," Enid commanded.

Williams disappeared, to return presently with the information that Van Sneck was still fast asleep and lying very peacefully.

"Looks like waiting till morning, it do," he said. "And now I'll go back and keep my eye on that 'ere distinguished philanthropist."

Williams disappeared, and Enid turned up the lamp again. Her face was pale and resolute. She motioned David towards a chair.

"I'll tell you the story," she said. "I am going to confide in you the saddest and strangest tale that ever appealed to an imaginative novelist."

CHAPTER XLIV.

"I am going to tell you the story of the great sorrow that has darkened all our lives, but I shall have to go a long way back to do it," Enid said. "I go back to the troublous days of Charles, as far back as the disastrous fight at Naseby. Of course I am speaking more from a Royalist point of view, for the Littimers were always followers of the Court.

"Mind you, there is doubtless a deal that is legendary about what I am going to tell you. But the ring given to my ancestor Rupert Littimer by Prince Rupert himself is an actuality.

"Naseby was over, and, so the legend goes, Prince Rupert found himself desperately situated and in dire peril of capture by Cromwell's troops, under one Colonel Carfax, a near neighbor of Rupert Littimer; indeed, the Carfax estates still run parallel with the property round Littimer Castle.

"Now, Carfax was hated by all those who were attached to the fortunes of the King. Seeing that he was of aristocratic birth, it was held that he had violated his caste and creed by taking sides with the Roundheads. History has told us that he was right, and that the Cavaliers, picturesque as they were, were fighting a dubious cause. But I need not go into that. Carfax was a hard, stern man who spared nobody, and many were the stories told of his cruelty.

"He and Rupert Littimer were especially at daggers drawn. I believe that both of them had been in love with the same woman or something of that kind. And the fact that she did not marry either made little difference to the bitterness between them.

"Well, Carfax was pressing close on Rupert, so close, indeed, that unless some strategy were adopted the brilliant cavalry leader was in dire peril. It was there that my ancestor, Rupert Littimer, came forward with his scheme. He offered to disguise himself and go into the camp of Carfax and take him prisoner. The idea was to steal into the tent of Carfax and, by threatening him with his life, compel him to issue certain orders, the result of which would be that Prince Rupert could get away.

"'You will never come back again, friend,' the Prince said.

"Rupert Littimer said he was prepared to run all risk of that. 'And if I do die you shall tell my wife, sir,' he said. 'And when the child is born, tell him that his father died as he should have done for his King and for his country.'

"'Oh, there is a child coming?' Rupert asked.

"Littimer replied that for aught he knew he was a father already. And then he went his way into the camp of the foe with his curls cut short and in the guise of a countryman who comes with valuable information. And, what is more, he schemed his way into Carfax's tent, and at the point of a dagger compelled him to write a certain order which my ancestor's servant, who accompanied him, saw carried into effect, and so the passage for Prince Rupert was made free.

"The ruse would have succeeded all round but for some little accident that I need not go into now. Rupert Littimer was laid by the heels, his disguise was torn off, and he stood face to face with his hereditary foe. He was told that he had but an hour to live.

"'If you have any favor to ask, say it,' Carfax said.

"'I have no favor to ask, properly so-called,' Littimer replied; 'but I am loth to die without knowing whether or not I have left anybody to succeed me—anybody who will avenge the crime upon you and yours in the years to come. Let me go as far as Henson Grange, and I pledge you my word I will return in the morning!'

"But Carfax laughed the suggestion to scorn. The Court party were all liars and perjurers, and their word was not to be taken.

"'It is as I say,' Rupert Littimer repeated. 'My wife lies ill at Henson Grange and in sore trouble about me. And I should like to see my child before I die.'

"'Then you shall have the chance,' Carfax sneered. 'I will keep you a close prisoner here for two days, and if at the end of that time nothing happens, you die. If, on the other hand, a child is born to you, then you shall go from here a free man.'

"And so the compact was made. Unfortunately or fortunately, as the case may be, the story got abroad, and some indiscreet person carried the news to Dame Littimer. Ill as she was, she insisted upon getting up and going over to Carfax's camp at once. She had barely reached there before—well, long ere Rupert Littimer's probation was over, he was the father of a noble boy. They say that the Roundheads made a cradle for the child out of a leather breastplate, and carried it in triumph round the camp. And they held the furious Carfax to his word, and the story spread and spread until it came to the ears of Prince Rupert.

"Then he went to see Dame Littimer, and from his own hand he drew what is known in our family as Prince Rupert's ring. He placed it on Dame Littimer's hand, there to remain for a year and a day, and when the year was up it was to be put aside for the bride of the heir of the house for ever, to be worn by her till a year and a day had elapsed after her first child was born. And that has been done for all time, my aunt, Lady Littimer, being the last to wear it. After Frank was born it was put carefully away for his bride. But the great tragedy came, and until lately we fancied that the ring was lost to us for ever. There is, in a few words, the story of Prince Rupert's ring. So far it is quite common property."

Enid ceased to speak for a time. But it was evident that she had more to say.

"An interesting story," David said. "And a pretty one to put into a book, especially as it is quite true. But you have lost the ring, you say?"

"I fancied so till to-night," Enid replied. "Indeed, I hardly knew what to think. Sometimes I imagined that Reginald Henson had it, at other times I imagined that it was utterly gone. But the mere fact that Henson possesses a copy practically convinces me that he has the original. As I said before, a true copy could not have been made from mere instructions. And if I could only get the original our troubles are all over."

"But I don't see how the ring has anything to do with——"

"With the family dishonor. No, I am coming to that. We arrive at the time, seven years ago, when my aunt and Lord Littimer and Frank were all living happily at Littimer Castle. I told you just now that the Carfax estates adjoin the Littimer property. The family is still extant and powerful, but the feud between the two houses has never ceased. Of course, people don't carry on a vendetta these peaceful days, but the families have not visited for centuries.

"There was a daughter Claire, whom Frank Littimer got to know by some means or other. But for the silly family feud nobody would have noticed or cared, and there would have been an end to the matter, because Frank has always loved my sister Chris, and we all knew that he would marry her some of these days.

"Lord Littimer was furiously angry when he heard that Frank and Claire had got on speaking terms. He imperiously forbade any further intercourse, and General Carfax did the same. The consequence was that these two foolish young people elected to fancy themselves greatly aggrieved, and so a kind of Romeo and Juliet, Montague and Capulet, business sprang up. There were secret meetings, meetings entirely innocent, I believe, and a correspondence which became romantic and passionate on Claire Carfax's side. The girl had fallen passionately in love with Frank, whilst he regarded the thing as a mere pastime. He did not know then, indeed nobody seemed to know till afterwards, that there was insanity in the poor girl's family, though Hatherly Bell's friend, Dr. Heritage, who then had a practice near Littimer, warned us as well as he could.

"Then those letters of Claire's fell into Lord Littimer's hands. He found them and locked them up in his safe. Frank, furious at being treated like a boy, swore to break open the safe and get his letters back. He did so. And in the same safe and in the same drawer, was Prince Rupert's ring. When Lord Littimer missed the letters he missed the ring also and a large sum of money in notes that he had just received from his tenants. Frank had stolen the ring and the money, or so it seemed. I shall not soon forget that day.

"After taking the letters Frank had gone straight to Moreton Wells, and it looked for a little time as if he had fled. Within an hour of the discovery of his loss Lord Littimer met Claire Carfax on the cliffs. She was wearing Prince Rupert's ring. Frank has sent it to her, she said. Anybody but a man in a furious passion would have seen that the girl was not responsible for her actions. Littimer told her the true circumstances of the case. She laughed at him in a queer, vacant way and fled through the woods. She went down to the beach, where she took a boat and rowed herself out into the bay. A mile or more from the shore she jumped into the water, and from that day to this nothing further has been seen of poor Claire Carfax."

"Or the ring, either?" David asked.

"Or the ring either. The same night Lady Littimer started after her boy. Littimer was going to have Frank prosecuted. Lady Littimer fled to Longdean Grange, where Frank joined her. It is said that Lord Littimer struck his wife, but Frank says that she fell against his gesticulating fist. Anyway, it was the same as a blow, and Lady Littimer dropped on the floor, dragging a table down with her, flowers and china and all. You have seen that table in Longdean Grange, Since then it has never been touched, the place has never been swept or dusted or garnished. You have seen my aunt, and you know what the shock has done for her—the shock and the steady persecutions of Reginald Henson."

"Who seems to be at the bottom of the whole trouble," said David. "But do you think that was the real ring on the poor girl's finger?"

"I don't. I fancy Henson had a copy made for emergencies. It was he who sent the copy to Claire, and it was that copy that Littimer saw on her hand. You see, directly Frank broke open that safe, Henson, who was at the castle at the time, saw his opportunity—he could easily scheme some way of making use of it. If that plot against Frank had failed he would have invented another. And the unexpected suicide of Claire Carfax played into his hands. Henson has that ring somewhere, and it will be our task to find it."

"And when we have done so?"

"Give it to Lord Littimer and tell him where we found it. And then we shall be rid of one of the most pestilential rascals the world has ever seen. When you get back to Brighton I want you to tell this story to Hatherly Bell."

"I will," David replied. "What a weird, fascinating story it is! And the sooner I am back the better I shall be pleased. I wonder if our man is awake yet. If you will excuse me, I will go up and see. Ah!"

There was the sound of somebody moving overhead.

CHAPTER XLV.

At the same moment Williams came softly in. There was a grin of satisfaction on his face.

"The brute is fast asleep," he said. "I've just been in his room. He left the lamp burning, and there is a lump on the side of his head as big as an ostrich egg. But he didn't mean to go to sleep; he hasn't taken any of his clothes off. On the whole, sir, wouldn't it be better for you to wake our man up and get him away?"

David was of the same opinion. Van Sneck was lying on the bed looking vacantly about him. He seemed older and more worn, perhaps, because his beard and moustache were growing ragged and dirty on his face. He pressed his hand to his head in a confused kind of way.

"I tell you I can't find it," he said; "the thing slipped out of my hand—a small thing like that easily might. What's the good of making a fuss about a ring not worth £20? Search my pockets if you like. What a murderous-looking dog you are when you're out of temper!"

All this in a vague, rambling way, in a slightly foreign accent. David touched him on the shoulder.

"Won't you come back with me to Brighton?" he said.

"Certainly," was the ready response; "you look a good sort of chap. I'll go anywhere you please. Not that I've got a penny of money left. What a spree it has been. Who are you?"

"My name is Steel. I am David Steel, the novelist."

A peculiarly cunning look came over Van Sneck's face.

"I got your letter," he said. "And I came. It was after I had had that row with Henson. Henson is a bigger scoundrel than I am, though you may not think it."

"I accept your statement implicitly," David said, drily.

"Well, he is. And I got your letter. And I called. . . . And you nearly killed me. And I dropped it down in the corner of the conservatory."

"Dropped what?" David asked, sharply.

"Nothing," said Van Sneck. "What do you mean by talking about dropping things. I never dropped anything in my life. I make others do that, eh, eh! But I can't remember anything. It just comes back to me, and then there is a wheel goes round in my head. . . . Who are you?"

David gave up the matter as hopeless. This was emphatically a case for Bell. Once let him get Van Sneck back to Brighton and Bell could do the rest.

"We'd better go," he said to Enid. "We are merely wasting time here."

"I suppose so," Enid said, thoughtfully. "All the same, I should greatly like to know what it is that our friend Van Sneck dropped."

It was a long and tedious journey back to Brighton again, for the patient seemed to tire easily, and he evinced a marked predilection for sitting by the roadside and singing. It was very late before David reached his house. Bell beamed his satisfaction. Van Sneck, with a half-gleam of recognition of his surroundings, and with a statement that he had been there before, lapsed into silence. Bell produced a small phial in a chemist's wrapper and poured the contents into a glass. With a curt command to drink he passed the glass over to Van Sneck.

The latter drank the small dose, and Bell carried him more or less to a ground-floor bedroom behind the dining-room. There he speedily undressed his patient and got him into bed. Van Sneck was practically fast asleep before his head had touched the pillow.

"I went out and got that dose with a view to eventualities," Bell explained. "I know pretty well what is the matter with Van Sneck, and I propose to operate upon him, with the help of Heritage. I've put him in my bed and locked the door. I shall sleep in the big armchair."

David flung himself into a big deck lounge and lighted a cigarette.

"My word, that has been a bit of a business," he said. "Pour me out a little whisky in one of the long glasses and fill it up with soda. . . . Oh, that's better. I never felt so thirsty in my life. I got Van Sneck away without Henson having the slightest suspicion that he was there, and I had the satisfaction of giving Henson a smashing blow without his seeing me."

"Sounds like conjuring," Bell said, behind his cigar. "Explain yourself."

David went carefully into details. He told the story of Prince Rupert's ring to a listener who followed him with the most flattering attention.

"Of course, all this is new to me," Bell said, presently, "though I knew the family well up to that time. Depend upon it, Enid is right. Henson has got the ring. But how fortunately everything seems to have turned out for the scoundrel."

"If a man likes to be an unscrupulous blackguard he can make use of all events," David said. "But even Henson is not quite so clever as we take him to be. He has found out the trick we played upon him over Chris Henson, but he hasn't the faintest idea that all this time he has been living under the same roof at Littimer."

"The girl is a wonderful actress," Bell replied. "I only guessed who she was. If I hadn't known as much as I do she would have deceived me. But Henson has shot his bolt. After we have operated upon Van Sneck we shall be pretty near the truth. It is a great pull to have him in the house."

"And a nasty thing for Henson——"

"Who will find out before to-morrow is over. I feel pretty sure that this house is watched carefully. Any firm of private detectives would do that, and they need be told nothing either. I know that I was followed when I went to the chemist's to fetch that dose for our friend yonder. Still, it is a sign that Henson is getting frightened."

"Why do you bring Heritage into this matter?" David asked.

"Well, for a variety of reasons. First of all, Heritage is an old friend of mine, and I take a great interest in his case. I am going to give him a chance to recover his lost confidence, and he is a splendid operator. Besides, I want to know why Henson has gone out of his way to be so kind to Heritage. And, finally, Heritage was the family doctor of the Carfax people you just mentioned before he went to practise in London. Let me once get Heritage round again, and I shall be greatly disappointed if he does not give us a good deal of valuable information regarding Reginald Henson."

"And Cross. What about him?"

"Oh, Cross will do as I ask him. Without egotism, he knows that the case is perfectly safe in my hands. And if we care to look after Van Sneck, why, there will be one less burden in the hospital. What a funny business it is! Van Sneck gets nearly done to death under this roof, and he comes back here to be cured again."

David yawned sleepily as he rose.

"Well, I've had enough of it for tonight," he said. "I'm dog-tried, and I must confess to feeling sick of the Hensons and Littimers, and all their works."

"Including their friend, Miss Ruth Gates?" Bell said, slily. "Still, they have made pretty good use of you, and I expect you will be glad to get back to your work again. At the same time you need not trouble your head for plots for many a day."

David admitted that the situation had its compensations, and went off to bed. Bell met him the next day as fresh as if he had had a full night's rest, and vouchsafed the information that the patient was as well as possible. He was cold and no longer feverish.

"In fact, he is ready for the operation at any time," he said. "I shall get Heritage here to dinner, and we shall operate afterwards with electric light. It will be a good steadier for Heritage's nerves, and the electric light is the best light of all for this business. If you have got a few yards of spare flex from your reading-lamp I'll rig the thing up without troubling your electrician. I can attach it to your study lamp."

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

The Modesty of Women

Naturally makes them shrink from the indelicate questions, the obnoxious examinations, and unpleasant local treatments, which some physicians consider essential in the treatment of diseases of women. Yet, if help can be had, it is better to submit to this ordeal than let the disease grow and spread. The trouble is that so often the woman undergoes all the annoyance and shame for nothing. Thousands of women who have been cured by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription write in appreciation of the cure which dispenses with the examinations and local treatments. There is no other medicine so sure and safe for delicate women as "Favorite Prescription." It cures debilitating drains, irregularity and female weakness. It always helps. It almost always cures. It is strictly non-alcoholic, non-secret, all its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper; contains no deleterious or habit-forming drugs, and every native medicinal root entering into its composition has the full endorsement of those most eminent in the several schools of medical practice. Some of these numerous and strongest of professional endorsements of its ingredients, will be found in a pamphlet wrapped around the bottle, also in a booklet mailed free on request, by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. These professional endorsements should have far more weight than any amount of the ordinary lay, or non-professional testimonials.

The most intelligent women now-a-days insist on knowing what they take as medicine instead of opening their mouths like a lot of young birds and gulping down whatever is offered them. "Favorite Prescription" is of KNOWN COMPOSITION. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 31 one-cent stamps for paper-covered, or 50 stamps for cloth-bound.

'MANITA'

AN INDIAN LEGEND.

We take from The McMaster University Monthly the following interesting article from the pen of Miss Emma Kennedy, a student, daughter of Mr. Robt. Kennedy, formerly of this town, but now of Toronto. It reads as follows:

MANITA, AN INDIAN LEGEND.

The story of Manita is one of the most beautiful legends of the Huron tribe of Indians. It has been handed down a great many years, perhaps more than two centuries, to the few of their descendants who who still rove about Sturgeon Lake and Scugog River, of North-eastern Ontario. At Sturgeon Point, almost on the shore of the lake, a circle of flat, smooth stones, marks the graves of the Huron Princess, Manita, and her lover, Ogemah, the Iroquois Chief.

The story of these two lovers is preserved for us in a short poem written by William McDonnell, (of Lindsay, Ont.), who spent much of his life in that district, and who was interested in gathering from the Indians their legends of what took place before white men invaded the country.

It was the close of a sultry summer's day. The ruddy glow of brilliant sunset was fading in the west, and shadows were lengthening and deepening along the shore. Tall oaks seemed listening to lisping wavelets that kissed their feet and lapped the pebbly strand. Distant objects grew faint and dim in the lessening light, while—

"The lone crane that to its covert flew
Scarce stirred the calm air in its lazy flight,
The hush was deep and all around was still,
Save for the hum of insects o'er the lake.
Or for the quick notes of the whip-poor-will,
Which came as if to keep the woods awake.
A lone cloud, fringed with light, stood upon high
Like some night guardian of the silent sky,
Stars came out one by one, as if to see
How like to paradise the place could be."

As the twilight deepened, the light of a fire on Sturgeon Point brightened in the oak grove, its curling smoke floating out among the green branches which sheltered the tents of the Huron camp. The Chief sat beside the camp fire puffing his pipe, without a care, for it was a time of peace, and his fearless faithful band of warriors was near at hand. But his daughter, Manita, was standing on the high bank in the shadow of a pine, anxiously gazing across the water for the misty shape of a canoe. Her lover, Ogemah, the brave Iroquois Chief, a month ago had sent her a message that he would meet her this very night. The moon had now risen, and—

"A moonbeam stole upon her face,
Revealing features wond'rous fair.
And from her eyes, at times, a light
Gleamed as from fire-flies in the night."

Uneasy and dreaming of danger, she watched down the lake towards Treaty Rock, and across the water to the mouth of the Scugog.

"But nothing came to greet her view
Like Ogemah or his canoe;
Nor voice, nor sound, yet reached her ear,
Save when the night-hawk plunged quite near,
Or when some startled wild bird's cry
Was echoed in the summer sky."

But Ogemah was coming. His strange canoe was gliding down the Scugog, bearing no unfriendly weapons, but rich gifts of wampum belts, curious pipes and embroidered leggings for the Hurons, whose Princess he was seeking for his bride, for she had thrown a spell around his heart. With sturdy stroke he paddled on to reach the lake, and as the sun was setting he saw its "crimson breast and and the purple hues around the purple hues around the shore." Sad thoughts crowded upon him as Bald Point came in view, the place where his father's tribe had fought a fierce battle with the Hurons, in which they were victorious, but lost their own Chief and captured the Hurons. Many were slain or captured, and few were shown mercy, but Ogemah pleaded for the old Chief and his daughter, Manita, until they were made prisoners. His tribe journeyed far into the West, and for fifty moons he retained his captives. No Iroquois did them injury; for Manita had a power to charm, and the children and maids loved her. Ogemah loved her from the first, and sought to gain her friendship by teaching her the signs and wonders of the wood. Together they hunted the beaver in the deep streams, or practised with bow and arrow, though none of hers ever disturbed a bird's nest. At last the captives were freed, but Ogemah had won Manita's love, and before they parted she promised him that no rival would take his place till they should meet again.

And now Ogemah was coming to see if she were faithful, and to claim her for his own. His canoe grated on the shore, when, looking around for something to greet, a water-lily fell at his feet.

"Ah, Manita!' he cried, 'Still true I I know this emblem comes from you."

He raised the flower, and she came out from the shadows. He rushed to clasp her to his breast, and pressed his lips upon her brow—

"And oh! what rapture in each face,
What words of love with each embrace;
They sat upon the gravelly strand,
Beneath the moonbeams, hand in hand,
And then he told her wondrous things,
The future should have golden wings,
A wreath of hope should span the sky—
The Rainbow vision up on high—
That every hour and every day
Should fling but sunlight in her way,
That with her he should ever stay."

Then Manita told her lover how she had watched for him on teh bank all day, listening to the squirrel, which came near chattering his name, "chic-chic, Ogemah," and the swallow twittering over her head, reading her secret thoughts, and at evenings the robin singing his soft, sweet, lone song for her. She told of how she had watched until his canoe had touched the shore, and she had thrown the lily from her hiding place behind the oak—

"And when you cried,
'Ah, Manita'—quick to your side
I ran, and lost all bashful pride—
Why should I blush to tell my love!
The sunlight coming from above
Brings not more rapture to the sight
Than you bring to my heart this night."

Then with words of love and embraces Ogemah reviewed his lonely months since their parting. If she had not greeted him this night, he said, such deep affliction would have brought but death. "Hush, of that dark chief do not speak", said Manita." "Death is like night, like the bleak winter which stills the tongue and dims the eye, stops the pulse and chills the blood." She told him of the terrible dreams of some enemy wounding her dearest friend, and of a danger which she feared for him. There was another suitor for her hand, Kenabeck, a dark and treacherous knave who would bribe her father for her and be a wily, dangerous foe to him if he suspected their purpose. She warned Ogemah to beware of his rival until the braves had met in council and had sanctioned their vows. Thus they talked till midnight, when Manita led him to her father's tent.

Little did the happy lovers suspect that Manita's suspicions were so well founded. Kenabeck had been waiting near Bald Point with a score of dusky warriors to seize Ogemah, but had missed him. The next evening he called his braves to a secret Council and laid his treacherous schemes before them. He claimed that Ogemah had come to seize their Chieftain's daughter, that his tribe might sacrifice her to their vicious, angry god, Manitou, who would lay his rod fiercely upon them if they did not offer up the daughter of a king. Their Medicine man in a dream lately had heard Manita scream, and had seen her gagged and bound, and no dream of his ever failed to come true. Kenabeck urged his warriors to save their Princess from one of the tribe which had lately been their bitterest enemies, that she might not be sacrificed a victim to their deity. The braves were deceived, and grasping their scalping knives in hand, they vowed a swift vengeance on the Iroquois traitor. With savage yells and the loud war-whoop they set out in their canoes for Sturgeon Point while a heavy thunderstorm was rolling down the lake.

The zig-zag lightning and the loud crashing of Annemeekee's drum, had swept the sky, but now—

"'Twas calm again, the wind was hushed,
The flowers looked up as if ne'er crushed,
The moon rose as bright and clear
As if no cloud had dropped a tear".

The lovers once again were sitting on the high bank under the moonbeam's silver sheen, whispering of to-morrow, their bridal day, which should blend their lives forever, and of the future, in which all would be peace and happiness. But now and again Manita glanced into the shade, a nameless fear clutching at her heart that danger was near and this bliss was not for them. Again it was time to part, but—

"Each felt reluctant to prepare
To leave the place and say 'good-night.'
Manita, speaking softly, said,
"May future meetings be like this,'
While in her eyes Ogemah read
Her heart, and gave his parting kiss
And said, 'When we again meet here,
No further parting need we fear.'
Alas! how close to them lay spread
A dark abyss they well might dread!"

A cloud stole over the moon's bright face and the night wind began to sigh as if another storm were coming up. Then suddenly a dreadful shout and the fierce Indian war-whoop sounded along the shore. Turning quickly from their parting embraces, the lovers saw an enemy lurking behind each tree, and Manita in wild dread cried, "Ogemah! quick! leave this place or you are dead!" He would not turn in flight, but faced the enemy, scarcely realizing that there was cause for fear or need of action. For one moment a moonbeam streamed through a cloud, revealing to Manita her dreaded enemy, Kenabeck, slowly take aim, and the next moment there was a crimson, proud that his deadly arrow had reached Ogemah's heart. He staggered but a step nearer and faintly called her name, but she had fallen in a swoon, her hopes for happiness forever doomed.

The gray dawn of the next morning found Manita sitting on the gravelly shore beside her lover, now cold in death. Now she kissed his pale, cold lips, then gazed at him fondly with calm pride. But in her face there was no trace of fear or sorrow, for her reason had fled. She could not believe that he was dead, but only asleep, and so she softly crooned a tender, childish lullaby. To those who came near she whispered, "Hist, hist, he is asleep,", and they left her in peace that day.

The Huron Chief had heard of Kenabeck's base threat too late, and before he could rush to Ogemah's relief the Iroquois Chief was slain. But ere another day passed, Kenabeck, too, met his death, and his body was sunk in the lake, where none might find his grave.

A grave was dug for Ogemah beneath an old oak, and Manita, thinking it was for a bed, made it soft with branches of white and red berries, moss and wild flowers. Just as the sun was sinking in the west she placed more flowers around his head and gently pressed his cold lips for the last time. Then they laid his Indian weapons and belts of wampum near his hand, ready when he should join the band of spirits, and covered the grave with moss and birch bark.

As time passed on, day by day, Manita lingered at the grave, fancying her lover would soon waken from his sleep. The children brought her flowers, which she scattered around the sacred place, and many came to hear the song she sang at times the whole day long—

"I have a little friend
Up in the tall pine tree,
In the sunny air he sings,
Sits and sings with folded wings;
Sings low and soft down by the lake,
Lest he should Ogemah wake.

I have a pretty friend,
The red-breast in the tree,
All day for me he sings,
Word from Ogemah he brings,
And often warbles by the lake,
To see if he is yet awake.

My pretty little friend
Will always stay with me,
While each simple song he sings
To my memory often brings
Something once told me by the lake
When Ogemah was then awake.

Years fled by and still the faithful Manita spent her restless days culling flowers and crooning her lullaby, always with the grave in sight. And when her step was slow and the silver threads were comnig in her hair, yet she always watched by her lover in his sleep, beneath the old oak, where once they had been so happy.

One autumn evening, just as sunset, she asked a child to gather the fragrant flowers, and when she had strewed them slowly around the grave, she said;

"Im wearied now, and here must rest,
Here for a while I shall a slumber take,
Arouse me if Ogemah should awake.

* * *

Then on the flowers her fading form she laid,
The children heard in silence what she said,
And when to camp 'twas time to have her led,
The faithful Manita was cold and dead;
And Ogemah, and Manita, his bride,
At Sturgeon Point are lying side by side;
And the rough waves that oft rush up the shore
Seem wailing out a dirge for evermore."

CLOSE SEASON FOR FROGS

Deputation Asks for Prohibtion of Capture in Summer Months.

Evening Post of May 16.

Mail and Empire: Representatives of the Lindsay Branch of the Fish and Game Protective Association of Canada, who interviewed Hon. Dr. Reaume, the Minister of Public Works, yesterday, asked that a close season for frogs be established. This they wished to apply all the waters of the Trent Valley during the months of May, June and July. They pointed out that young frogs were food fr the fish, and the matured frogs for mink, raccoons, otter and skunk. The capture of the frogs and their use for human consumption was working a serious injury to the fish and game of the Province. The deputation suggested that, if the close season could not be made to apply to the territory mentioned, it should be put in force in Victoria County. Consideration was promised by Mr. S. J. Fox, M.P. P. for Victoria.

The Lindsay deputation comprised Mr. J. M. Knowlson, President of Lindsay Fish and Game Association, Mr. F. J. Cornnell, secretary, and Messrs. F. D. Moore, W. H. Simpson and Alex. Paton. They were joined by some others before waiting on the Minister.

WEATHER IS BAD IN THE WEST

Manitoba May be Without a Harvest This Summer.

In market circles some alarm is felt at the situation so far as it relates to the wheat crop. Broomhall's weekly foreign crop summary issued lately is not at all favorable taken as a whole. While it is true that in some parts the crops are promising, the tone of the summary taken altogether, is decidedly unfavorable, and will have, no doubt further effect on the price of wheat on this continent. The despatch from Liverpool, received by Messrs. J. R. Heintz & Co., is as follows;

Liverpool, May 14. — Broomhall's weekly foreign crop summary says,

United Kingdom. — Warm, dry weather is wanted.

France.—The outlook for the crops is generally favorable. Supplies still scarce.

Germany.—The weather is favorable, and the crops have shown some improvement.

Roumania.—Drought is still causing apprehension for the crops and the outlook for corn is bad.

Russia—Dry weather now extends in the direction of the south-east, but there are no serious complaints heard yet. Supplies are very light.

Bulgaria.—Thirty per cent. of the winter crops have been abandoned, the same being replaced with spring wheat. Rain is urgently needed.

Turkey.—The outlook for the crops is unfavorable.

Italy, Spain and North Africa.—The outlook for harvest on the whole is satisfactory.

Argentine. — The strike situation still continues and is slightly hindering the loading of grain. The market is firm and prices are advancing rapidly.

India.—The weather still continues favorable.

WEEDS AND THE LAWN

Several Effective Methods of Destroying Blemish.

Several home-owners have asked how lawns can be kept free from weeds. The only entirely satisfactory way is by pulling up or cutting off the weeds as they appear. There are liquid applications advertised for destroying weeds, but it stands to reason that anything powerful enough to affect a weed must be equally harmful to the grass. The only way in which such an application could be used safely and effectively is by applying it to each weed, and this involves about as much labor as digging or pulling it up. Pull a weed, or cut off its top below the crown, and that's the end of it; therefore I advise that method as the most satisfactory one for ridding a lawn of these pests.

But of course such a method cannot be applied to a large lawn, or one would be spending nearly all his time fighting weeds. Much can be done to lessen the chances of injury from these intruders by so feeding the sward that it will get and keep the start of them. Encourage it to "stool" out so thickly that ordinary weeds will not be able to establish themselves among it, or will be choked to death by its luxuriant development.

But, with all possible precautions against them, weeds will come in, and such aggressive and persistent ones as thistles, dandelions and dock only can be kept down by pulling or cutting, or so feeding the grass that its luxuriance makes their presence hardly noticeable.

Some Remarks on Things in General

By "THE STROLLER."

Occasionally there is a paragraph in this paper not very complimentary to our friend the dog. Evidently the editor of this great family has at some time in his life had a quarrel with some canine, and his resentment is still alive. For our part, we have a great admiration for the dog, be he big or little, black or tan, or even yellow. We are aware of the fact that it is not the most pleasant sensation, nor does it tend to induce the most pleasant of thoughts, to have a cur suddenly run out and bark at you so close that you can almost feel it — especially if the pavements are slippery and one's thoughts are far away. The new situation is very apt to be embarrassing, and the effect of such a bark on an unfortunate bystander is not so up in the air it is more by luck than good management. The dog has always been one of man's closest friends. He is about the only one that will stick to him rich and poor, and give him as much, if not more, affection when he is poor than when he is rich. Then what a friend the dog is, the boy! The average boy will fight for his dog as he would for himself, and no one is prejudiced in favor of his canine friend. Numberless stories could be told of the heroic action of dogs on occasions, but we are afraid they would fall on the editor.

At the same time there are people who do not like dogs, and there are too many dogs that seem to be of the homeless variety, or tramp species. These dogs materially lift the cars into the class with a recognized home would receive, and no doubt it is these that the editor holds in contempt. It is difficult to know what to do in the matter. There is a low taxing dogs, but it is astonishing how our conscience stretches so far as it tends us when the policeman comes around with his little book. If we do not murder the truth we come perilously near it, and it seems to be a pity at a very poor grace. There is an opportunity here for some clever man to use a scheme whereby the family dog will be taxed with his own consent, and whereby the citizen who looks askance at dogs will not have to come in contact with the hot-water bottle, or lashing that anything that may be handy, then unlatched himself thy laughing stock of the village boys who happened to be passing.

We have often wondered whether we are not too provincial in our methods regarding our policing of the town and country. We have a population of 8,000, and only one policeman on duty at a time, but we cannot expect much ground to be covered with the speed of a cyclist. If it were not that the vast majority of our citizens are law abiding in their nature, we are afraid that we would look in vain for help, were it ever needed in a hurry. It is only natural to expect that a policeman will not exert himself in bringing offenders to justice unless they are unjust, if he shall charge go in any positive shape. At Lonsdale we remember when it would do some of our tributous friends good to spend a night in a cell to cool cooler, and if that were not enough, a spell up at Castle Jackson. All these things cost money, and on the part of the community and everyone on the part of the police. We remember some years ago that our Council had occasion to call on the Magistrate for committing a boy to the Industrial School because it entailed a charge on their finances—that is, they would prefer that the young criminal—for such he was—should be let loose on the community rather than be made to a prize where there would be some chance of reformation, because it would cost them a few dollars. It was, we thought, a little too much economy, selfish and anti-humanitarian view to take of the matter, and if we remember right, one of the School Trustees, who expressed his pain and indignation at their conduct, had to eat humble pie and apology in our order said note his day.

If the officers of the law, knowing the cool indifference with which their work will be viewed by those in authority, should be loth to incur the expense on the town, and also being unable to do more, than step man's work are seemingly careless in their duties in the order of the law, and at times, then we must not be too harsh in our judgment of them. We there two reasons so plain at the same time we would be apt to have fewer drunks on the streets and better behaviour all round. In the matter of children, who for their own sakes, and the sake of the State, ought to be taken away from their surroundings, we think our officers are not do better than step up the officers and insist on their doing their duty on say and every occasion, even if it did cost us a dollar or two extra.

In writing for a column like this it is our endeavor to present things just as they appear to us, or as they told to us, and it has been our object to take only those matters up that are of interest, or such as we think ought to be of interest, to our readers. The great trouble with most of us is that we do not take time to think of matters pertaining to the body politic, either social, religious or political. The consequence is that we get into such a lethargic state that it requires an earthquake of scandal to arouse us to our true position. This should not be, and would not be were we all to do our thinking; we we do alone, and our object is not not mads to give vent to our opinions as to try and set our readers thinking along lines of public matters, and if we can do that in any small degree we think ourself well repaid for the trey matter that has been expanded on this column. We, of course, expect to occasionally receive "bouquets, as we did last week from 'Farmer'; in criticising our remarks on 'Nemo.' We do not think it is fair to enter into any controversy with anyone who may find fault with any of the views we may express, but we do not regard rather have nosegays like "Farmer's" than cold indifference about what some are reading and doing, some thinking of the matter, and as one of the Socialists, greater or lesser, but we do not, we are thinking over their last estate, we ought to be commended for helping thought along, as we are doing. We would just like to say, however, to "Farmer," that the Socialists are not the by the vituperation which they hope to overpower, who have not eye to eye with them, and the sentiment of the Socialists is expressed in "They start out from the basis that every person is thinking and doing his best to over-reach his neighbor, that is, they are dishonest and that all life is a struggle from the cradle to the tomb, just as if we were animals and had lost all the higher qualities in its supplanting the brain. We do not think that is not so, and if we don't show it we are "knocking" "agriculture," "knock-nothings," etc. Even Emerson, whom "Farmer" thinks much of, is classed by the critic as an ass, and we are sorry, judging from some of the hot stuff we have received, that he is not now over this Idaho business, we will be almost ready to be classed with although we are very much struck with the idea that when he was alive he always well to give your opponents credit for something—the Socialists give their opponents credit for nothing except everything that is bad. Moreover, we are deeply interested in Socialism and intend to come back at diseases in different phases from time to time.

Just a word about coal, as we said we intend to do, we know a lot of these coal barons did not know how far to go in taxing the people's pocketbook in their exhorbitant extortions. This is a case in which we could safely be classed as a radical Socialist. We do not think that the Federal Government of Ottawa would be doing nothing out of the way if they be compelled to take the anthracite mines in their country—in fact, we go so far as to say they are not doing their duty; but doing so. There is a certain amount of exhortation that people can withstand, but when it comes to the "screaming point" it is just as well to be out of the road, up no one can tell what may happen. Witness the French revolution. It would look as if the mine owners had a point when they were seeking to compel fate by their notions. We in Canada can not do anything, but ours may be the last straw that will, at no distant day, set the ball rolling, and then where will they themselves to blame.

Some years ago, when it cost far more than it does now to haul coal, we got it at a price of $4.00 a ton. To-day, with cars carrying double loads and locomotives hauling double 15 or 20 years ago, we are taxed to pay for it. Not only that, but we pay in ten cents a ton per month to be added on until it has reached $7.00, which price the poor will be permitted to be the top limit, and that is what their supply at $6.80 or $6.90, even $7.00. The rank injustice and spirit of the thing is so apparent that we are surprised the people are standing it as well as they do—it seems foes to show that this generation is being subjected to. It seems to us that if our Socialistic brethren would take up a concerted case, take up this, and hammer at it unflinchingly and determinedly, instead of the big talk and exortations, they would themselves and others with the world incomparable something, and then from that vantage ground, they could take hold of any, or every nothing else equally glaring.

We are makers. We makers are hand-in-glove with the mine owners and we hard to say. They and we are the victims of circumstances and have no say in the matter at all, and if they do other than we expect, or we, we must accept their verdict. We are in the same boat with the rest of us, all we can say is that the miners would have the brains to run the coal business the way it is being now, we would not be called by our ghouls—they are living off the dire necessities of the poorer part of the community—and if, under any rules, we don't think that Dante has exercised, and we do, that there is not sufficient depth to give those fellows their just deserts.

INTERESTING FARM NOTES

AGRICULTURAL PROGRESS.

The feature of the opening day of the annual meeting of the Royal Society of Canada, which was held at Ottawa this week in the Normal School, with an attendance of sixty members from various parts of the Dominion, was the presidential address on Agricultural Progress delivered in the evening by Dr. William Saunders, G.M.G., director of the Central Experimental Farm. He gave a luminous, comprehensive and authoritative resume of the history and gradual development of the science of agriculture through the centuries up to the present day, when as he declared, agriculture has become an industry requiring to its practice a greater skill, knowledge and ability than any other industry in the world."

Dr. Saunders traced the history of agriculture from its earliest origins, noting that the horticulture nation was one of the greatest agricultural people in history, and that the growth of the Roman empire was based on the cultivation of the soil. In the middle ages rye, barley and oats were the staple crops of Europe. It was not until comparatively late date that the modern vegetable crops were introduced into England from America by Sir Walter Raleigh, and the date of the mention of carrots and other vegetables as staple articles of food does not go back until the reign of Henry VII. Queen Catherine, he noted, had to send to Holland for the seeds and predients of a salad. The modern science of agriculture if traced, was of improved breeding had beginnings in the 18th century. Then came the development of agriculture in the 19th century, when it was found it could be said that England, with a hundred and fifty millions of people, could feed all her population from certain crops, but also exportedlarge quantities of food, and that the English market absorbs annually two hundred million bushels of foreign wheat.

Referring to some of the basic scientific principles of modern agriculture, he noted that the prime constituents necessary to the growth in the soil were nitrogen, potash and phosphoric acid. Losses of the soil of the Canadian west prairies, and the loss from the fertilizers as rich in these constituents as the soil of the eastern Canadian counties. He briefly touched on the various attempts made to restore land he noted that the supply of fertilizers was being exhausted and exhausted at the end of twenty-five years, if humanity had to depend on the present sources of supply. But science, was developing the methods of manufacturing nitrogenous fertilizers from the air. Nature had perfectly solved the problem of cheap production of nitrates by electrical process, and the inventions pertaining to the probability of obviating the dire results of nitrogen famine. The best and most available fertilizer the speaker said was calcium cyanamid, which Canada annually produced enough nitrogen to more than meet the demand, which was staged.

In conclusion he touched the benefits which spread to agriculture in Canada through the creation in the last decade of experimental farms. Some than agriculture had made great strides in Canada. Canadian farmers were now as progressive than those of any other country in the world. Canada was at least good first place in the world's markets, and from Tilbuil Russia, Russia, Egypt, Japan, Africa, Mexico and other countries were coming to visit and analyze of Canada's agricultural crops. The area of land cultivated in Canada was still very small, but enough was known to warrant the statement Canada would shortly become one of the greatest food exporting countries of the world.

Dollar Wheat.

(New York Herald.)

From 1861 to 1883 wheat never rolled up a price equivalent to a dollar in the single year 1862, but that was largely a matter of money inflation rather than of comparative value. In nine years out of the twenty-three since 1881 wheat has exceeded one dollar, and in four of the sixteen years since 1891. The effect of speculative wild on prices is shown in the fact that in the years forty-six years the highest prices were seventeen times reached in the months of April and May and only four times in October and November, when the size of the crop is pretty well known. Corn is in the United States not yet quoted in Indian rubie in New York was to wait until the end of April, and then only big as a mouse's ear before planting In 1894 a wheat crop 180,000,000 bushels less than the average was followed by a corn crop only twice before exceeded. The corn crop of the country is usually nearly worth as much as the wheat and corn crops combined, but it is less interesting to speculators. The bulk of the corn never moves far from the farm where it is raised, and gives work to the farmers and their children. A hog's time is worth nothing; he gives his own corn and feed, and travels to market himself as the cheapest and most economical way. On the other hand, travels long distances by water or rail, furnishes work for miller, cooper, lumberman and floor-sack maker, and then provides his own corn and feed for his myriad mouths that wait it.

Ready for the Summer Season.

(Milwaukee Sentinel.)

"Biram," said Mrs. Kwakob, "did you get the canned peas and corn, toes when you was to town the other day?"

"Yes, Mandy."

"An' the dried apples and prunes?"

"Plenty of 'em."

"An' the salt pork?"

"Half a barrel of it."

"Then I reckon it's about time to begin overhaulin' for summer boots, eh, sir?"

WORKING WOMEN

Their Hard Struggle Made Easier—Interesting Statements by a Young Lady in Quebec and One in Beauport, Que

All women work; some in their homes, some in church, and some in the whirl of society. And in stores, mills and shops tens of thousands are on the feet-aching treadmill, earning their daily bread.

All are subject to the same physical laws; all suffer alike from the same physical disturbance, and the nature of their duties in many cases, quickly drifts them into the horrors of all kinds of female complaints, tumours, ulceration, falling and displacements or perhaps irregularity or suppression, causing backache, nervousness, irritability and lassitude.

They especially require an invigorating, sustaining medicine which will strengthen the female organism and enable them to bear easily the fatigues of the day, to sleep well at night, and to rise refreshed and cheerful.

How distressing to see a woman struggling to earn a livelihood or performer her household duties when her back and head are aching, she is so tired she can hardly drag about or stand up, and every movement causes pain. The origin of which is due to some derangement of the female organism.

Mlle. Alma Robitaille, of 78 rue St. François, Quebec, Que., tells women how to avoid such suffering; she writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Overwork and long hours at the office, together with a neglected cold, brought on a severe female trouble which all that I was unable to go to work. I then thought of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when her health was in the same condition that mine was, and straightway sent out for a bottle. I finished it and am now well and have I really began to improve, but after that my recovery was very rapid, and I was soon well and able to go back to work again. I certainly think your medicine for sick women worthy of praise, and an indeed glad to indorse it."

Miss Clara Beaubien of Beauport, Quebec, writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"For several years I have suffered with female trouble which has been a serious drain on my vitality, sapping my strength and causing severe headaches, bearing-down pains and a general worn-out feeling, until I really had no desire to live. I tried many medicines but did not get permanent relief until I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. In two months I was very much improved in health and strength, in three months I was much more disagreeable discharge, in three months I felt as good as I ever did, and I know Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound and I consider it without equal for the cure of women."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the unfailing cure for all these troubles. It strengthens the proper muscles, and displacement with all the horrors will no more crush you.

Backache, dizziness, fainting, bearing-down pains, disordered stomach, moodiness, nervous prostration and sociability—all symptoms of the one cause—will be quickly dispelled, and the system made strong and well.

You can tell the story of your sufferings to a woman, and receive helpful advice free of cost. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. The proceeds of Mrs. Pinkham is the daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, and for thirty years she has under her direction and since her decease, been advancing sick women free of charge.

FOUND CILL NET.

Inspector Bradshaw Visits Upper Scugog—Fish in the Lake.

Evening Post of May 17.

Fifty feet of gill net was found up near Ball Point on Wednesday by Fishery Inspector Bradshaw and Game Warden Parkins, of Ball Point. No one was found as to the owner of the net, which had unmistakably been used for illegal fishing, and was destroyed.

Mr. Bradshaw told a Post reporter of the prospects for the propagation of fish in Lake Scugog are good. He noticed several large maskinonge and other fish. The officials of the vicinity—Messrs. Watson, of Cadmus, and Parkin, of Ball Point — are keeping a strict lookout for offenders.

HIS MOTHER'S OPINION.

Whilst walking down a crowded city street the other day,
I heard a little urchin to a comrade
turn and say;
"Say, Chimmy, lemme tell youse I'd be happy as a clam
If I only was de feller dat me mudder t'inks I am.

"She t'inks I am a wonder, an' she knows her little lad
Could never mix wit' nuttin' dat was ugly, mean or bad.
Oh, lots of times I sit an' t'ink how nice 'twould be, gee whiz!
If a feller was de feller dat his mudder t'inks he is."

My friend, be yours a life of toil or undiluted joy,
You can learn a lesson from this small, unlettered boy.
Don't aim to be an earthly saint,
with eyes fixed on a star,
Just try to be the fellow that your mother thinks you are.

—The Brighten Day.

No matter what the pain—
Teach me, oh God, to do the good,
No matter what the doing should
Entail of loss or gain,
That I, unheeding of the end,
Shall do the right; the same
Whether the course I follow send
Man's praises or his blame!

The National Bible Society of Scotland, issued 1,670,000 copies of the Bible last year.

A call from the pastoral charge of Enniskillen, Cadmus, and Blackstock unanimously in favor of Rev. J. C. Foster, late of Red Deer, was sustained. Mr. Foster accepted, and was inducted at Blackstock on April 30th.

Kingston Whig; The Salvation Army is surprising the world by its energy and progressiveness. It is doing wonderful things in the uplifting and ennobling of the people. It represents the most active religious force of the day.

McMaster University will shortly confer these degrees; Rev. W. J. McKay, M. A., B. D., editor of the Canadian Baptist, Toronto, will receive an L. L. D.; Rev. William E. Norton, superintendent of the Baptist Room, Toronto, a D. D. degree; Rev. J. G. Brown, secretary of Foreign Missions, Toronto, a D. D.

Christian England laughed when Sidney Smith sneered at William Carey as a "consecrated cobbler," going on a fool's errand to convert the brethren. But when Carey died at the age of 73 years he was visited by the bishop of India, the head of the Church of England in that land, who humbly invoked the blessing of the dying missionary.

Rev. E. J. Peck, the veteran missionary of the Church of England among the Eskimos in Hudson's Bay Territory, and Baffin Land, who has resided for the past year in Winnipeg, left for Barrie, Ont., with his family. He will leave his wife and two sons there while he will do deputation work in the east. He will also take a trip to England, and will publish the Epistles and Book of Revelations, which he translated into the Eskimo language. This work will complete the New Testament in Eskimo.

It will surprise no one to read that the Bible, is, by literally millions of copies, the best selling book in the world, but it may be somewhat surprising to learn that in the United States and other parts of the christian world, its sale is increasing at from five to ten per cent each year—a fact which does not indicate that Bible reading and Bible interest are decreasing, as some would have us believe. The total sales for the past year are estimated at from 10,000,000 to 12,000,000 copies.

Weekly Sun; The Lord's Day controversy goes on and threatens a bitterness which might be injurious to the institution itself. It can only be repeated that while the day of rest is a boon to toiling humanity which law ought as far as possible to guard there is no apparent warrant for making it a day of ascetic restraint or gloom. Nothing of course can be allowed to intrefere with public devotion or such tranquility as public devotion requires. Nor can excess be permitted on that day any more than on any other day; but if recreation and enjoyment, in themselves innocent and inoffensive, are to be forbidden, on what does the prohibition rest? That the Jewish Sabbath is not binding on Christians it is needless to repeat, though the question probably is still prejudiced in many minds by a lingering impression of that kind.

The sturdy character of Dr. Grenfell's christianity, and the secret of his power with the rough folk of Labrador, was given in an address made some time ago, parts of which were quoted by an exchange: Dr. Grenfell said; "I've never been sorry a moment for the choice I made. There's a reward in it. I used to have a different idea of Christian reward with a halo in it and a pair of wings. That didn't appeal to me. But I am getting a reward that is worth while, getting it every day—the reward of the satisfaction there is in doing things that help people, and the reward of knowing that this is something that the Master approves. That's what He did when He was here—helped people — and if we want to follow him, that's what we have to do too." The "halo and wings" type of christianity, says the Lutheran Observer, does not have much attractive force in these days when men are asked to show their faith by their works. It is the type of which Dr. Grenfell is the exponent, manifesting the real Christ-spirit in doing the Christ-work, which is needed, and which cannot but succeed.

Next Sabbath is Hospital Sunday. A collection will be taken up in each of the churches for the benefit of the Ross Memorial Hospital. It is just once a year that the churches contribute to this most deserving cause, and the congregations should at this time show their appreciation of the excellent work done by this institution, especially as evidenced during the past season.

Rev. G. W. Henderson, formerly pastor of Cambridge-st. Methodist church, Lindsay, and now stationed at Port Hope, has received a call to George-st. church, Peterboro. The Review says; Rev. Mr. Henderson; Review says; He came to Port Hope two years ago this June, so that in 1908 he will only have been here three years, while he is a four-year man. In veiw of the fact there may be some difficulty in securing his release from the church here. Mr. Henderson, however, it is understood, is desirous of accepting the invitation to the Peterboro church, and the Quarterly Board is likely to grant his request to be released at the end of three years.

Some churches reserve certain pews for strangers. A writer in the Southern Presbyterian thinks the better plan is to show them into family pews, where they will be welcomed by members of the church. Speaking of a church which does this, he says they do this purposely, because they want people to feel at home. The pastor exhorts his people; "If a stranger is shown into your pew, or a man and his wife, be glad to see them, greet them with a smile. See that they are offered one of the hymn books in your pew-rack. After service extend the hand of welcome to them, and ask them to come back again—ask them to come to your pew with you next time. These are little things. They will cost you nothing. But what a difference they make in the way people feel who come to worship with us for the first time!"

SERMONS DELIVERED AT THE CHURCHES LAST SUNDAY.

(Evening Post, May 20.)

QUEEN-ST. METHODIST

Rev. Geo. Puffer, of Illinois, uncle of De Willet Puffer, and an old L. C. I. boy, preached at the Queen-st. Methodist church yesterday. He is a former member of the church, and the congregation were delighted to hear him. "The life of faith," was the subject of his remarks, and he preached a very able sermon. He leaves to-night for his home in Illinois. The anthem, "The Unseen City," was delightfully rendered by the quartette, comprising Mrs. Williamson, atlo; Miss Coburn, soprano; Mr. Harris, tenor, and Mr. Tresidder, bass.

AT ST. ANDREW'S

An earnest plea for pure living was made by Mr. Brown last evening at the Presbyterian church. This was Mr. Brown's last sermon at the church. Rev. Mr. Wallace, the pastor, will be back by next Sunday. The earnestness and thoughtfulness of Mr. Brown's sermons, particularly the later ones, has left a very favorable impression among the congregation he led for the past few Sundays. Last evening's sermon was on the text, "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God," one of the beautitudes. He read for the evening's bible reading a selection from Christ's sermon on the mount. His entire remarks were an appeal for a closer following in the steps of our Master. He drew the character of Christ himself as an example for us.

"Oh, how amiable are Thy dwellings," was the morning anthem. The first in the evening was, "We shall see Jesus," the tenor solos being taken by Mr. Metcalfe. The second, "At even, ere the sun was set," is one of the choir's finest anthems, and is one which will bear repeating. The contrasts of loud and soft were well observed, the last three words, "Heal us all," making a most impressive close.

Hens That Trespass.

Newmarket Era; Some very well-meaning people who keep poultry are oftentimes exceedingly thoughtless respecting duty to their neighbors. By way of reminder, the Ontario Legislature has enacted a law which provides that owners of animals and poultry, allowing them to run at large, are liable for damage caused by the same. If owner, after written notice from the neighbor complaining of trespass, neglects to prevent a repetition thereof, he may be fined by a Justice of the Peace. This is the cure to prevent poultry making things unpleasant among neighbors.

HELD CONFIRMATION SERVICE

BISHOP SWEATMAN, PRIMATE OF CANADA, OFFICIATED.

Large Congregation Attended and Listened to an Eloquent Discourse.

A confirmation service was held at St. Paul's churchon Thursday, and a large congregation attended. Over fifty candidates were confirmed, Archbishop Sweatman performing the impressive ceremony. Rural Dean Marsh, the Rector, Rev. Mr. Vale, curate, and Rev. Mr. Creighton were also engaged as assistants.

After confirmation the Archbishop preached an eloquent sermon on the subject, "Confirmation". While in appearance considerably over the allotted span of life, the Primate of Canada is a hard worker for his Master. He spoke in eloquent terms of the inspiring sight of so many young men and women coming forward in acknowledgment of Christ and accepting Him. Confirmation was instituted by the Apostles under Christ's direction. God formed man in his own image, and breathed into him the breath of life. This spiritual life should be supernatural life. We should outpour our souls to God for the growth and maintenance of this life. God's word is given to us for our spiritual food. In closing the Archbishop advised frequent communion with God in praer for the bedefitting of our souls and the uplifting of our lives.

ANNUAL MEETING AND FIRST SALE LAST WEDNESDAY.

800 Boxes Chauged Hands at 11 1-2c.—President's Address.

Evening Post of May 17.

The annual meeting and first sale of cheese of the Peterboro cheese Board for the season of 1907, took place Wednesday morning, and was well attended by the members of the Board and salesmen. Election of officers took place. Prospects for the season were discussed, and about eight hundred boxes of cheese sold at 11 1-2 cents per pound. The total registration of cheese was 809 boxes, and all sold except Fraserville factory, which only opened a short time ago, and only had ten boxes for sale. Mr. Wrighton, Mr. Cook, Mr. Gillespie, and Mr. Whitten were the buyers who made purchases. Mr. Morton was also present, but did not do any buying.

The prospects for an excellent season for the Board are very bright, and Wednesday's meeting augured well for the future.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

In opening the sale of cheese, Mr. Riddell referred to the fact that the Peterboro cheese board was the premier board of Canada. At least that was what was said of it, and if it was not true it was the duty of those connected with the Board to make it the leading organization of its kind in the Dominion. He hoped that buyers, salesmen, producers, and everyone who had an interest in the Board would work together unitedly and harmoniously to keep up the record of the Peterboro district as a cheese producing centre. Cheese was what is known as perishable goods and in order that it might reach the consumer in good condition, it was necessary that the best of care should be given the cheese from the time it left the factory until it reached the consumer in the Old Country. Nor was it sufficient that good cheese would be had if the care only commenced when the cheese left the factory. In the first place it was necessary that the milk should be right, that it should be delivered at the factory in good condition, that the factory should be in a clean sanitary condition, and that the cheese maker should be a first class man.

The president alluded to the evil effect of shipping green cheese. Much injury was being done the trade in this manner, and he hoped the salesmen of the Peterboro district would break away from this practise. He did not believe that the Peterboro district was as bad in this respect as some other localities.

SALE OF CHEESE

On motion it was decided that for the first meeting the rule which requires a buyer to take at least 500 boxes when he calls the board be suspended, and that the limit be 200 boxes.

The bidding was somewhat slow, and it took considerable time to clear the board. The buyers would not go above 11 1-2c., and at first the salesmen were somewhat reluctant about selling. But eventually the board was cleared.

Mr. Whitten opened the bidding at 11c., and Mr. Wrighton raised to 11 1-4c. Mr. Whitten came back with 11 3-8c., and Mr. Wrighton outbid him with 11 1-2 c. No one offered to go any higher.

At 11 1-2c. Mr. Wrighton secured first choice, and took the following; Keene, Warminster, Shearer, Warsaw, Trewern, Indian River, Lang, Pine Grove and Bensfort.

Central Smith, Westwood, Bensfort and Selwyn were called, but did not sell.

Mr. Cook got the next call at 11 1-2c., and secured the following; Ormoned, Brickley, Myrtle, Oakdale, Cavanville, Young's Point, and Maple Leaf.

Central Smith, Villiers, and Selwyn were called, but refused to sell.

Mr. Gillespie bid 11 1-2c. for the remainder of the board, and cleared it as follows: Central Smith, Selwyn, Villiers, Westwood, and Buckhorn.

Killarney sold to Mr. Whitten at 11 1-2c.

[The board adjourned] for three weeks, and the next meeting will, therefore, be on June 5th.

A COMPARISON

It is interesting to note that the first meeting of the Board last year was held on May 23rd, when the offerings were 1,371 boxes. All sold at 11 5-8 c. and 11 3-8c., so that the prices last year were practically the same as the figures that prevailed on Wednesday.—Examiner.

Catarrh

To prove unquestionably, and beyond any doubt, that Catarrh of the nose and throat can be cured, I am furnishing patients through druggists, small free Trial Boxes of Dr. Shoop's Catarrh Cure. I do this because I am so certain, that Dr. Shoop's Catarrh Cure will bring actual substantial help. Nothing certainly, is so convincing as a physical test of any article of real, genuine merit. But that article must possess true merit, else the test will condemn, rather than advance it. Dr. Shoop's Catarrh Cure is a snow white, healing antiseptic balm, put up in beautiful nickel capped glass jars at 50c. Such soothing agents as Oil Eucalyptus, Thymol, Menthol, etc., are incorporated into a velvety, cream like Petrolatum, imported by Dr. Shoop from Europe. If Catarrh of the nose and throat has extended to the stomach, then by all means also use internally, Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Stomach distress, a lack of general strength, bloating, belching, biliousness, bad taste, etc. surely call for Dr. Shoop's Restorative.

For uncomplicated catarrh only of the nose and throat nothing else, however, need be used but

RECTOR PAID HIGH TRIBUTE

To the Worth of the Late Dr. Neill—Was a Noble Gentleman.

In conducting the funeral service for the late Dr. Charles Neill, Rev. E. A. Langfeldt, of Peterboro, with whose church the deceased was associated, referred in words of praise to the exemplarity of the deceased. His remarks were based on the text, "Whose names are in the book of life." The speaker said that there were many true christians unknown as such to the world, many were known to God alone. While in this world, however, they had mid it rather by their lives, though the world was unconscious of the influence thus exerted. Many names, he said, which the world never honored, sink which the world never shined are written in God's Book of Life. Referring to the late Mr. Neill, Mr. Langfeldt said that he commenced his life as one of noble usefulness and unselfish friendship. The speaker had had many pleasant conversations with the deceased, and he valued his tender friendship. While there and in good health he had attained a service at St. Luke's, "in which house of worship he was greatly attached and which he generously supported. His religious life and faith were not demonstrative; he lived and avoided any professions to sentimental. Nevertheless he lived a christian life, carrying out the principles of the gospel in the best of his ability.—Examiner.

ALMOST A FATALITY.

Prompt Action of Mr. James Nicholls Saved Boys Life.

Evening Post of May 18.

Yesterday evening, a Mr. James Nicholls, stable foreman for the Flavelle Milling Co., was working near the cow mill, he noticed two small boys fishing, and a moment later he heard a scream. On looking around he missed one of the boys and ran to the spot in time to see the other little fellow come up from the depths of the water, with a very dangerous at that spot as there is a well defined by following Mr. Moore's example. This is not the first time Mr. Moore has shown his interest in the Collegiate Institute, as a couple of years ago he and Dr. Simpson held a competition among the students at naming birds, and contributed towards valuable prizes.

A case of minerals has also been received from the Geological Survey of Canada. This was presented by Colonel Hughes. It consists of a square box, nine handsomely finished, and contains five drawers, each of which has a thirty days for the minerals. The specimens are all from Canada, and are large and very handsome. If particular attention is paid to this least forty dollars. These will be of great assistance, as with the full term mineralogy will be very popular subject on the curriculum.

A Mr. Ingersoll, of Ohio, America, presents has also been presented by Mr. Ingersoll, collection of Spa. These consist of corals, shells and trilobites. The students have added to the collection, an over a dozen specs of fish are represented. Many snakes, frogs, toads, mice, moles and newts are preserved in jars and give a good idea of the very varied fauna of Victoria County.

The public are always welcome to observe and study the collection and specimens of specimens are always appreciated.

FOR THE GOOD OF STUDENTS.

Three Donations to Collegiate Institute Museum.

The Museum of the Collegiate Institute has received some very valuable additions recently. A collection of minerals has just been donated by Mr. W. D. Moore. The collection consists of about twenty-five specimens of rock, which Mr. Moore himself in this neighborhood, and the mounting has been performed by a skilled workman. Among others there are fine specimens of the Herring Gull, Florida Gallinule, Hellbell Grous, Harnard Grebe, Pine Grosbeak, Great Horned Owl, Lazzier headed Shrike, Canada Jay and Greater Yellow Legs. There is now a very fair representation of our more common birds present in the Museum, except of the ducks, hawks and owls, and it is to be hoped that some of our citizens may overcome their diffidence by following Mr. Moore's example. This is not the first time Mr. Moore has shown his interest in the Collegiate Institute, as a couple of years ago he and Dr. Simpson held a competition among the students at naming birds, and contributed towards valuable prizes.

Steinboet men on the Kawartha lakes, will miss the old captain when he was Inspector of Hulls for the Dominion Government, will hope for his speedy recovery.

LEMIEUX ON POSTAL AGREEMENT

Refusal to Agree to Wait Six Months to Entered Into.

An Ottawa despatch says: Hon. Mr. Lemieux, Postmaster-General, denies having stated that Canada had been alleged, that the United States post office department refused to grant a reduction in postage, on the coming into effect of the new postal agreement, which Postmaster-General of the United States, he said, is not in force, and that the envelopes which the United States has been receiving at the reduced rate of the new convention was naturally in favor of continuing this, it was hoped that the agreement, however, that Canada abrogated the clause in the agreement which gave her to abrogate the treaty upon 60 days' notice, if Canada wanted to go to immediate effect.

Replying to the contention that a postponement should have been made to January, Mr. Lemieux pointed out that this would be unjust to those whose subscription ended in the October months and that the present arrangement is to those whose subscriptions end in January.

TO THE PUBLIC.

I will be in Lindsay for that purpose, on Saturday, May 26th, at the Moosejaw Real Estate and Western Canada Farm Lands. I have a very large selection which I know will interest you. Come up and see me and I will be pleased to show you. If you have property out there now, let me tell you how I can dispose of it, and if you want to purchase it. You will find me at Room 2, Pym's hotel, between the hours of 9 and 12 and 2 to 5 p. m. and 7 to 9 p.m. Sec. my ad in this issue.

The Trent Canal.

The plans for the Bolland River section of the Trent Canal have been completed and it is understood that tenders for contracts will be advertised in a month or two. The plans were all prepared at the office of the superintendent engineer of the canal, and are most complete in every detail. The Bolland River section of the canal stretches from Newmarket to Lake Simcoe, and when finished will add greatly to the utility of the canal. The plans are now in the hands of the engineer, which is to be built at Buckhorn, and tenders will be called for in a few days.

WILL BENEFIT OUR FARMERS

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT TO BE ADDED TO STUDIES.

Decided at a Special Meeting of the Board of Education.

Evening Post May 21.

The Board of Education has decided to accept the offer of the Ontario Government and will establish a department for the teaching of scientific agriculture at the Collegiate Institute. That there would be some little risk in entering into the scheme, seemed to be the general opinion of the members, but they also felt that if successful, the venture would greatly benefit Victoria County. The hearty support of the County Council is, however, necessary to secure the success of the project.

The meeting was well attended by the members, Mr. Thos. Stewart, chairman, and Messrs. Flavelle, Jackson, Blanchard, Mitchell, McWatters, Carew, J. W. Anderson, D. H. Anderson, J. W. Anderson, J. G. Edwards and Dr. Walton in the president, and Dr. White absent. Principals Harstone and Broderick, and Science Master Cornish, of the Collegiate Institute were also present.

Mr. Stewart explained that it had been found impracticable to get the County Council together at present, and the Board had to decide at once this course they were going to pursue without waiting for the County Council's ratifed. The appointment of a teacher for an Agricultural Department must be made by June 1st, or the grant would be passed toanother school.

Principal Harstone said this class room could be had in the building, and also quarters for experimental work, but a building would have to be provided for blacksmithing, carpentering and other features of the subject.

Mr. J. D. Flavelle—Turn the present gymnasium into a workshop, and erect a new gymnasium.

Mr. Cornish, Science Master, said that satisfactory arrangements could be made for the use of the laboratory for experiments.

Considerable discussion then ensued with regards to the practicability of adopting the course. Chairman Stewart read a lengthy list of tools and requirements for such an addition to the curriculum.

Mr. J. D. Flavelle advocated a progressive policy in regard to the scheme. "Every possible means," he said, "should be taken to make the County Council see it in a favorable light." He moved, seconded by Mr. J. Jackson, that the proposition of the government re-establishing a department in connection with the Collegiate Institute for the purpose of teaching scientific agriculture be approved of and accepted.

Mr. D. H. Anderson said he would like to have had the matter defined. "I have not enough information to vote intelligently on the question." Further, he said if he thought the County Council would not support the scheme, he would vote against it. The farmers he had met with largely were not in favor of it.

Mr. J. G. Edwards said the risk would be small, and little loss would be incurred if the venture was unsuccessful. "The implements," he said, "would be little damaged and we could get 90 per cent of their value if sold a year hence."

Mr. J. W. Anderson—"I thought for one minute the County Council would lend help to, and support it."

"Surely the County Council are not all ignoramuses," responded Mr. Staples. "It is for their benefit, and if they hold any sense they would vote for it." He favored sending a strong deputation to meet them at their June session.

Dr. Blanchard felt doubtful of the County Council's support.

"You will make a mistake if you turn it down," said Mr. Flavelle. We must get a grant of 30 per cent from the County Council, and the students' fees. The school will be a great benefit to the Agricultural College."

Mr. Jackson thought the risk worth taking.

Principal Harstone said the presence of older students would have a beneficial influence on the rest of the school. Years ago he said, when many older students attended the school, work done, etc, were a good deal better than at present. He thought it would tend to a department such as this one would naturally have a beneficial influence. He would experience a learning influence from the association, so far as to vote, was passed, Messrs J. W. and D. H. Anderson only voting.

Mr. J. Staples moved, seconded by Mr. McWatters, that the whole Board of Education go out on the canvass with the County Council, and that the Government be asked to send a suitable person or persons to assist in impressing on the County Council the advisability of giving the proposed new department of agricultural department in connection with Lindsay Collegiate Institute.

The Board then adjourned.

ENGLAND.

While men pay reverence to mighty things,
They must revere thee, thou blue island queen
Of England—not to-day, but this long while
In front of nations, mother of great kings,
Of soldiers and poets. Round thee the wide
Its steel-bright arm, and shields thee from all ills
Of war. A New age, a new age and hart of France. Secure with Thou gildest, and the coal bar trifoils
Some say thy old-time power is on the wane,
They mean of tumultuous field, contests at lance.
They see it darkening down from leaf to lea.
Let but a hostile hand make threat again,
And thy shall see thee in thy ancient strength,
Each iron sinew quivering, Lionest

Dear Sir,—

I have pleasure in handing you application for my fourth policy in Canada Life. I am thoroughly satisfied with my position in your Company. $2000 of which is now fully paid up and participating in the profits of the Company as long as I live. The profits allowed me on these policies has been very satisfactory indeed, and I would strongly advise any young man to invest as largely as possible along this line.

Yours truly,

TYPICAL OF THE WEST

Regina Leader Issues a Great Spring Building Number.

The newspaper men of Western Canada have reason to be proud of the record they are laying up for themselves in the archives of the Dominion. A number of the daily newspapers published in Western towns are so well edited and up-to-date in every respect as the journals at presenting three or four times as large, a consciousness in the East. Why is that? It is the result of the bracing air acting on jaded intellects, or is to be ascribed entirely to the enthusiasm of the "hustling" that seems to be engendered in the minds of all who come from for a time in the great West and become inoculated with its bracing and hustling virus contact?

But we are getting away from our subject. A New Year ago we received as a sample copy of the Regina Leader issue of Spring Building Number. Truly, the issue is one of which any paper in Canada might well be proud, both from a typographical point and a literary point of view, while a glance through the many pages and illustrations of the issue gives one a splendid conception of the progressive city and the virile character of its business men. A large map of Saskatchewan, in colors, and showing the various electoral districts, adds to the value and interest of the issue.

The Leader is mainly the property of Hon. Walter Scott, premier of Saskatchewan. Mr. Hugh Newworthy, formerly with The Post, is secretary of the company.

CARD OF THANKS

Lindsay, Ont., May 17th, 1907

The Manufacturers Life Insurance Co., Toronto:

Gentlemen,—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your cheque in full for One Thousand Dollars ($1000) given me by your representative, A. J. Campbell, General Agent, as payment in full for the policy on the life of my deceased son. Although at one time I was prejudiced against life insurance, I am now convinced and obliged to admit that it is a good thing for any young man to protect himself and those dependent upon him, by carrying an insurance policy on his life. I must say that I have had no trouble whatever in obtaining my claim, and thanks, as Mr. Campbell, in conjunction with your company, has always been connected with this claim executed with the greatest possible speed, and as soon as it could be reasonably expected after the proofs had been over to me. Again thanking you for the kind attention I have received and prompt payment of the above, I heartily recommend the Manufacturers' Life Insurance Co. to anyone wishing to carry insurance.

Yours respectfully,

MRS. SARAH McFADYEN

Notes About Ford's Dress Goods and Silks.

It is a Sure Thing That no Better Values can be Found than These Listed Here.

We have no monopoly on Dress Goods or Silks. But we have practically a monopoly on stylish materials of intrinsic value. And we haven't robbed quality to hold down the prices.

We could mark our stock about 25 per cent. higher than these prices and not go beyond present value. Because we bought right and because we sell at small profits.

We are especially proud this spring of the beauty, variety and cleanliness of our stock. And we tell you again in no uncertain language that the woman, who wants these things combined with the best value, buys here. For instance look at these then come to the store and be convinced.

Stylish 75c Dress Materials for 59c.

Including the new black and white Checks, Plaids and Light Tweeds, good patterns for skirts or suits, all-wool qualities, 44 inches wide, a chance to save on them.

Wool Voiles of Unbeatable Value at 50c, 75c and $1.

The season's dressiest and most fashionable materials; in creams and fine weaves, blocks that will stay black, and colors that retain their beauty such as the new grey, mauve, green, champagne, browns and navy's. Ask to see them.

A Splendid Choice of Correct Dress Materials at 85c

Including black Broadcloths, fancy Mohairs, Brown, Navy and Green Venetian cloths, light weight Tweeds for skirt waist suits; also fancy embroidered voiles in all the best colors and black. These are just as equal to most dollar kinds; all at the moderate price of 85c.

Exclusive Dress and Suit Lengths, at $1.25, 1.35 1.50 and 1.75.

The bride-to-be can easily be suited from our excellent range of these materials. One particular dressy cloth item embroidered voile of fine silk and wool texture in any of these suitable shades: light grey, champagne; will make cute bridesmaids gowns and only cost $1.25 a yard.

The $1.35 cloths are in the season's novelty Tweed designs and the colorings and patterns are the neatest we've ever shown. At $1.50 and $1.75 you can get the best value in Broadcloth possible to obtain; new reveals, navy and blacks. Each one a beauty and no two alike.

Silks for all Occasions at 25c to $1.50

Whether it's the low-priced Japanese silk at 25c or the rich Taffeta silk you want, we have them in splendid choice.

Rev. W. T. Wickett, of Scugog, acted our pulpit on Sunday last.

Our popular Rev. W. T. Scugog, preached anniversary services on the Scugog circuit yesterday.

Mr. and Miss Jones, of Omemee, are visiting their cousins in this vicinity.

Miss Jones returning from his west farm Saturday evening, Mr. Fred Sewell's team took fright, Mr. Sewell escaped without any serious injuries although he was badly bruised.

A great many from this vicinity attended the celebration in Cambington on Empire Day, and report an excellent time.

Mr. Charlie Osborne, one of our popular young men, left last week for home to have his nose broken while playing football with a team of young men. His many friends hope soon to see him in their midst again.

Rev. Mr. Cosgrove and Mr. C. B. Craig will conduct the service. There will be no anniversary service, as the special Oddfellows' sermon will be preached in Manilla on Sunday. Practising for the anniversary is the order of the day now.

VALENTIA

(Special to The Post.)

Mr. A. E. Mark is making a great improvement on his barn by putting up 40 feet of the west end, lifting it off the roof and making it a hip roof. In the south end of the barn he burns in this vicinity, when finished, he will have a large hay barn and a new brick house, which will be a great improvement to his property.

Mr. Arthur Ward has started on a new house. Mr. John Gordon of Neilburg, has the contract for the buildings.

The Valentia boys went over to Zion on the 24th to play ball with the L. M. C. A. team of Lindsay. At the finish our boys were a few runs ahead. They spoke highly of the boys from town. (They usedto be Valentia boys themselves) and they did. The boys were cut for Tuesday, and they had lots of it.

Our anniversary takes place on Sunday and Monday, June 2 and 3. On Sunday at 2.30 p. m. Mr. Scott, of Omemee, will preach. In the evening Mr. Moore will preach at 7 p. m. We hope the snow storm will be over by that time.

Miss Cleary sails for England on the Empress of Britain on Friday. Her many friends wish her a bon voyage.

Presbyterian church on Sunday last was very sparsely attended owing to the disagreeable weather. The Rev. Mr. Ferguson, of Beaverton, preached two able sermons.

The boys think of this place have opened a sub-agency at Victoria Road. Some of the boys on the staff will be found every Tuesday and Friday.

Mr. Jas. Gardiner and family arrived here on the 24th on their farm in Mariposa.

Mr. J. A. Walker, of the Sterling Bank, spent the holiday with Lindsay friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Turner have left for a short visit to their old home in Ireland.

The Rev. Dr. Telling, of Toronto, will occupy the Presbyterian pulpit in the absence of the pastor, who is taking a well-deserved rest for a fortnight.

Mr. Gilchrist, who has been making a prolonged visit with her niece, Mrs. Jas. Gardiner, left for Toronto on Sunday here, but returned to Beaverton on Tuesday last.

Mr. Gilchrist and Miss Mackenzie, of Toronto, attended the convention at Lindsay.

COBOCONK

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Mr. Wm. Ward, of Jack Lake, spent Sunday in town.

Miss Hall, of Lindsay, is visiting with parents.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. French, wife and two daughters, of Fenelon Falls, were here on Sunday.

Mrs. Hom and Mr. Milton Hom, of Wabigoon, are at Fenelon Falls.

T. H. Graham made a business trip to Lindsay on Thursday last.

W. J. Holliday and son, of Toronto, visited here on Friday, the 24th.

Miss S. E. Shields, of Victoria Road, visited friends here on Sunday.

J. Webber, mining engineer, of Toronto, was in town from Friday until Monday.

F. Doyle made a business trip to Lindsay on Friday and Saturday.

M. J. Hogan was visiting at Victoria Road.

Mr. Jas. Brown and J. G. McFarland attended the holiday celebration at Bobcaygeon on the 24th.

D. C. Kimball, principal of public school, left on Thursday last to attend the school teachers' convention, held by Lindsay, on Monday and Tuesday.

Tim Hovathy, of Fenelon Falls, was here on Sunday.

The holiday passed off quietly in this place. Quite a number of people spent the day at different points. A large number went to Burnt River and Cameron to attend the celebration held at Bobcaygeon. Drove to Kirkfield to attend the opening of the lift lock. The young people mostly went the day on the lakes.

A serious accident occurred at the Golf River lumber Co. mills here on Thursday of last week, when the large engine used for driving the lumber department of those mills, broke down, carrying away some of the shaft broken. It has been necessary for the company to slow down this part of their mill for the week. It is thought they will be running mills and it will be running on Monday, Tuesday.

Capital—Dr. Bowerman will be at this place to-day, again on Wednesday, June 5th.—wi.

(Special to The Post.)

Miss Annie Bruce, of Woodville, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Crozier on the 24th.

Valentia and Lindsay Collegiate teams played a friendly game of ball at Zion on the 24th. The score was in favor of the Valentia boys.

Dr. A. L. Hore, of Acton, spent a few days last week visiting under parental roof.

Don't forget the S. S. anniversary on June 2nd and 3rd. An excellent programme is being prepared. Some eclectic sports on the green in the evening of the 2nd, and a good time again will deliver his popular lecture on "Some Canadian Humorists, Lost battles in life and how to win them."

SOUTH VERULAM.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Seeding is now well advanced in this locality, and the people are unanimously waiting for some good growing weather. He is a very backward farmer who is not ready, and yet the milk supply is away behind other years, and pasture is very short, and there is no grass for anything. It is a matter of wonder to myself an inch of snow on the 27th of May we in the north country. Put that down in the economic.

Quite a number of farmers are in the market for seed potatoes, as advised by the Agricultural Society of late, and they are now getting eyes for all kinds of grain. The Verulam Agricultural Society will not compete for. There will be four prizes given, and additional, it will no doubt prove very interesting.

A good many of our up-to-date farmers are preparing for silage spreaders from the Frost & Wood Co., and they are satisfied they will be giving good satisfaction.

Miss Hattie Davidson, of New York, is home to spend the summer with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Davidson.

HIGHLAND GROVE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Mrs. Hoggs left last week for Toronto, where she intends residing for some time.

Mr. A. Atchenson spent last week in Toronto.

Mrs. Latte and little Miss Bess, visited Mr. Latte's uncle, Mr. W. A. Ward, of Baptiste Lake, last week.

Miss Nellie Barsacks of Baptiste, spent Friday and Sunday last with her friend, Miss Peters.

The mill yard is getting full, we look rather bare now on account of the large amount of lumber that has been shipped out to Orillia, Guelph and other points. Fisher of Orillia, is superintending the shipping of it.

May 24th passed off very quietly here. A number went by train to Bobcaygeon to spend the day, some while others waited on the hand-car and went to the same place, but all report a good time. Among those who went we noticed Messrs Latte and Melmrey, Mrs. McGregor, and Messrs. McIlmrey, Schram, Lewis, Wilson, Thomas, Ayscie, Hogan and Bowen.

KENT-ST. PROPERTY WAS ENDANGERED

By the Burning of a Frame Stable—Animals Cremated

Many Other Wooden Structures Close by, but Good Work and Absence of Wind Kept the Fire Confined Rapidly.

Evening Post of May 29.

A sheet of flame rising many feet in the air, and in a very central location, caused great excitement among our citizens last night at 10.30 o'clock. The fire was in a frame stable located just west of the Mansion hotel yards and stables, and adjacent to the stores on the south side of Kent-st. Three horses and a cow were cremated in the building. The Watchman-Warder Printing Co. are the owners of the stable, and Messrs. F. J. Campbell and Jas. Brown the lessees. The burned animals belonged to the former, and were valued approximately at about $350. The insurance covers $250 of this loss. Mr. Brown was able to save his horse and had lost a set of sleighs, harness, etc.

WHEN FIRST SEEN.

The blaze was first noticed by Mr. W. Belchamber at the P. O. Dong staff. Mr. Kelcher was going down Williams-st., when he was startled by seeing the reflection of flames behind the Mansion house. He instantly aroused Mr. Roger Maunder and then ran to the Fire Hall to have give the alarm. Driver Bell and Jas. Holton, second teamster, had the big horses in the harness in a second time and reached the scene with the hose in about a minute, by so doing the firemen came on the run, foremost among them being Chief Bell and Capt. Ward. The fire had gained great headway before being noticed, and the building being a frame and very dry, burned like tinder and was entirely wrapped in flames before the hose could be stretched. Sparks were flying in every direction and many owners of neighboring buildings felt grave misgivings for their safety.

Hundreds of citizens gathered to witness the fire, and Chief Vipond kept perfect order. With the Mansion house stables almost adjoining, and scarcely any other combustible materials in the yard, the situation was extremely dangerous. But the fighters were helped by citizens, who rendered valuable aid, and the blaze was got under control in less than thirty minutes. Streams were then directed on the surrounding roofs to put out all sparks. The Washington-Wonder office was in serious danger at one time. The roof of the building and sparks rising in the air the large crowd of bystanders, thought the firemen in rubber coats, made the fire a very spectacular one.

The animals were burned to death before the firemen arrived on the scene. The cow had broken loose and had gone to the dger. Harness and other things, the property of Mr. Campbell, were also destroyed. Mr. Brown was extremely lucky in getting his horse out in time.

OTHER ALARMS.

The firemen received word that the Poole residence, on the corner of Russell and York-sts., had caught fire from a spark. The alarm of this was rapidly laid, but the blaze was quenched with a few pails of water. A fireman returned for a ladder, after the fire was out. Nothing smoke issuing from Maunder's stable, he hurried notified Driver Bell. When the latter reached the stable the flames came out from an air vent under the stable. Bell sent for Chief Harry Bell and the latter ordered the hose to be wound. The manger was taken out and water thrown on it. The flames had passed unnoticed disastrous results could have ensued.

NOTES ON THE FIRE.

Chief Bell and his men received high praise from many for the successful efforts they put forth. The Watchman-Warder Co. acknowledge a donation of $5 by Dr. Bowerman, a generous gift, which they appreciate.

The burned building was originally a stable, and was used for that for five a year or so ago. A fire-proof stable, if any, would have excited on the site.

That the adjoining buildings, in their inflammable condition, should be saved, seems a marvellous matter.

The Mansion of Mr. Kent, is insured, and no injury is advanced as to the cause.

For the amazing year resulted in the magnificent work done by Mrs. Proctor, who accepted subject to the following resolution:

"The Question Drawer", opened by Mrs. (Rev.) R. Hall, of Port Hope, Toronto, was very helpful and instructive, some questions being drawn out and discussed, the discussions being brought out along the lines of sympathetic giving. Prayer was offered by Mrs. Hall, and this concluding two sessions of helpful and profitable work, left the delegates the richer in faith and spirit for having attended.

THE EVENING MEETING.

was presided over by Rev. T. Brown, who, after a few opening remarks, called upon Mrs. Gardiner, of Wiseton for her address on "Woman's Work for Woman". She gave a description of the native girls, their degradation and slavery to which they are subject, and of the different heathen countries, and what the Gospel has done and is now doing for them.

Rev. D. B. Clare gave an address on "Missions", its opportunity, its responsibility and its need.

Mr. Millen gave well rendered recitation, and the Oakwood choir furnished the music. This closed a good convention, both spiritually and financially.

PETERBORO AND KIRKFIELD LOCKS.

Former Now Open—Kirkfield Lock Said to Surpass in Beauty and Convenience.

Peterboro lift lock was opened yesterday afternoon, the new Government lock at Kirkfield being the first boat to pass over. The tug was bound for Gamebridge, where it will be used in the construction of the Lake Simcoe end of the canal.

Speaking about lift locks, our readers will be interested in the statement made to The Post by a leading official of the Canal on May 24th. "Kirkfield will be superior to Peterboro," he said, "the lift lock at Kirkfield will surpass the lock at Peterboro, although Peterboro is the lock we feel higher. You see the Peterboro lock was built in the early days of Canada and it was thought necessary at great cost to build it of cement, at a platted structure, and the wonderful mechanism in the Peterboro structure—is open to the gaze of the public, and is not protected by guard rails at all danger points. Kirkfield is so planned that the Kirkfield lock will, when the lock is open, be entirely open be visited by a constant succession of excursion parties from all points on Lake Simcoe and Scugog and the upper Kawartha.

Paste This in Your Hat.

The C.P.R. will make a change in their local time-table, which will affect on Sunday, June 2nd. The change affecting Lindsay are in the time of the afternoon train, which will leave Lindsay at 4.35 instead of 5.20, as at present. This morning train from Toronto will arrive at Lindsay at about 10 o'clock instead of 11.15. This train will arrive ten minutes earlier than at present.—44.

TO THE FARMERS

I have 7,100 Acres of Unimproved Land north of Indian Head, which I am offering for sale at $10 per acre. This is A1 land with some small ponds Of water good enough for domestic purposes, some small timber mostly adapted for fencing and fuel, soil black loam about six or eight inches deep, and in places reaching fourteen inches deep. This land lies in Township 23, Range 12 and 13, west of 2nd Meridian. Most of these two townships are ranked as first class agricultural land according to the report of the Dominion Government surveyors, which I have in my possession. This is an excellent chance for a party of farmers wishing to obtain a block of land with the object of forming a syndicate.

I have also 43 other Parcels of A1 Land in Saskatchewan, comprising of full sections, half sections and quarter sections, some of which is improved and some unimproved, ranging in price from $9 per acre to $30 per acre, according to the location and improvements. All of this I will guarantee A1 farming land.

I have also a Quarter Section, 160 acres, 6 miles from the Town of Reaburn, in Manitoba, within 6 miles of the railroad and elevators, that I will sell for $8 per acre.

Another Half Section, 320 acres, about 12 miles from Moose Jaw and nine miles from Pasqua, on the main line of the C.P.R., A1 farming land $15.50 per acre, $4.50 per acre cash, balance on very easy terms.

I will give the best terms of sale possible to any farmer purchasing any of the above lands. Call and see me when in town and get full particulars.

VICTORIA COUNTY EDUCATIONAL ASS'N.

Annual Meeting of the East and West Victoria Sections at Lindsay—Address by President W. H. Stevens—Interesting Papers.

The annual meeting of the County of Victoria Educational Association opened in the Assembly room of the Collegiate Institute on Monday at 10.30 a.m. The President, Mr. W. H. Stevens, called the meeting to order and asked the secretary to read the minutes of the previous session.

Mr. W. Hickson and Dr. Wilson contributed valuable papers which were handed to the press for publication.

(By Wm. Hickson, Bobcaygeon.)

I do not wish to add anymore to the Public School curriculum, as I think there is enough as it already, but would rather suggest that you as teachers, make use of all the opportunities that may present themselves in your ordinary work of teaching which may have a tendency to make your pupils more polite, loyal kind, generous and pure of speech. For example, in teaching the literature of such lessons as "Snowdrop," "Mother," "Grandpa," "Grandmamma," "What is it to be a gentleman?" in Second Reader, "The Emperor and the Shoe," "Golden Rule" in old Third Reader, every teacher should endeavor to show their pupils what they could be using polite, kind or generous.

It is often remarked that the youth of the present day are not as polite and do not show that respect for superiors which characterized the youth of the preceding generation. "If was not so when I was young", is an expression often on the lips of elderly persons. I have heard it and said that the Canadian people are more lacking in these qualities than the Old World inhabitants. There must be some cause for this. It may be on account of our free self-government which fosters an independent spirit, the opposite of having servility, or it may be from the want of proper training in our homes or in our public schools, or perhaps the whole three are producing our present type of citizen.

While this independent spirit should not be crushed out, but rather encouraged, the youth of our country should be taught true manners, which consist in treating fellow beings as having equal rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

Politeness.—The teacher will find frequent opportunity to give instruction on the duty of being polite to strangers, to teachers and to their companions. School children sometimes permit, or in various ways not impudently towards strangers that may happen to pass the schoolhouse during play hours. The teacher should try to check any such conduct at once and take the opportunity of speaking to them on politeness. Pupils sometimes speak in a disrespectful way to the teacher or to another. The teacher should call the pupils' attention to the points and remind him is at once of his want of politeness. The teacher should always speak and act politely towards pupils whereby he may meet them thus teaching by his example.

Respect.—He who has no respect for himself will have none for others. There is a kind of pride everyone should try to possess. It is that pride which leads us to do unto others, as we would have them do unto us. We should take pride in doing right and thus have respect for ourselves by so conducting ourselves as to give no offence to others. A respect for the rights, property and person of others is but carrying the golden rule, as well as obeying the ten laws of our land. Children should be taught by example and precept that others have rights which they should be bound to respect.

School and other public property is too often the object of wanton destruction or the subject of defacement with knives or pencils. How many schools that have been built for half a dozen years will you find in this county which do not bear some marks of knife or pencils? Not many. Pupils should be taught that the school property is the property of their parents and their neighbors, and they might as well deface their neighbors' fences as the seats of their school-room. It would be well to impress on them what the law of our land is in regard to wanton destruction of a neighbor's property. By doing this you will keep down this spirit of vandalism which seems too common in some districts. The public school is one of the best places to educate the youth of this country for a better respect of all public property.

Kindness. — School children are sometimes cruel to their playmates, especially to those who are younger and weaker than themselves. The teacher should not only see that no one under his charge is imposed upon, but he should take every opportunity that presents itself to inculcate a spirit of kindness, not only towards those who are weak, but also the dumb animals. Show them that God made them and cares for them, and that it will conquer where fear will fail. Reason and kindness are the illustices they may possess over colts, and we can take these two means day after you have heard profane language on the school grounds and talk to the whole school in this manner: "Boys, while I was out on the school grounds to-day I heard a bad use language, which, it seems to me, I ought not like to repeat (I hope I need not ask him to do so now.) Now, I have no doubt but you hear some bad language, which, it seems to me, I would not like to repeat if I were to ask him to do so now. Now, I have no doubt but you hear some bad language, which, it seems to me, I would not like to repeat if I were to ask him to do so now. Now, I have no doubt but you hear some bad language, which, it seems to me, I would not like to repeat if I were to ask him to do so now. Now, I have no doubt but you hear some bad language, which, it seems to me, I would not like to repeat if I were to ask him to do so now." Now, I have learned when you hardly know you are using learning it, and perhaps some of you may think it is not wrong because many men swear. Did you never think that men do wrong as well as boys, and if we would try to do what is right in the weighing will not do to copy after men and do everything they do. Some men steal horses and murder. Do you think it would be right for you to do the same because these men do it? You will find, boys, men swear very likely learned when they were boys like you, and it has become such a habit that it is almost impossible for them to break off it.

Now let me tell you to try and not be a slave of any habit. It is not hard to form habits when you are young, and not very hard to break off bad habits, but half as hard as when you get older. Now, let me ask this boy, and all of you who have ever used bad language, to quit it now. You may forget and say bad words before you think. But you must think, and be on your guard. Now, how many will try to keep from swearing or using bad language? I may not forget, but I am not guilty, as well as those who have. Hold up your hands. I hope as will try to avoid it. Now that you have promised to try I hope you will try, and I do not expect to hear any bad language among the school or the school yard.

The kind of moral argument with your pupils will be much more effect than any kind of punishment could have. We as teachers often think that the educational side of the question is the only thing of importance to look after in our pupils, but I tell you the moral side is equally, if not more, of the educational.

A self-government prevails to a great extent in plus Canada of early, so let it prevail in the same way in the family and the school. If properly taught in the Public schools it will be easily taught in the State, and we need not fear the downfall of this fair Canada of ours, so long as the principles on which it is based has been well taught in our homes and schools. If it is highminded men we wish to constitute our State, then it is the teacher's duty to take care that all of the boys under his control and thus be the greatest benefactor of his race. Ruskin once told his countrymen to set their minds on what is dying for Englishmen. Let us set our minds on multiplying true Canadians.

In concluding this paper, let me say that I have been more than encouraged up with high hopes of living to be live men and women, patriots, dear to God and famous to all ages.

(By Dr. Wilson, Fenelon Falls.)

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen, I am sorry that my subject was assigned me has been one for very serious thought and discussion by the teaching profession as well as the laity for many years. It has been occasionally treated in the press and many have been the excuses, both for and against. Some would do all the work in the school rooms and allow the pupils to have plenty of fresh air, exercise and fun between 4 p.m. and 9 a.m., while others—chiefly the teachers—would give all the home work that the pupil could accomplish during these hours. I believe there is a happy medium in this as in most other questions.

The amount of home work and the kind of it, should be meted out according to the age of the pupils, the physical development and mental powers of the child. I would not burden any pupil, old or young, but would advise care against giving much home work until the pupil reaches the 4th or 5th form, when the lines in it were, may be drawn a little lighter.

In the II Form very little home work should be sufficient, such as writing a few words out of the lesson, or doing a simple sum in addition, or the memorizing of a short verse for ordinary young pupils in that form. But if a pupil of average ability, especially and poor only 10 or 11 years of age, had only reached Form II, he should be given about three times as much home work as the young child generally found in Form II, and yet he may make up for lost time. He has the physical development required to withstand the work, and owing to his maturity he would need the extra work to place him the sooner in the class of his age and ability.

In Form III I would increase the amount of home work, following along about the same line, only we may perhaps one or two subjects added, making about two hours for the pupil of average ability in at most three subjects. In this form I would advise that not more than three subjects be given for the average evening's home work.

In Form IV I would pursue the same lines, making the amount a little greater by increasing the subjects given, but bearing certain that the average pupil—average mentally and physically—can finish the daily lessons complete the task in at most two hours and an average work in form I would like to here warn the teacher that he should not be too much. What I place the extreme length of study at is four hours 30 minutes! I think that generally speaking a half hour well used would be sufficient for right time. Pupils in this form are of an age when there should be great care exercised in the amount of home study, as the child is probably developing into manhood or womanhood, and it is at this time that the foundation of future work is laid. It is a necessity owing to the great number of studies placed upon the school program. There are so many studies that the time allotted to each upon a weekly program is so short that the work must be done in the home in order to cover the ground in a reasonable time. Home work has a useful purpose in placing a certain responsibility upon the pupil, and thereby the better prepares him for life. Only the active, healthy children possess a great shrinking from work, and they would, in order to grow and develop mentally and physically, not shrink, but by their will, and if not directed by a wise parent they are as liable to be guided in a wrong path in a right direction. Children of parents who do not take home work if given to them, but if they had no home work at all they would feel something—anything they could get hold of. Here the teacher with his home work steps in and gives them a judicious amount of home work, and thus, to a certain extent, directs their minds in right channels. A teacher in this position does a great deal of good—in fact more than is ever thought of by the average taxpayer. I think I have said enough.

LINDSAY

AN ADVT. IN THE POST PAYS.

THE FIELD OF SPORT

What is Occurring in the Town and District, and Sporting Circles Generally.

BASEBALL

LINDSAY 2, TORONTO 1.

Evening Post of May 25th.

It was City League against Town League; Sellers-Gough, champions of the Manufacturers' League, Toronto, against the Wideawakes, champions of Lindsay Town Baseball League, and the townies won out.

Dick Butler's redoubtable band were in full war regalia, and put the Indian sign on the furriers. The latter put up a hard fight, however, before they were driven to the tall, leafy timbers. The ambitious city boys know a thing or two about Father Chadwick's pastime and Capt. Cinnamon Bill had to keep his men working overtime to rivet the game. He labored hard himself and by voice and gestures encouraged his following. "And did they play the game! Don't be manely foolish—everything that could be seen with field glasses was gone after, and "Weary" House sprinted nearly to the fence after a foul fly. The catch was a feature in itself. "I just had to do it" said Willie." The Sellers-Gough fielding was guilt-edged also, and many a chance was spoiled by their snappy playing.

The Pitchers.

Bill Cinnamon took the honors at the rubber, although Lackey ran him close. All the experience of Bill's long and varied career was used by that wily individual and time and time again he pulled the team out of the rut. Nine men were struck out by him, and he held the enemy down to five hits. One, two three was the way Willy fanned them in the sixth. The feature of the twirling was the striking out of Currie with three men on basis. As the last ball was pitched Smith, the lank shortstop, tried to steal the plate, but Currie hit the thin air and the side was out. Lackey pitched clever ball, but his downfall came in the fourth, when Nesbitt Soanes and Hopkins lit on him hard scoring two runs. He recovered after that and held the locals down to six hits. Nine Wideawakes bit the dust before his slants and twisters.

FEATURES OF THE GAME.

Neither side could effect a tally till the fourth, when Smith's two-bagger and a couple of errors gave the Toronto boys one. Nesbitt, first up for the Wideawakes, hit to left, which he stretched to second bag. Getting third on an out he scored on Soanes' double, Hopkins bringing in Soanes on another drive for two bags. The three hits in a line got the game. No more scoring was done throughout, fast fielding cutting off all chances. In the eighth Williams and Cinnamon attempted a double steal, but Williams was nipped at the plate.

For the losers, Currie, Smith and Wagner were the shining lights. They fielded and hit like blue streaks. Smith played shortshop and is an awful jollier, going even so far as to taunt Bill Cinnamon. The outfielders invariably accepted every chance but could not make much of Cinnamon's delivery.

The Wideawakes' infield is fast, Menzies at short going after everything, Bill House and Ryan keeping company. The latter is a little nervous as yet, but will steady down. "Hello" Soanes is the same old standby on the initial bag, and ripped off two doubles at bat. The fielders were the heavy hitters, each getting one. 'Longboat' Hopkins, at right field, took in a couple of sky scrapers. He throws nicely, too.

Over 300 spectators witnessed the game and were more than satisfied. "The best in years," was an oft-repeated opinion. The conduct of the players was gentlemanly and little 'kicking' was indulged in. The closeness of the score and the exciting incidents happening at every stage of the match, kept the interest at the highest pitch. Dicky Butler made an impartial referee.

Summary, Struck out—by Cinnamon 9, by Lackey 9. First on balls—off Cinnamon 1, off Lackey 2. Wild pitches—Lackey 2. Hit by pitcher—by Cinnamon 1. Two-base hits — Soanes 2, Hopkins, Nesbitt.

SYLVESTERS WON.

The Sylvester nine journeyed to Blackstock Victoria Day and played Blackstock. The game was a burlesque, the local nine having it all their own way. The score ended, as nearly as the bewildered score keeper could count, 30-9. The Bowmanville and Orono teams failed to show up, and the Sylvester nine secured the tournament prize.

BEATEN AT ZION.

A local nine tried conclusions with Valentia at Zion on Friday and were trimmed 13-8. They scored 5 runs in the first and then faded away, their opponents gradually forging ahead. The boys report splendid treatment and a jolly good time. The following composed the Lindsay team; O'Neill, Thompson, J. Cain, O'Keefe, Moynes, McDonald, Sadler and Hart.

Orientals 4, Sylvesters 3.

Inability to hit when hits meant runs, bad throwing to bases, and a streak of downright hard luck, lost the game for the Sylvesters on Thursday evening. The Oddfellows' "rank outsiders" won by a nose. Whew! but it was exciting. With one out, Suggitt on second and O'Neill on first, the fans could hardly breathe. But the moment came — a dandy double steal was worked. O'Neil' drew the throw to second, and Suggitt scored the winning run. My, but didn't those Oriental rooters —au!, the most of them seemed to be for that team—stand up on their toes and squeal!

Suggitt, however, sprang the surprise of the evening. Everybody thought he couldn't pitch ball, but he jumped into the box and cruelly deceived nearly a dozen of the Sylvester batters. His collection of twists and slants had the Iron Men guessing all the time. He is fast on the bases also. "Artie" Parkin is a downright thief — four bases were purloined by the egg man. As a right fielder, however, he proved a failure. "Biddy" Burgess is a gingery little player, and took every chance in central garden. "Danny" Sinclair created a sensation by making a splendid catch of a high foul after a run through the crowd. The double steal by Suggitt and O'Neill, and the throw to second to catch O'Neill, by which Suggitt scored, won the game. Herb Workman lined out a nice three-bagger, but otherwise his work was poor.

VICTORS 20, Y. M. C. A. 2

The above score tells the whole tale, and a long, weary, monotonous tale it was. The Y. M. C. A. were all to the bad, and are not within reach of the class the Victors are in. They fell victims to "Curly" Elliott's shoots and curves, and could not hit him out of the infield. The Victors' fielders gobbled up everything that came within reach, and are a far superior bunch of players. They are good at bat, and every man of them knows how to play his position. They play like veterans, and the team that beats them will have to travel lively.

MAYBEES 8, QUAKERS 4

That the Town Junior League is popular was demonstrated Wed. evening, when a crowd gathered to see the Maybees pull out ahead of the Quakers by the score, 8-4. The game was not of the electrifying type and loose play was indulged in at times that made the game anything but exciting. "Dooley" Starr, on the mound for the Maybees, allowed a number of passes. He was there with the goods, however, when his team were in a pinch. The unlucky Quakers were up the worm wood tree all the time. "Jimmy" Sharpe's troubles began in the first when he let in three runs. He steadied down after that and pitched better ball than Starr. Inability to hit when hits meant runs, proved the Quakers' downfall and errors galore helped the Maybees.

The latter are a husky aggregation and are bound to cut a figure in the league. Profiting by their lead of three runs in the first the Maybees held the game well in hand. The Quakers made desperate efforts to even up, but the goddess of victory looked the other way. Sutcliffe was the man with the ash for the winners, and three hits are credited to him, one of which was a two-bagger. Only one lonely hit was allowed by Starr, and 'Bunty' Connell was the 'striker'. It was a dandy doubUle. Bill Gray held down a nice second for the winners, while 'Bill' Workman ripped off a couple of lighting plays for "Dave" Mullen's boys. The winners led it on the Quakers in fast fielding. Both teams, however, can stand a lot of practice.

THE L.C.I. TEAM

A time was when the "little red schoolhouse on the hill" had a baseball team that could rank with any in town. "Fussy" McHugh, "Bill" McKenzie, "Tony" Duck, "Andy" McFadyen, "Mose" Silver, George McNiellie, "Del" Williams, "Goose" Cameron, McPherson and others composed the team that gave the Clippers a run for the honors a few years ago. The best the town team could do was to pull out a tie.

The students this year have a hustling bunch, and spend an hourr or so practising every evening. They are open for challenges from town or country teams. Following are a few of their players: O'Neill, Gray, McCrae, McFadyen, Spence, Spratt, Hopkins, McCulloch, Lapp and others.

MIDLAND LEAGUE BALL

With Downs and McKinnon as a battery, Cobourg trimmed Oshawa in the Carriage Town 3-1. The game was a fast exhibition. Hawkins and did the battery work for Oshawa.

THE PRESENT STANDING

The standing of the four teams in the T. B. L. is as follows;

	Won	L'st	To Play
Orientals	1	0	2
Sylvesters	1	1	1
C. L. S.	0	1	2
Wideawakes	0	0	3

OH! MAY IT BE SOON.

A despatch states that a profound meteorologist has said that before long it will be quite possible to prognosticate the weather one year in advance. When that time comes a baseball schedule can be arranged with all the rainy and snowy days cut out.

LIFE'S BRIGHT SIDE

A feeling that thrills through your blood with a pleasant, exhilarating effect, and makes you positively want to shout for sheer joy. That's what it is to be a fan, and see your favorites pull out a victory. You feel good all over, and think that after all the world isn't such a bad old place. Many who take no interest in basebll regard a display of enthusiasm by a rooter as "baseball craziness." No such thing—the fellow is enjoying himself, and there is so little real pleasure floating around this old globe that a snatch is really refreshing. Baseball is a game that will incite enthusiasm to the highest pitch and draw out the life, if he has any, in anybody. Come and root for the Wideawakes on Victoria Day. You will say you enjoyed yourself. General admission 25c., children 10c.

"SHORTY" IN THE CROWD

Went to see the game,
Arrived a little late,
Managed to get standing room
Just inside the gate.

"All the bases filled,
"Pitcher's up a tree,
"Watch our Jimmy bring 'em in."
Fellow said to me.

And there was me—
Trying for a peep
From behind a human wall
Six or seven deep.

Knew it was a hit,
Heard the mighty roar,
But couldn't see a cussed thing,
Gee! but I was sore.

FOR THE FANS

Matthewson had up till May 11th landed five straights, and is still going.

Manager C. P. R. Anderson is home again, and will materially strengthen the Orientals.

"Not a player suspended in the National League this year," said President Pulliam the other day.

When it comes to an equal division of playing strength the New England League teams are the real jingle.

"Cy" Young has been pitching ball for seventeen years. He is one whom "age does not wither nor custom stale."

Fred Sadler got his first trial in fast company in the game at Zion, having one nice single and a stolen base to his credit.

The Nashville team has been a great surprise in the Southern League. So far the "Boosters" have Showed up very strong.

You can see the score of the Toronto Eastern League team the same day that the game is played. Call at Jos. Carroll's tobacco store in the evening.

There were two games in the Midland League Victoria Day, Bowmanville beating Port Hope by 9 to 8, and Cobourg taking a game from Oshawa by 7 to 3.

Frank Pfeffer, of the Boston Nationals, holds the honor of having pitched the first no-hit game of the season. Cincinnati was the victim.

"The ball player who when he has a hard luck batting streak on changes his style, is apt to put himself out of it," says Joe Kelley. Kelley cites Willie Keeler as an example.

John McGraw tried his hand at the pitching game the other day. He pitched for "Kid" Casey's Metropolitans against his own Giants, and was hit hard. Score, Giants 13, Metropolitans 11.

Chicago's defeat of the Giants on Tuesday put a crimp in McGraw's effort to break the world's major league record of twenty consecutive victories. New York had won seventeen straight.

The Park Nine, of Toronto, were beaten at Barrie on Victoria Day 14-8. The Barrie team were beaten on their own diamond last season by a Lindsay team, with Cinnamon in the box.

At the present time it looks as though the Nwe York Americans will have to rely on hitting to win the pennant. Their pitchers are not able to fool the other fellows.

Wouldn't it be nice to see Peterboro and Lindsay adversaries on the diamond once again? The Sylvesters, Wideawakes or Orientals would make worthy opponents for a Electric City team.

George Rohe is responsible for a new slang term in baseball invented by the famous Charlie Dryden. In a recent review the humoris says; "George Rohe scored the first 'navy yard home run' when Morgan whiffed him in the second."

Third baseman Sentelle, of Jersey City, is a valuable acquisition to Joe Bean's bunch. Sentelle was released from the Philadelphia National League Club. Wally, Clement, Jacko Halligan, Joe Bean, Merritt, Wally Woods, Fanmiller, Gene McCannn, Billy Foxen and Frank McNanus all wore Jersey City uniforms when the Skeeters won the pennant in '03. They are still with Jersey.

The sausage maker ought to make a good golf player, as he should have had plenty of experience on the links.

George—What do you like best about baseball?

Grace—I don't know, George — unless it's—the—squeeze play!

They won't allow baseball games in Ottawa on Sunday, so the fans go to Hull. Some good folks fear that at the latter end the second letter of the last named place may be different.

It is whispered in local baseball circles that the Briggs who is holding down first base for Port Hope is the individual who pitched for the Sylvester nine for two games last year. If such is the case, they must be playing a ragtime game in the Ontario town.

A funny incident occurred at Cannington Victoria Day, where the Mimico Stars played. The brass band of the town were at the station to welcome this team, but they had been left at Toronto, so the Maitlands got after the band until they continued their journey, fooling a number of Cannington sports, who thought they were their guests.

SCALY ERUPTIONS COVERED HIS BODY

Itched Constantly—Scratched Until Blood Flowed—Suffered 10 Years—Doctors and Medicines Were Fruitless—Tries Cuticura and Is Completely Cured

BY THREE BOXES OF CUTICURA OINTMENT

"When I was about nine years old small sores appeared on each of my lower limbs. I scratched them with a brass pin and shortly afterwards both of those limbs became so sore that I could scarcely walk. When I had been suffering for about a month the sores began to heal, but small scaly eruptions appeared where the sores had been. From that time onward I was troubled by such severe itching that, until I became accustomed to it, I would scratch the sores until the blood began to flow. This would stop the itching for a few days; but scaly places would appear again and the itching would accompany them. After I suffered about ten years I made a renewed effort to effect a cure. The eruptions by this time had appeared on every part of my body except my face and hands. The best doctor in my native county advised me to use arsenic in small doses and a salve. I then used to bathe the sores in a mixture which gave almost intolerable pain. In addition I used other remedies, such as iodine, sulphur, zinc salve, ———'s Salve, ——— Ointment, and in fact I was continually giving some remedy a fair trial, never using less than one or two boxes or bottles. All this was fruitless. Finally my hair began to fall out and I was rapidly becoming bald. I used ———'s ———, but it did no good. A few months after, having used almost everything else, I thought I would try Cuticura Ointment, having previously used Cuticura Soap and being pleased with it. After using three boxes I was completely cured, and my hair was restored, after fourteen years of suffering and an expenditure of at least $50 to $60 in vainly endeavoring to find a cure. I shall be glad to write to any one who may be interested in my cure. B. Hiram Mattingly, Vermillion, S. Dak., Aug. 18, 1906."

THREE FACTS

For Sick Women To Consider.

FIRST.—That almost every operation in our hospitals performed upon women becomes necessary through neglect of such symptoms as backache, irregular and painful periods, displacements of the female organs, pain in the side, burning sensation in the stomach, bearing-down pains, nervousness, dizziness and sleeplessness.

SECOND.—The medicine that holds the record for the largest number of absolute cures of female ills is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It regulates, strengthens and cures diseases of the female organism as nothing else can.

For thirty years it has been helping women to be strong, curing backache, nervousness, kidney troubles, inflammation of the female organs, weakness and displacements, regulating the periods perfectly and overcoming their pains. It has also proved itself invaluable in preparing for childbirth and the change of life.

THIRD.—The great volume of unsolicited and grateful testimonials on file at the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., many of which are from time to time published by permission, give absolute evidence of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Mrs. Pinkham's advice.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women.—Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women only. From symptoms given, your trouble may be located and the quickest and surest way of recovery advised.—Mrs. Pinkham is daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham and for twenty-five years under her direction and since her decease she has been advising sick women free of charge. Out of the vast volume of experience in treating female ills Mrs. Pinkham probably has the very knowledge that will help your case. Surely, any woman, rich or poor, is very foolish if she does not take advantage of this generous offer of assistance.

RUNNING

Tom Longboat has made application for membership in the Irish Canadian Athletic Club, of Toronto.

"The Irish Canadians do not want Longboat," said Secretary Flanagan. "He is a Y.M.C.A. mna and there he should stay. The Y.M.C.A. is the best place for him. We could not handle him as well as they can. He is a hard man to handle, and we could not give him the attention he requires. I told him plainly that we would have nothing to do with him."

The Indian, Ben Howard, of Hiawatha, won the five-mile race in Peterboro on Victoria Day, in east style. 29 minutes, 16 seconds was his time.

LACROSSE.

THE CANUCK'S COLORS.

The Canadian lacrosse team, who are to tour Australia, will be uniformed in the royal purple and white. J. C. Miller, of Orillia, who is in charge of the trip, purchased the uniforms yesterday. The knickers will be white, with purple stripes, white shoes and purple-bodied jerseys with white yoke and other trimmings, and bearing across the breast the word "Canada" in white. The itinerary, which has been completed, starts the trip on June 4 and carries it through to Nov. 4, when they return to Toronto. This allows them three weeks in England.

Single-fare excursions to Orillia, good June 1 to June 4, have been arranged to enable enthusiasts to see the Australian team play Beaverton before their departure.

Geo. Carruth will tend goal for Beaverton. Reilly may also be seen on the Checker's line-up.

The New York Crescent Athletic Club defeated the Toronto University team in a game of lacrosse in New York. Score 5-6.

TROTTING.

PURCHASED A COMER.

The veteran Lindsay horseman, Mr. George Curtis, purchased a Keswick filly from Mr. Leith Laidley, of Omemee, yesterday, that has all the marks of a very fast pacer. The animal is a full sister to the speedy Minnie Keswick. It is a beautiful chestnut color, with clean limbs and a handsome body. As yet it is not fully developed, being only 21 months old, but is a born pacer, and Mr. Curtis expects it to be superior in speed to any race horse he has yet handled. The training of the colt will commence at once and the sporting fraternity of Lindsay will be pleased to know that Mr. Curtis will have a winner at the fall fairs.

WRESTLING.

GOTCH IS CHAMPION

Frank Gotch's famous toe hold proved fatal to Beel's championship aspirations in the match for the title and a $2,500 purse at Montreal last week.

Beel certainly put up a splendid struggle and it is doubtful, had the toe hold been barred, whether Gotch could have defeated him, but the Iowa farmer managed to get his opponent's foot in the right position and twist it up in his playful way it was impossible for Beel to work out, and he could do nothing but lose the fall.

Gotch obtained the first fall in 37 minutes and the second in 23 minutes.

GENERAL SPORTING NOTES.

PUGILISTIC FAKERS

Jack O'Brien, erstwhile Beau Brummel of the prize ring, is the latest sinner to join the ranks of the reformed by a complete acknowledgment of his guilt. Over his signature in a San Francisco paper O'Brien admits that practically every contest in which he engaged in recent years was a fake. Even Bob Fitzsimmons, the grand old man of the ring, is not exempt from his ugly charges.

The Burns-O'Brien fiasco is minutely examined from the inside. Burns and McCary are made to shoulder the burden of the blame. It is admitted that the six-round battle with Berger in Philadelphia was a frame-up, arranged with a view to another meeting on the coast. O'Brien's fights with Hugo Keily, Joe Walcott and Young Peter Jackson are all branded as fakes.

PALE AS A CORPSE.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Brought Back the Ruddy Glow of Health.

Thousands of young growing girls have a pale, pasty complexion; distressing headaches, backaches and sideaches. Sometimes they are unable to sleep; their nerves are unstrung, they are languid; breathless and the heart palpitates violently at the least exertion—that's anaemia—and it may develop into consumption unless promptly attended to. Anaemia means bloodlessness. Dr Williams' Pink Pills make pure, red blood—that's the secret of their success. Miss Winnie Allen, Montreal, Que., says; "I was so weak and run down that my friends thought I was going into consumption. I was as pale as a corpse, had no appetite and did not sleep well. The least exertion tired me out, and if I walked a few blocks I was almost breathless. My sister advised me to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and after using them for a few weeks I am again enjoying good health and have a good color. I think every weak, sickly girl should take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new, rich blood and in this way strike right at the root of such troubles as anaemia, indigestion, rheumatism, St. Vitus' dance, the secret ills of girlhood and womanhood and a host of other every day troubles and cure them. But you must get the genuine with the full name, Dr. Williams Pink Pills for Pale People" on the wrapper around every box — imitations never cured anyone and sometimes they do much harm. If your dealer does not keep the genuine Pills they will be sent at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SATURDAY'S STURGEON PT. BLAZE

The Persistent Work of Forty Persons Saved the Cottages.

The fire at Sturgeon Point on Saturday, which caused our citizens so much anxiety, fortunately resulted in no more serious damage than burning the underbrush off about 300 feet of woodland west of Mr. Knowlson's house, but had it not been for the forethought of the young lad, who discovered it, in promptly giving the alarm to almost everyone on the Point, Lindsay's fine summer resort might have been a thing of the past.

The fire evidently originated from some smoker's discarded match, as there had been no fires, and was first noticed on the road at Mr. Knowlson's corner. The wind was blowing almost a gale from the east, and the fire soon reached the woods. The alarm brought the crews of the Steamer Empress and Kathleen, Mr. Flavelle's carpenters, and workmen, and every person on the Point, until the lighting forces numbered about 40. They fought the fire inch by inch until they had it subdued. Messrs. Dickson and Graham rendered valuable service in drawing water, and all are deserving of praise for the good work accomplished.

Selling Liquor Illegal.

For selling liquor to a man against whom notices have been posted forbidding the sale of liquor, a west end hotelkeeper was fined $10 and costs in police court Tuesday. The liquor was sold last Saturday evening, and License Inspector Thornbury laid the information. Owing to the case being a first offence we refrain from publishing the hotelkeeper's name. The buyer of the liquor will appear before the magistrate at a later date.

COURT OF REVISION DOINGS

SEVERAL APPEALS HELD OVER FOR FURTHER CONSIDERATION.

Very Few Reductions Ordered, Arguing a Careful Assessment.

The Court of Revision met in the Council chamber last Monday at 7.30 o'clock, all the members present, Mayor Vrooman in the chair.

The appeals against the assessment of 1907, and other matters referred to the Court were disposed of as follows:

James Carney, assessed too high.—Confirmed.

Baker & Bryans, assessed too high. Adjourned; referred to Solicitor for his opinion as to the assessment of boilers, engines and motive power.

Thos. Laird, assessed too high. — John Baker is to be assessed for the property.

John Simpson, assessed too high.—Business tax of $350 struck off.

S. Henderson, Tower Oil Clothing Co., assessed too high.—Adjourned.

J. J. Teevin, not liable for business tax.—Confirmed.

J. McMichael, G.N.W. Telegraph Co., claimed exemption.—Confirmed.

J. P. Donald, R. M. Beal Co., claimed exemption.—Business tax of $6,300 struck off.

Moved by Reeve Begg, seconded by Ald. Rea, that Mr. J. B. Marion be exempted from a business assessment of $400.—Carried.

Mrs. K. Soanes was granted remission of taxes.

Mrs. B. Walsh was refused remission of taxes.

Railway Notes

—An average of twelve or thirteen double-header trains pass through Lindsay every Sunday between 1 a. m. and 12 p.m. One-half of these are loaded trains going east with grain and lumber, the others being trains of empties going north.

—As a result of the strike of Montreal-dock laborers a couple of weeks ago, the railway sidings in Port Hope, Belleville and Little York (Toronto) yards became congested with held-up freight. At Port Hope there were nineteen miles of cars for some day, nearly all loaded.

—Fenelon Falls Gazette; It is expected that the night train from Lindsay, which proved such a convenience to the travelling public, will commence running again on June 17th. As far as known at present, the service will be the same as last summer.

—The C. P. R. have decided to add a new fast train to their transcontinental service, making three instead of two trains on Monday, Wednesday and Friday. The new train will be faster by twelve hours than either of the Imperial trains that now leave Montreal morning and evening for the west. It will cover the distance from Montreal to Winnipeg in eighty-five hours.

LINDSAY, FRIDAY, MAY 31st, '07

BETTER TELEPHONE CONNECTION.

Evening Post of May 23.

A meeting of the Council of the Board of Trade, we are informed, was held last evening, with Mr. J. O'Reilly in the chair. The principal matter up for discussion was the poor Telephone connection that Lindsay has with outside county points. This was set forth in a letter from Col. Sam Hughes, showing the disadvantages under which Lindsay labored in its present connections. Few of our largest users — Messrs. Sparling and Clemes—were present, and corroborated the Colonel's statement. It seems, for instance, that in order to make connection with Coboconk we have to away round by Uxbridge, and other points are similarly connected. The disadvantage to Lindsay is the loss of time and consequent delays in waiting for connections, the whole thing being very trying to the temper of a busy man.

Mr. Tilley, the Company's local manager, who was present, stated that the Bell people were going to build direct to these points, and were only waiting for funds to go on with the work. Messrs. Sparling, Clemes and Williams were appointed a committee to confer with the telephone people and see if something could not be done at once.

PUT UP OR SHUT UP.

Evening Post of May 25th.

We notice that in a weak effusion which by courtesy we must call a reply to our editorial of last week, the editor of the Watchman-Warder gives evidence of having been touched—to the very quick, we fancy — by our reference to the apparent dual authorship of his opening tissue of complaints. For a newcomer he proposed to know too much. This week the editor concludes his jumble of sentences as follows:

"The editor feels quite competent to write his own copy, and is willing to return The Post's wages if that the staff of The Watchman-Warder are able to do their own writing."

"And we'll make it a barrel of flour for the hospital if the editor of The Post can say the same about the rapidly hooded, "fingered with fault-finding."

Well, The Post has always been a modest organ, not in any way addicted to blowing its own horn, but the temptation to aid the culinary department of the Ross Hospital conquers our modesty for the time. We must have the barrel of flour. Will the editor of The Watchman-Warder name the judges to whom we may submit evidence in any form he may desire? Put up or shut up.

Note.—Just as we expected — the Watchman-Warder has "funked". For particulars, see this week's issue of that paper. Well, he saves the price of a barrel of Rose Brand, for the hospital, but if the contents were poured over him and well rubbed in it would fail to hide the marks his squirming and wriggling tactics have left on him.—Ed. Post.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Ottawa Free Press; Winnipeg has had its "flag incident". What a pity an absolute divorce could not be decreed between flags and fools!

Westmoreland Liberals unqualifiedly endorsed Hon. Mr. Emmerson at their county convention, and approved of his course as a Minister and member.

Hon. Mr. Oliver has been one of the most abused of the Cabinet, but his pluck on his way regardless of the efforts of his detractors. And now he is winning even their respect. The Toronto News' Ottawa representative wired it the other day:

Am a severe critic of Mr. Frank Oliver in the past, your correspondent is bound to note that he is growing on the House. A conviction of the honesty of his intentions is gaining ground, and that counts for much.

And Mr. Oliver's honesty of intention is backed by a large fund of common sense and a good practical grasp of affairs. He will hold his own in public opinion.

The GREAT JUNE SALE IS READY

A Stock Reducing Wonderful Phenomenal Saving Time.

We prepared most enthusiastically for spring—far too enthusiastically. We purchased the right and wanted goods—but too abundantly.

We say--better have too many goods than too few even though the surplus must be closed out at profitless prices. So we always buy a little more than we think we will need--and dispose of that "little" during June in a trade-stimulating sale.

But this time that "little surplus" happened to be a big surplus. Spring was backward in coming forward and we have lots of new Spring Goods on hand now. But they will go now--prices drop lower proportionately--giving this sale an importance unprecedented value to every woman in this vicinity.

We are not bemoaning these conditions. Our Spring business has been as good or better than what other stores have enjoyed and we appreciate the loyalty and patrons of our friends. Willing and cheerfully do we cut prices. Proudly do we point to a price list which contains the rarest of money-saving opportunities.

Read it over carefully and thoughtfully. Doesn't it tell of rare economies in fabrics and garments and little things you need during the spring and summer? If it does--waste no time in getting here to make up for in regrets.

THE BANK OF MONTREAL

Net Profits of Past Six Months $142,295.24 Over Same Period last Year.

The business of the Bank of Montreal for the past half year, as indicated by the bank's statement issued on Tuesday last, must have been most gratifying to the shareholders as well as the public, the net profits during the above period amounting to $982,858.14 as compared with $840,562.90 for the corresponding period last year, an increase of $142,295.24. After paying the usual dividend in two quarterly instalments of 2 1-2 per cent each, or 10 per cent per annum, the management is enabled to carry forward to credit of profit and loss account $422,689.98. The bank's deposits have been augmented by $20,235,148 as compared with last year, which now amount to $130,281,230.

Current loans and discounts in Canada and elsewhere amounted to $104,522,384, being an increase of $12,193,416 as compared with that of a year ago due to the expansion in general trade. This old safeguard of Canadian finance has increased its cash reserves consisting of gold and silver coin and Government demand notes, over those of a year ago by $590,755, making its total reserves in cash on hand and other assets realizable at short notice, over $67,000,000. This added to the Rest account of $11,000,000, makes a pretty strong showing, to meet any contingencies, big or small, that might arise either on its own account, or that of others.

OBITUARY.

Samuel Reazin, Lindsay.

The subject of this brief sketch, who passed to his reward on Friday, May 24th, was born near Port Hope, in Pickering, March 25th, 1829, and spent his boyhood days there. On October 8th, 1855, he married Miss Eliza Mills, the daughter of a leading resident of the township, and some years later he with his young wife removed to a farm in Fenelon township, where they spent over twenty years. Being of a sociable disposition and judgment Mr. Reazin quickly won the confidence and esteem of the people of the township, with the result that he was elected reeve for eight or ten years, and also served as deputy-reeve for years. Finally Mr. Reazin rented big farm and moved with his family to Mariposa, where he secured a fine position as foreman of the Gas Works. Here he soon firmly established, for twenty years he faithfully fulfilled duties with unfailing regularity and fidelity, when he was laid up for three years ago by an injury, from which he never fully recovered. About a year ago he lost his wife, and his death, which necessitated his confinement to his home, was the same slowly but surely.

The deceased was a widow and family of five children, to mourn the loss of a kind and affectionate husband and father. The sons are Thomas in Mariposa, Samuel in Toronto, Joseph, home; the daughters are Mrs. Mahon Weddon, of Toronto, and Stinson in Mariposa. Mrs. Reazin is the other daughter, predeceased her father, leaving a family of three, Thomas, in Stayner, and W. J. in Toronto, and Mrs. Ed. Gaskin, of Lindsay. S. I. West Victoria, was also a brother in law of the deceased, a sister resides in Pickering.

Mr. Reazin was very highly esteemed by the large number of citizens who enjoyed his acquaintance and they will join with Pickering, Fenelon and Mariposa friends in extending sincerest of hearty sympathy for the sorely bereaved family. The funeral, which was very numerous under Masonic auspices and Oddfellows, was attended. Interment took place at Riverdale.

OPS TOWNSHIP LEGISLATORS

MANY ROAD MATTERS WERE UP FOR CONSIDERATION.

The Sum of $1690 Appropriated for Five Road Divisions

A regular meeting of Ops Council was held on May 27th, with all the members present. After the minutes of last meeting were read, the resolution relating to statute labor commutation was rescinded and the minutes were then adopted on motion of Messrs. O'Loughlin and Wilson.

COMMUNICATIONS

A letter from the secretary of the Board of Railway Commissioners in reference to the crossing on 2nd con. road at lot 22.

A letter from Mr. R. J. McLaughlin, in reference to the drainage over Hornetts corner, now in the hands of the township engineer.

An account from Mr. John Carew for lumber supplied for swing bridge at Omemee.

Mr. Geo. Bryans, east ward, Lindsay, called the attention of Council to a broken down culvert on the boundary concession road east of Ops, upon which cause it was stated to flow over his land. About 300 5-inch tile should be put in to carry the water off. He had spoken to Mr. Rea, Town Commissioner, about it and he thought 6 inch tile would be large enough, and would also be more economical. The Council assured Mr. Bryans that if and the work needed they would pay the extra cost, provided that those directly benefited would share the work, and Mr. Wilson said he would see the Ops ratepayers concerned.

Mr. Thos. Downey, of Reaboro, said some of the sidewalks there are needed in need of repair, and requested that the Commissioners and pathmasters would attend to them. Mr. John Weldon said that the road from between the 3rd and 4th quarter lines, was badly cut up owing to the traffic on it, while the swing bridge was closed. He said that a no gravel for it.....The Council instructed the clerk that gravel would be taken from Mr. Weldon's pit, lately purchased.

WANT ASSISTANCE

Mr. Joseph Davies, owner of E. half lot 10, con. 3, addressed the Council on the necessity of drainage from his locality into Mr. Guiry's creek. Messrs. John J. Hogue, Wm. McDowell, Jos. Robertson, Thos. Simons and Geo. Davies, of Maple Grove, also thought that if each paid a fair share of the cost the work could be easily done, and the services of an engineer dispensed with. The Council estimated the cost at: from $300 to $400, of which he was willing to pay $125. Mr. Hogue said he would pay $100 provided the Council gave him outlets at the east and west ends of his farm across the 3rd quarter line. Mr. Davies said the others had not yet said how much they would pay. The Council would benefit both the concession road and the Guiry creek. He had agreed to find what assistance the Council would give. Mr. Robertson approved of the proposal, and agreed to assist in the work, if possible. Carried.

Mr. Geo. Hall complained of the state of the boundary between Ops and Emily, at lot 12, being thrown up and repeatedly filled in, in one place. As he lives in Emily, the Council advised him to see the Emily Council and the Clerk was instructed to write to the alleged offenders.

Mr. Geo. Hall said it was time to ask Mr. Thos. Robinson, pathmaster of Ward 3, Lindsay, why he had not no Manvers people take gravel from the Bennett pit.

The Reeve and Mr. Coulter reported having bought a gravel pit from Mr. Thos. H. Walton, and on motion of Messrs. Coulter and Wilson the purchase money ($300) was paid.

ROAD APPROPRIATIONS

After duly considering the state of the township roads, the following resolutions already made for road material and wire fence, the Council, on motion of Messrs. Coulter and Wilson appropriated $1890 for roads, on the following sums on road divisions as follows No. 1, $442; No. 2, $432; No. 3, $400; No. 4, $416; No. 5, $360.

Leave by-law to borrow money to pay current expenses was now introduced. It received final consideration and was passed, signed and sealed.

Mr. Clerk was instructed to write to the Board of Railway Commissioners about the crossing mentioned on 2nd road east of Ops, on Mr. Geo. Donell, roadmaster of C. P. R., about the Carey Crossing, and Mr. O'Loughlin about the drainage matter on Hornetts corner, lot 22.

On motion of Messrs. Coulter and Wilson, the re. R. J. McLaughlin, was attached to beat No. 57, the w. half lot 13, con. 3, Emily, and E. half lot, 13, con. 3, and south other 76, were transferred to 13.

The accounts from John Carew, lumber from Lindsay Council, were passed and paid, namely John Carew, for bridge material, $25.68; for material used in the bridge, $3; maintenance of Smith family and of Mr. Ed. Gaskin, $3.

The Council then adjourned till the 1st Monday in June.

W. E. O'DOYLE, Clerk.

Cheap School Books.

What Mr. Whitney is reported to have said:

"It is very satisfactory to me, having regard to the promises made and promises made by me to the people of this Province from time to time during the last three years that we would bring down the price of school books, I know the reason why."

What Mr. Whitney should have said:

"It is very satisfactory to me, having regard for my own welfare and the welfare of every member of my Government. That, without referring the matter to the people of this province, I have succeeded in passing a bill giving a substantial increase to my own salary and that of every member of my Government. We were determined to have this done or know the reason why."

It seems to us a case of taking from "Peter to pay Paul." The people pay the piper in any case.

THE MAKING OF CLOTHING

Is Part of the Selling.

THE SELLING OF ONE

GOOD SUIT

Is another one partly sold

We know this to be a fact and that's one reason why we always try to give you the best possible value for your money. No matter what price you pay for a suit here there is one thing you can depend on and that is, the making is well done—we exact this from the maker. It's the same in regards to materials and trimmings—they must be of a quality well worth the price we are going to sell that particular garment at. It is another important matter—all men do not wear the same cut—there's tall, slim men—short, stout men, and others who are of ordinary proportions — each must have a suit just suitable to their particular figure. At this store you will find garments to fit a man as they should be. There's only one way—a correct fit.

Have you noticed the new garments, their particular cut, and such stylish materials. The Coats are somewhat longer than former season's, which is a nice idea—in fact throughout the entire Suit there's little touches of style that makes them very desirable. When you buy a Northway or Modern Brand Suit at this store you can depend on it's being absolutely correct and splendid to keep it's shape, which is a big item in appearance Come in and let us show you how to be well-dressed and yet at a cost that will please you. Better come in soon.

THE KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS

IMPOSING INITIATION CEREMONIES ON MAY 24TH.

Nearly 200 Candidates Received into the Order—Attended High Mass.

(Peterboro Examiner, Saturday.)

Yesterday was a red letter day for the Knights of Columbus, when the three Councils of Lindsay, Bellevile and Peterboro met here for the purpose of initiating a large number of candidates. Knights and guests were present from all parts of Ontario, coming on Thursday night and the balance yesterday morning. A special train brought one hundred Knights from Toronto, and Belleville and Lindsay divisions were well represented.

At nine a.m. the candidates and Knights gathered at the local Division new club rooms and marched in a body to St. Peter's Cathedral. The parade was a very lengthy and most imposing one. At the Cathedral mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Rochford, and a special sermon was preached by Ven. Archdeacon Casey, of Lindsay.

Initiation ceremonies began at 11 o'clock in the morning and continued until 10 p.m. One hundred and seventy-eight candidates were initiated, three degrees being put on. In addition to the candidates there were 225 Knights present. After the ceremony luncheon was served to the Knights, Mr. T. H. Beeper being the caterer for the occasion.

Everything went well and everything in their power to entertain the visitors and they went away with a high opinion of the hospitality of their Peterboro entertainers.

Wedding Bells

Evening Post of May 23

A pretty May wedding was solemnized this morning at St. Paul's recr. C. Coutermarsh, and widow of the late Rev. Canon Ward, was united in marriage to Ernest George Dickerson, also of Lindsay. Mr. A. J. Vale, curate of St. Paul's performed the ceremony. The bride was attended by Miss Mabel Bush, and Mr. Harry Bush assisted the groom.

The young couple left for Arnprior and other points east. On their return they will take up residence at the Ward, on the corner of Melbourne and Cambridge-sts.

AN APPRECIATION OF CANADA.

In writing of the Colonial Conference and "The Coronies Concerned", Herald Bellet in the London (Ont.) Tribune has this to say of Canada:

Let us glance at the Colonies individually. Figure figures suffice to give an adequate idea of their greatness. It is necessary to travel through the countries themselves, as I have been privileged to do, quite recently, in order to realize what our self-governing colonies really are. And even then it is by no means easy to tell the tale. It is easy to say that the Dominion of Canada has an area of three and three-quarter millions of sq. miles, a population rapidly approaching six millions, a trade amounting to a hundred millions sterling, of which forty millions is done with the United Kingdom, but it is necessary to travel day after day and night after night for weeks together in the magnificently appointed trains of the Canadian Pacific, Grand Trunk, and Great Northern Railways of Canada, through the practically illimitable wheat growing prairies of Manitoba and the Northwest; it is necessary to linger in the superb fruit-growing districts of Ontario, Nova Scotia, and British Columbia, and the mining regions of the last-named province; to wander through the superb scenery of the Rockies, and spend some time with the lumbermen in the forests of Vancouver Island, and some again with the fishermen on the coasts, and to see everywhere groups of intelligent, brave and go-ahead people "developing the country"—laughing at the difficulties, revelling in them, rejoicing in being no more accused of frost and snow, so often spoke of in this country as a farmer that we should take off a shower of rain—it is necessary to have experience such as this to be able to realize what Canada is and to form even the faintest idea of what she may become.

Statistics tell us that people are pouring into the country—128,000 in 1903; 139,000 in 1904; 145,000 in 1905; and 189,000 in 1906, and 200,000 estimated for the current year. But Canada heartily welcomes them and offers to all an opportunity of earning a comfortable living, provided they have the good sense to work on the land. The government of the country is similar to our own except that there is a series of local legislatures, and there is no hereditary peerage. The senators and the Dominion Parliament are, however, appointed for life, and are nominated by the Governor General at the service of Ministers. Members of both Houses are paid, senators receiving stock £500 per annum, and members of the Lower House the same sum per session. The important thing to note about the Canadian constitution is that the Dominion Parliament is the simplest powers of legislation in all matters save such as it delegates to the provincial legislatures. This is the reverse of the position of affairs in the United States and Australia, and is interesting, in view of the fact that both the latter colonies are becoming conscious of the disadvantages under which they labor in this respect. This supremacy of the Dominion Parliament is responsible for the sense of solidarity which pervades Canada, and has not a little to do with the growth of the spirit of national independence.

PUBLICITY AN AID TO SUCCESS

A few of Lindsay's business men have not yet attained to the degree of progressiveness which leads their competitors to keep the public informed as to the quality and price of their goods, and their earnest desire to trade with the people. One of these men, when spoken to the other day on this subject by our advertising man, replied, "Oh, I'm doing as much business as I can handle—if I had more customers I'd have to hire another clerk."

That man, and others of his kind, forget that in the course of eight or ten years the population of this or any other community is changed in the proportion of nearly one-half so that a few years later he will have to do with practically a new constituency. Unless he advertises, he may make a few new friends in place of those that have paid the cash of business and left the community, but his grip on the trade is bound to grow weaker daily as competition keeps pace with the enterprising individual who is constantly trying to gain new customers by impressing his business and its advantages on the attention of newcomers. Newcitizens are eager readers of town newspapers because they are anxious to learn as much as possible about the place they are locating in. Nine-tenths of the wide-awake business men who advertise are successful in attaching and holding the new comer.

The man who tries to do business to-day after the plan of twenty years ago is bound to go, laughing among the "has beens". A Chatterbox grocery and market company has just announced "the newest out" in the way of advertising. It has given an order for the installation of fifty telephones in the homes of customers and will have them at its expense thereof. If, the results justify the outlay the number of telephones will be increased. The company's idea is to keep in touch with its employees and save time on the part of drivers. It is a clean certainty that its farmer patrons will be furnished with all possible information as to the prices and description of goods, so that they will necessitate large spaces in the daily papers.

If you can't do any better, hire a sandwich man to parade the streets with your sign on his back. Keep your business before the people. If you're not on top of the wave you're sinking.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Goldwin Smith, in the Weekly Sun, refers to Mr. Bourassa as "the real opposition," in the Canadian commons. Poor Bourassa! The day is gone by when he accepted the shilling for his services. He seems to have forfeited the confidence of many in his own party.

Hamilton Times; A society for the protection of frogs seems to be needed in this Province. Frogs are used a delicacy, to some, and the demand for them is so great that it has allowed Lindsay Bream and the Ontario Fish and Game Protective Association. It sent a deputation to Toronto to protest to the Government against the slaughter of frogs. It seems that the frogs are valued not so much for their own sake, as that it is also valuable food for black bass, maskinonge, wild ducks, minks, skunks, otters, etc., and the Association fears that such alarm the effects upon the fish and fur-bearing animals which would follow the extermination of the frog. The Minister interviewed will sleep on the matter.

DELIBERATE CASE OF GRAVE ROBBING

Remarkable Experience of Well-known Forest Citizen Vouched for by Baptist Minister and a Druggist.

(From Forest Free Press.)

Forest, May 2nd, 1907.—The following facts, verified by Rev. C. E. Burrell, Baptist minister, and Ralph E. Scott, the well known local druggist, are so conclusively evidence that even when physicians have abandoned hope, there is still a way whereby the grave may be cheated of its prey.

John A. Galbraith is a well-to-do farmer residing in Plympton township, about five miles from Forest. He is 5 feet 9 inches in height and about 40 years of age. He enjoyed good health up until early in 1906, when he was a severe attack of pleuro-pneumonia, which apparently broke up his whole system. In speaking of this case to the Forest Free Press, he said:

"I did not seem able to gain my strength after the attack of pneumonia. One doctor said that tuberculosis had developed, that I could not recover, and advised me to settle all my affairs as quickly as possible. This was the condition I was in when I commenced to take the Psychine, of the Psychine church, advised me to try Psychine, and procured for me a trial bottle. This was in May, 1906, and at that time I was reduced in weight to 120 pounds. The Psychine seemed to do good from the start, and I continued until 2 bottles had taken. I gained 21 pounds in weight and the rest of all a pound a day until I went up to 150 pounds. My strength, regained my strength and feeling better I so usefully had to have my clothes altered, and I felt as strong as anybody, but owing to a putting on of good food I felt all over. I have never had any work and have gone through all kinds of weather since then, and nothing worse than an attack of grip which my system was able to throw off without any serious results.

"I give this statement for the purpose of showing what Psychine did, probably saved my life, and in the hope that others may be likewise benefited by its use."

(Signed) JOHN A. GALBRAITH.

"Mr. J. A. Galbraith is a prominent member of my church, trusted by his neighbors, and his case is spoken throughout the entire community. His case has attracted very considerable attention. His was a case which, indeed, put in the grave of life and with the brightest of prospects, to be suddenly stricken down in the prime of manhood. He was given up by his physicians had proclaimed his case hopeless, and indeed, set the date at about which time he would die. I visited him and observing pretty closely his condition, I noticed the effect that Psychine which I had used in my own family would have upon such a strong benefit him. I strongly recommended it to some of my friends and it. This result was truly wonderful. Although I had faith in Psychine to prove, and soon was able to out again. He apparently regained his health, and was able to take up once again his old duties on his farm for a year, pursuing his work with comparative ease and comfort. He then began to grow worse and worse and he is to-day apparently just as bad as he was before he took the pill for his recovery, under God, to Psychine.

"C. E. BURRELL,
Pastor Baptist Church."

"I have read the statements made by Mr. J. A. Galbraith and Rev. C. E. Burrell regarding the results of the use of Psychine. I know both gentlemen personally and can heartily endorse all that they have said. Mr. Galbraith has had his supply of Psychine at my drug store, saying the time he first began to use it had given good. I took an interest in his case and watched the results of treatment. Although I sold him about 6 bottles of Psychine I feel that I can in fairness and as far as I know is always ready to recommend it.

"RALPH E. SCOTT,
Forest, May 1st, 1907."

HELPING A GOOD CAUSE

Dr. Burrows Assists the Collegiate Institute Museum.

Another valuable donation to the Collegiate Institute Museum has received last Saturday, through the generosity of Dr. Palmer Burrows. This consists of a series of mounted specimens of Canadian birds and mammals, together with a green lizard from South America. Some of the specimens are of birds that are quite rare and very expensive; two of the most valuable birds are a magnificent specimen of the golden eagle, and a handsome mount of the American pelican. The latter is a bird which is not very similar to the crane, only much more of a cigar-scented, as are also very specimens of the most handsome of American ducks—the wood duck. Two sharp-shinned hawks from the Western prairies are also beautifully mounted.

The contents of the Museum must necessarily depend largely on the donations of our citizens, and it is pleasing to record the fact that Dr. Burrows and Mr. F. D. Moore must be thanked by others, specimens in a private home are comparatively useless, and soon become the prey of moths and vermin, but if the Collegiate Institute Museum is kept up in a proper manner, it will be of great value to all the students.

HANG SCHOOL FIRE ALARM

Members of Board of Education Tested Sys om To-day.

Evening Post of May 23.

Acting on a suggestion made in the Evening Post some days ago, Drs. White and Blackwell, members of the Board of Education, last morning made a test of the new fire alarm gong at the Union School. They were accompanied by Mr. Capital in the formative note at about 10 o'clock, and the gong was rung, and they took no time in putting it in operation. Either the gong was not loud enough, Dr. White thought, or of the rope that sets and operates the bell should be longer, so as to be out of quick pulls.

Certainly, there was something to ring. From all sides came the sound of ordinary machinery, and on occasions of pupils from eight times course began to fall out, the usual medical men, who stood watch in hand. When Principal Frederick announced "All out!" just 48 seconds had ticked away since the first clang of the bell, and the members of the Board took their departure, in a manner which left little doubt, congratulating principal, teachers and pupils on the splendid showing

"I've got what you want." David said. "Now are you in breakfast?"

There was a pile of letters on the table, and on the top a telegram. It was a long message, and Bell watched Steel's face curiously.

"From Lathbury Castle," he suggested. "Am I right?"

"As usual," David cried, "My little scheme over that diamond star has worked magnificently. Miss Chris tells me that she has—by Jove, Bell, just listen—she has found the problem of the cigar-case; she has found out the whole thing. I wanted you to see her in London to-morrow, when she will tell me everything."

CHAPTER XLVI.

Lord Littimer sat on the terrace, shaded from the sun by an awning over his deck-chair. From his expression he appeared to be at peace with all the world. His brown, eager face had lost its usually keen, suspicious look; he smoked a cigarette lazily. Chris sat opposite him looking as little like a hard-working secretary as possible.

As a matter of fact, there was nothing for her to do. Littimer had arrived one day in his lady's secretary idea, and Chris not interested and amused her. She would have found some means to get rid of her before now.

But she did interest and amuse and puzzle him. There was something charmingly reminiscent about the girl. She was like somebody he had known and cared for, but for the life of him he could not think who.

"Really, you are an exceedingly clever girl," he said.

"In fact, we are both exceedingly clever," Chris replied, coolly. "And yet nobody ever suspects us of cleverness. I imagine himself to be. Do you ever make bad mistakes, Lord Littimer?"

"Sometimes," Littimer said, with a touch of cynical humor. "For instance, I married some years ago. That was bad. Then I had a son, which was worse."

"At the time you were fond of your family?"

"Well, upon my word, you are the only creature I ever met who has had the audacity to ask me that question. Yes, I was very fond of my wife and my son, and, God help me, I am fond of them still. I don't know why I talk to you like this."

"I do," Chris said, gently. "It is because unconsciously you yearn for sympathy. And you fancy you are in no way to blame, you imagine that you acted in the only way consistent with your dignity and honor. You fancied that your son was a vulgar thief. And I am sure that I gave the impression that Lady Littimer had money."

"She had a large fortune," Littimer said, faintly. "Miss Lee, do you know what I have a strong mind to do, you and I?"

Chris laughed unkindly. She was horribly frightened, though she did not show it. She had been waiting for days to catch her victim in this mood. And she did not feel disposed to go back now. The task must be accomplished some time.

"Lady Littimer was very rich," she went on, "and she was devoted to Frank, your son. Now, if he had wanted a large sum of money very badly and had gone to his mother, she would have given it to him without the slightest hesitation?"

"Yes, I think so," he said.

"I am obliged to you for conceding the point. Your son wanted money, and he robbed you when he could not have had anything for the asking from his mother."

"Sound logical," Littimer said, flippantly. "Who has the money?"

"The same man who stole Prince Rupert's ring—Reginald Henson."

Littimer dropped his cigar and sat upright in his chair. He was keen and alert enough now. Not a trace of sensitive or sickly.

"That is a serious accusation," he said.

"Not more serious than your accusation against your son," Chris retorted.

"Well, perhaps not," Littimer admitted. "But why do you take up Frank's cause in this way? Is there any romance budding under my unconscious eyes?"

"Now you are talking nonsense," Chris said, with just a touch of color in her cheeks. "I say, and I am going to prove when the time comes, that Reginald Henson was the thief. I am sorry to pain you, but it is absolutely necessary to go into these matters. When those foolish letters, written by a foolish girl, fell into your hands, your son coveted that he would get them back, by force if necessary. He made that rash speech in hearing of Reginald Henson. Reginald knew more about until he saw the robbery committed. Then it occurred to him that he might do a little robbery on his own account, seeing that your son would get the credit of it. The safe was open, and the jewels walked off with your ring and your money."

"My dear young lady, this is all mere surmise."

"So you imagine. At that time Reginald Henson was a kind of home wrecker. He was running at 218, Brunswick Square, Bloomsbury, and Lord Littimer had just relinquished a similar undertaking in Bryanston Square. Reginald Henson had a home at Huddersfield. Mind you, I am not blaming him for his sins, and he kept studiously in the background. But he was desperately hard up. At the time he indulged in his dissipation and extravagance, and the money he collected was all put away into his own pocket. Then the police got wind of the matter, and Reginald Henson discreetly disappeared from Brighton just in time to save his friend from arrest for frauds there and at Huddersfield. A member of the Huddersfield police is in a high position at Brighton. He has recognized Reginald Henson as the man who was wanted at Huddersfield. I don't know if there will be a prosecution after all these years, but there you are."

"You are speaking from authority?"

"Certainly I am. Reginald Henson, as such, is not known to the Scotland Marley, but I sent the latter a photograph of Henson, and he returned it this morning with a letter to the effect that it was the man the Huddersfield police were looking for."

"What an interesting girl you are," Littimer murmured, with a look of surprise. Our dear Reginald is even a greater rascal than I took him for."

"Well, he took your money, and that saved him the lock your ring, a facsimile of which he had secured, for some ingenious purpose. It came with a vengeance, Lord Littimer, committed suicide, thanks to your insolence to your son."

"Go on. Suit it in. Never mind about the feelings."

"I'm not minding," Chris said, coolly. "Henson saw his game and played it boldly. I could not have told you that this yesterday, but a letter I had this morning from Frank Lathbury explains fully. Henson wanted to cause family differences, and he succeeded. Previously he got Dr. Bell out of the way by means of the famous cigar-case. You can't deny there is a second Rembrandt now, and that it is locked up in your safe and where it will think. Bell found it! Why, at 218, Brunswick Square, Bloomsbury, Reginald Henson had to leave it seven years ago when he was running a little business trail. He was fearful lest you and your family should discover the ruse, and that is why he came here at night to steal your Rembrandt. And yet you trusted that man blindly all the time your own son was suffering on mere suspicion. How blind you must be!"

"I'm blind still," Littimer said, curtly. "My dear young lady, I know that you are making out a pretty strong case, indeed. I might be inclined to say that you have all my sympathy. But what you say would not be taken as evidence in a court of law. Can you produce that ring, for instance—but that is at the bottom of the lake, I fear."

Chris took a small cardboard box from her pocket, and from there produced a ring. It was a ruby ring with twelve pearls on either side, and had some inscription inside.

"Look at that," she said. "It was sent to me to-day by my-by a friend of mine. It is the ring which Reginald Henson stole from Lady Littimer. I know he wants money from her. It was lost by Henson a night or two ago. He fell into the hands of someone who is acquainted with the ring, and who knows the genuine and disgrace of Reginald Henson."

Littimer examined the ring carefully.

"It is a wonderfully good imitation," he said, presently.

"So I am told," said Chris. "So good that it must have actually been copied from the original. Now, how could Henson have had a copy made unless he possessed the original? Who is good enough to answer me that question, Lord Littimer?"

Littimer could do no more than gaze at the ring in his hand for some time.

"I could have sworn—indeed, I am ready to swear—that the real ring was in Lever in anybody's possession but mine from the day that Frank was a year old till it disappeared. Of course, I knew that it was locked up in Henson amongst the rest. But how did Claire Carfax—"

"Easily enough. Henson had a first copy made from a description. I don't know why; probably we shall never know why. Probably he had it done when he knew that your son and Miss Carfax had struck up a flirtation. It was he who forged a letter from Frank to Miss Carfax, ostensibly from the girl, that means he hoped to create mischief which it had been stopped if the bud could never have been traced to him. At midnight Henson had succeeded beyond his wildest expectations. He had got the real ring, too, which was lying to power your lawful thing in case he ever wanted to make terms. Henson and a faithful copy was made—the copy you hold in your hands—to hold indefinitely over Lady Littimer's head when he wanted to get more money from her."

"The scoundrel! He gets the money, of course?"

"He does. To my certain knowledge he has had nearly £70,000. But the case is in good hands. You have only to wait a few days longer and the mail will be exposed. Already, as you see, I have wound his accomplice, the Reverend James Merritt, round my finger. Of course, the idea of getting up a hoax has all been nonsense. I am only waiting for a little more information, and then Merritt will feel the iron hand under his velvet glove. Unless I am greatly mistaken Merritt can tell us where Prince Rupert's ring is. Always Van Sneck is in our grasp."

"Van Sneck! Is he in England?"

"He is. Did you read that strange case of a man being found half murdered in the conservatory of Mr. Steel, the novelist, in Brighton? Well, that was Van Sneck. But I can't tell you any more at present. You must wait and be content."

"Tell me one thing, and I will wait as long as you like. Who was you?"

Chris shook her head, mutely. A great relief to Littimer's mind. She had approached a delicate and difficult subject, and she had succeeded beyond her expectations. That she had allowed herself to betray herself sorely was evident from his face. The hardness had gone from his eyes, his lips were no longer bitter and cynical.

"I may have been guilty of a great indiscretion," he murmured. "I dare says I may have been living under a misapprehension. I may have told you what I should never have suspected, knowing what I do of the high opinion of my dear Reginald. Where is my wife now?"

"She is still at Longleat Grange. You will notice a great change in her a great and wonderful change. But it is not too late to—"

Littimer rose and went swiftly towards the house. At any other time he would have been very much out of his fully understood. She had touched the sore on the bottom of his heart, and he was anxious to hide his emotion.

"Poor man," Chris murmured. "His hard cynicism conceals a deal of suffering. But the suffering is past, we hope, and he can enjoy the sunlight now."

Chris rose restlessly in her turn and strolled along the terrace to her favorite spot beneath the cedar tree. There was nobody about; it was very hot indeed. She leaned her arms on the parapet and pushed back the banded hair from her forehead. She had drawn a photograph from her pocket which she was regarding intently. She was quite unaware of the fact that somebody was coming along the cliffs towards her. She jumped when the shadow fell upon her and blushed a little.

"Dreaming, as usual, Miss Lee," he said, with a touch of cynical humor. "Or perhaps I should say, Miss Chris. Or perhaps I should say, Miss Lee, or perhaps I should say, Miss Chris. Which is the name I have forgotten?"

"Why, of course, Chris," she said, with a little blush. "Why, of course, Chris. And they told me—"

"Who told you?"

was so not that I had taken "off my glasses and put my hair up. Then Frank came up and surprised me."

"You have grown an exceedingly pretty girl, Chris," Littimer said, critically. "Of course, I recognize you now. You are nicer-looking than Miss Lee."

Chris put on her glasses and rolled her hair down resolutely.

"You will be good enough to understand that I am perfectly continue Miss Lee for the present," she said. "My task is a long way from being finished yet. Do you know what I have to do next to send Frank away?"

"I don't know," he said. "Frank, I have heard a great deal to-day to cause me to think that I will have done you a grave injustice. And yet I am not sure. If I am to guess, it would be bad policy for you to remain here. If I am to guess, you have found out Reginald Henson it might upset Miss Marley. It's plain."

"It had not occurred to me for the moment," Chris exclaimed. "On the whole, Frank is better out of the way. But I should dearly like to see you two shake hands."

Frank Littimer made an involuntary gesture, and then he laughed.

"I'd—I'd rather not," he said. "At least, not until my character has been fully vindicated. I think I have suffered enough for a boyish indiscretion."

"And you have youth on your side," Littimer said, kindly. "Frank, I'm sorry I was so hard. I know it has been terrible for you. I know how cruelly of your Claire's away because they were worried property, and for no eye but mine."

"No eye but yours saw them. I was going to tell you everything when I had."

"Yes, so do I. I took them and destroyed them. But I take Heaven to witness that I was ignorant of your sides. If it was the last word I ever utter—knowing what I do of your character in that garb! It is one of the most disgraceful tricks."

"Well, I was caught across the terrace. He paused suspiciously as he caught sight of me. I had to make up a friendly wave of her hand, encouraging the deception."

"It is all part of the game," she said, "I need not explain to you. Frank but when I did so I had no idea that Frank would be present. Since you are here you may as well know the rest. Frank and a little more of the strange doings of Reginald Henson. I was sent for yesterday to let Merritt know that I am not the clever girl he took me for. Merritt came up on purpose to see me. Evidently he presented a very pitiable figure, disturbed him. Chris motioned him to a chair.

"You are very punctual," she said. "I told you I wanted you to give Lord Littimer the slip for a little private consultation. In the first place we want your assistance. In the first place we want to know how Reginald Henson obtained mounted cigar-case, at present for sale in Rutter's window, came from. We want to know how it got there and who sold it to Rutter's people. Also we want to know how Reginald Henson sold a similar cigar-case from Wales's, of Brighton."

Merritt's heavy jaw dropped, his face turned a shade pale. He looked round helplessly for some means of escape, and then recognized the idea with a sigh.

"Done," he said. "Clear done. And by a woman, too. Not exactly a woman, but a woman all the same. And yet why did I do it?"

Merritt paused, lost in the contemplation of a problem beyond his intellectual strength.

"You have nothing to fear," Chris said, with a little laugh. "We all know and conceal nothing, and you will be free as the wind to go where you."

Merritt wiped his dry lips with the back of his hand.

"I come peaceable," he said, hearsay. "And I'm going to tell you all about it."

CHAPTER XLVII.

"There was an uneasy grin on Merritt's face, as he sat down and he looked altogether trust those around him. Hard experience had led the way of the wicked had taught him the folly of putting his confidence in anyone. Just for the moment he felt inclined to shuffle upon him.

"I'm very nothing, then I can't do any harm," he remarked, sapiently. "Best, the one thing to do is to keep my tongue between my teeth."

"Mr. Henson is a dangerous man to cross," Chris suggested.

"He is that," Merritt agreed. "You don't know half of it."

Chris conceded the point, though she had her own views on the subject. Lord Littimer had seated himself on the broad seat along the terrace, where he was watching the scene with the greatest zest and interest.

"You imagine Mr. Henson to be a friend of Lord Littimer's family."

Merritt nodded and grinned. So long as he was useful to Henson he was fairly safe.

"Mr. Merritt," Chris asked, sudden-ly, "Are you acquainted with Reginald Taylor?"

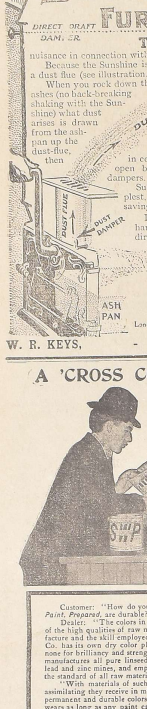
The effect of the question was electrical. Merritt's square jaw dropped with a click, there was fear in the furtive eyes that he turned upon her.

"I read about Reginald Taylor in one of our very smart papers," Chris went on. "It appears that Mr. Taylor is a very good-looking young man, and he seen, but who from time to time does a vast service to the community at large. He is not exactly a philanthropist, for he is well rewarded for his labors both by the public and his clients. Suppose Mr. Merritt here had done something—"

"A great effort of imagination," Lord Littimer murmured, dryly.

"Had done something wrong, and an enemy or quondam friend wants to put him away? Reginald Taylor is the correct expression. In that case he does not go to the police himself, because he is usually of a modest and retiring disposition. No, he usually goes down a few particulars in the way of a letter addressed to Reginald Taylor post-office at a certain address. Is not that quite correct, Mr. Merritt?"

"Yes, I—I—I—



There is no dust nuisance in connection with the Sunshine. Because the Sunshine is fitted with a dust flue (see illustration.) When you rock down the ashes (no back-breaking shaking with the Sunshine) what dust arises is drawn from the ash-pan up the dust-flue, then across the fire-pot to the smoke-pipe as shown in illustration, where it immediately ascends to the outer air. Only two things to remember in connection with the operation — open both the dust and direct draft dampers.

Sunshine is just the cleanest, simplest, easiest managed, greatest fuber saving furnace that you can buy.

IN THE POET'S CORNER.

YE MARINERS OF ENGLAND.

Ye mariners of England
That guard our native seas!
Whose flag has braved a thousand years
The battle and the breeze!
Your glorious standard launch again
To match another foe,
And sweep through the deep,
While the stormy winds do blow;
While the broken rags load and long
And the stormy winds do blow.

The spirits of your fathers
Shall start from every wave—
For the deck it was their field of fame,
And the ocean was their grave;
Where Blake and mighty Nelson fell,
Your manly hearts shall glow,
As ye sweep through the deep,
While the stormy winds do blow,
While the broken rags load and long
And the stormy winds do blow.

Britannia needs no bulwarks,
No towers along the steep;
Her march is over the mountain waves,
Her home is on the deep.
With thunders from her native oak
She quells the floods below—
As they roar on the shore,
When the stormy winds do blow,
When the battle rages loud and long
And the stormy winds do blow.

The meteor flag of England
Shall yet terrific burn,
Till danger's troubled night depart
And the star of peace return.
Then, then, ye ocean warriors!
Our song and feast shall flow
To the fame of your name,
When the storm has ceased to blow,
When the fury fight is heard no more,
And the storm has ceased to blow.

PLAY THE GAME.

"On the coffin of the late Dr. W. H. Drummond, the widely known and beloved Canadian poet, who died recently, were the words, 'Play the Game.' Dr. J. W. T. Patton writes as follows to the Montreal Star from Truro, N.S.:

A-romparing is a copy of 'Play the Game', by Henry Newbolt. The poem, I believe, was a favorite one of the late Dr. Drummond. Until I saw the poem in the last (May) number of the Educational Review, published in St. John, N.B., I was not familiar with the name of the author, Henry Newbolt.

PLAY THE GAME.

There's a breathless hush in the close tonight—
Ten to one and the match to win—
Bating at the bat, and the wicket-keeper
An hour to play and the last man in.
And it is not for the sake of a ribboned coat,
Or the selfish hope of a season's fame,
But his captain's hand on his shoulder smote—
'Play the game, my lad! and play the game!'

The sand of the desert is sodden red
Red with the wreck of a square that broke—
The gallant is jammed and the Colonel dead,
And the regiment, blind with dust and smoke,
The river of death has brimmed its banks,
And England's far, and Honor a name;
But the voice of a schoolboy rallies the ranks:
'Play up, play up! and play the game!'

This is the word that year by year,
While in her place the school is set,
Echoes of her sons must hear
And none that hear it dare forget.
This they all with a joyful mind,
Bear through life like a torch in hand;
And falling, fling to the host behind—
Play up, play up! and play the game!"

—Henry Newbolt.

He Was Bright.

(Philadelphia Public Ledger.)

It was in a country tavern, where a newly arrived commercial traveler was holding forth.

"I'll bet my case of samples," he said, "that I've got the hardest name of anybody in this room."

An old farmer in the background shifted his feet to a warmer part of the stove.

"We will, will ye?" he drawled. "We-ell, I'll have to take ye up. I'll bet $10 against your samples that my name's best yours."

"Done," cried the salesman. "I've got a long and hard name in the country. It is Stone."

The old man was game.

"Mine," he said, "is Harder."

A Mess of it.

(Montreal Herald.)

What a mess the government has made of this entire business! (the school of pedagogy) Undertaken in the first place to gratify Toronto city and greed, it promises to great(l)y increase the expense of pedagogy course to the teachers and to the public, and at the same time, by abolishing the special training college, to cheapen the professions of its higher grades, and deprive all but university students of the advantages of the course. It is a beautiful specimen of bungling from start to finish.

Some Remarks on Things in General

By "THE STOOLER."

Next Sunday (to-morrow) we are again called upon to put in our little encyclopedia—through the church—to which we belong—for our local hospital. Last year we took the matter up in this column and were very pleased to see that all the churches responded nobly—as they should do. We have not got the final report just handy, but if we remember aright, the figures in everything were in advance of the year before, showing that our people are more and more appreciating its presence in our midst, and using it. We don't know whether our Socialistic friends really imagine think they could advantageously if they were to have their dues carried out or not; for our part, much as we sympathize with some of their feelings, we don't think that in the general running of this universe it was the intention of the Maker that there should be no poor—in fact we read of Him saying—"the poor ye have always with you." We do not think it would be a wise dispensation if there were no poor—we would all get so selfish and puffed in pride, that there would be no standing it. With the poor constantly with us there is always an opening for anyone and everyone to exercise those talents that tend to the bettering of our nature. The building and care of hospitals has always been looked upon as one of the signs of a christian people, and we should count it a privilege in Lindsay, not only that we have an hospital, but that we are able to help our own poor by our might, at our own door. We are fortunate in having gentlemen at its head who give of their time freely to its management, and even if we do not agree with all that they do, we must acknowledge that they are designed for the benefit of the hospital as they are so well and deserve our thanks. We understand that the hospital is crowded for room, and the more the fame of its treatment goes abroad through the country, the more it will be crowded.

To our mind there are two elements that ought to receive immediate attention—the one is a maternity wing, and the other a convalescent quarters. Both are needed and both would be, from dignity, financial, and not as hospitals are supposed to pay. Now, after all, it is only the very minority that ever need the hospital, but when they do need it they need it badly. It should be looked upon as a privilege by everyone—the opportunity of helping some poorer brother or sister back to health and strength. Who knows the good that your gift does? probably never out of your life, but out there we are certain that, if even in the right spirit you, the giver, will get the most good out of it, as once the words of the Master "that it is more blessed to give than to receive," fall to the ground, and we know that it is impossible. We do not think we even to suggest what each one shall give, but it seems to us that each church in Lindsay ought to be good for at least $100, no such member or adherent can figure out his or her proportion of that amount and give it. We certainly hope the gifts will be large.

The idea of our nation—the Grit part of it—has been carrying himself off handsomely in the old land these last few weeks, and no doubt even Dr. Pomeroy will view our land a sense of pride (that of course they wouldn't let out in the way in which he has taken the honors coming his way. Of the many matters Sir Wilfrid has brought to the notice of British authorities not the least important is the cattle embargo which has existed so long against our country. As our readers are aware, all cattle sent from this country have to be killed within an hour of their landing. Some people claim that this is a very partiality to Canada, and that this removal would remove the fear of the country. It is just a question whether Canada has been a gainer by the embargo, rather than a loser. When our cattle went into British Freely the class that cattle left here were what is called stockers. They were bought for at $40 to $50 a head and sent over there to be fattened. When the cattle trade was on that trade stopped and our farmers had to turn in and do the fattening themselves. It is an acknowledged fact that the more live stock a farm has, the better the crops as nature returns to the land what has been taken out of it, whereas if no stock is kept, and only cereals grown, much more fertilizing material is required to keep the land in condition. When you export any thing from your farm you do carry away a grave injustice if we can do more of the manufacturing here. We are finding fault now because our cows have to be exported in a crude shape, when we could do the refining of them here in the country. When the embargo was placed on our cattle, it forced our farmers to do more of the manufacturing at home, and instead of sending out stockers, at a loss, we were soon sold out fat cattle at $50 a head, or more than we had ever got for them. It does seem to us that it is much preferable for us to be able to do this than to have the Britisher do it, and therefore we are under the impression that embargo was not such a bad thing after all for us, and at the same time we can conceive that it would be of immense benefit to our cattle if it were the time for slaughtering to be extended. It would not injure the Britisher's cattle trade, and it certainly would benefit us. There are times that cattle arrive and the market is dull, or possibly they have had a rough passage and a few days' feeding and rest would materially benefit them, and put them in better shape for selling. The law, however, is imperable and they must be slaughtered, and as a consequence, in cases like those cited, there is a loss to the owner, and we guess to the buyer. If this concession could be obtained we think it would be all that we would need—any more might bite us.

The Lord's Day Alliance is evidently going to take its work out on for it is seeing to the proper observance of the Lord's Day Act. Restrictive measures of all kinds always find some people who are immediately opposed to them. Thieves are opposed to the law against theft, murderers to the laws against adultery, and murderers to the laws against murder. Our contributors but will admit that these laws are right and just. When we come to compulsory laws, like the liquor laws and the Lord's Day Act, we find all grades of opinion regarding their enforcement. The Humane Society, Leagues for instance, want certain lines of amusement and action, times of business, opens and one judge in Toronto and the Manitoba premier are morally of the same opinion. To our mind, it would seem that if one man has the right to buy an ice cream soda or a cigar on Sunday, another man should have an equal right to buy a glass of lager or a cigar. Neither is the worse for compulsory laws, like the liquor laws and the Lord's Day Act, are not permissible, why not a bill giving Orangemen the Thursday afternoon to have no fight to be entered to in the municipal line and not the other? We are all of diverse opinions and tastes and what will satisfy one man will pall on another, and it is going to be legal for one man who like Sunday recreations to have consents to go to them, it would seem only fair justice to another man to let him have the liberty of going to a baseball match if he so prefers. Then, another batch of people would prefer to spend a Thursday afternoon and would make a great commotion and would tend to make a bone of contention for us to gnaw.

All right-thinking people can see certainly what this sort of thing land us. As has been pointed out, the restaurants will drink on in so many lines as they can, and it will not be the most desirable class of citizens who will enter into the business—desirable citizens are so into new business ventures, and we will find that that class of business will soon be left to the Greeks, Italians, Jews, and possibly a few Bohemian whites. We would seem reasonable to confine our rights to the right of one and all, and if we must have any law, let it rather go in for the Sunday legislation, and we make it a whole holiday—we would be all the better for it, but let us be in one boat, seven when all around us will be rowing and we will pull our oars together and enjoy at least one day of rest. This is a long article, in justice to all we cannot afford to allow any opening for the Sunday cars, as Sunday is very nice, but what about the poor waitresses who have to forego their day of rest?

There was quite a little discussion over the minutes the other evening in the Town Council, about the amount of money the town spent on its services. It seems that he is paid $100 per year, and supply them with land for water and supply them with medicine. If his services are worth equal value to the poor as the rich and his medicine of equal potentiale it is good well and we go very far in figuring out his services. As one member said the other night, it was a great scheme to rid the other doctors of undesirable and poor paying patients. Our impression would be that if it did give the poor a doctor they could call their own, and guarantee them proper treatment, it would be more well spent.

The question is, does it? Are the other doctors of the town relieved of their unremunerative work, and does the town doctor give the time and attention to the poor that, as humans, they should? We cannot say much of such service for $100. It is only here and there that a doctor will take up work for the good he does and not for the money that it will bring him, and when the profession does more for nothing, than it does for pay, we believe it. We believe it would pay us to give the doctor more money and allow him to visiting every poor family in town periodically, and overseer their health and surroundings. A sympathetic man of good judgment would stay epidemics of fevers, and who knows how many lives? The great need of our day is men of heart, those who are better off. They give each other sympathy and help, for more than any other class does, but where shall and money are needed it stands to reason they are woefully lacking. We are afraid that even the doctors are apt to treat them similarly if they see nothing should for their pay, and in that respect they are no worse than any other section of the community.

We made mention last week of the diplomacies the authorities have to deal with, and they are endeavoring to avoid it. We all read in the papers of a party in some New Brunswick county who let a murderer go free because if they found them guilty they would be at the expense of hanging a scaffold. We would hate to see the country come to this pass, and yet an instance was told us, of a man who had committed a few times and put in the cooler at night, who was to be let out in the morning. He was a menace to his wife and family and should have been sent to penitentiary for a long term, and other he was allowed to go free. The poor need as much protection from themselves as they do from anything else. Giving them of proper training and education they become a burden and nuisance rather than the State, and anything that weaken the State, or as a municipality, it is its duty to stop, and be done. A well-equipped town doctor to look after their living would be a good move in that direction.

INTERESTING FARM NOTES

In summer fowls need more room than they do in winter. In all cases where it is permissible, they should have plenty of room for their accommodation, that they may never be crowded night or day.

According to a new law in Iowa, says the Kansas Farmer, eggs are now sold by weight in place of by the dozen, and if a person sells bad eggs he is subject to punishment. This is all right, for it is not any more justifiable to sell bad eggs than to sell bad meat, or spoiled goods of any kind.

When confined fowls have no opportunity of gratifying their desire in the choice of food, says the Kansas farmer, there are three points to be observed in feeding, which are, that nitrogenous food is necessary, that too much green food must not be given and that fowls must not be made too fat.

The poor dairyman can well spend a day or two in visiting a good dairy farm operated on up-to-date ideas.

Beautiful cows are not those real upper heat on canvas in pictures, but on the balance sheet in dollars and cents.

A really good cow will lose flesh rather than gain it when in full flow of milk, says the American Farmer.

If the heifer calf is to become a good dairy cow she must be fed as though she were a cow now.

Every dairy utensil should be kept as scrupulously clean now, as in the hottest weather.

In marketing good butter, an attractive form of package helps to secure a price.

Are you feeding a ration that will make a good flavored milk and keep the cow healthy at the same time?

Keep the pails clean—those you milk into and those you feed milk from.

Now is the time when dairy cows need special attention. Roughness or neglect will kill them and is apt to be of poor quality.

Farm separators must not be left uncovered in a dusty place, and must they be run even for a minute by the farm hand, they are apt to be dirty.

Be sure to handle the milch cows gently. The milking stool and muscle, contribute much to the temper, and it doesn't help the milk in the long run.

Milk is nothing but pure feeds. Musty, musty or those which have a peculiar odor will ruin butter, so make how will they be worked and prepared for market.

Glass bottles containing notes from the Lindsay Creamery of the past summer have frequently been discovered by English dealers in Canadian cheese, and the practice has been strongly denounced in the national trade papers, owing to the danger of such glass bottles being left in the cheese, the bottles generally being broken when the cheese is cut. Quite recently one instance was discovered by a Liverpool merchant. Upon turning the cheese over the tile of Milwaukee beer came to light. The combination was fairly be called inappropriate, but it is not regrettable to hear of the superior sobriety of the Canadian product.—New York Produce Review.

Don't get into filthy or bad ways of milking. To milk with wet hands is an unclean practice. The dirty nasty ones are clean hands, and is sure before he begins that the cow's udder is clean and that no flying dirt can get into the milk. Using a clean or wet hand is not necessary well and in making hard milkers, it will also only keep the cow's teats very tender. Dampening the teats with milk also has the same effect.

Cleanliness is one of the most important requisites in dairying. It is an exchange. A farm with its fields free from foul weeds and its dairy cows is far worth many more dollars an acre than the farm with dirty weedy fields. The dairy farm or wages a heavy war each year against weeds, and it cannot be in clean poultry yard and poultry house and be clean. A clean poultry house, clean milking utensils, and barns are all requisites to successful factors in producing clean, wholesome, well-flavored milk, butter and cheese. A well-dressed, clean-look farm, with its place for everything and everything in its place, and its neatness and care, but it means hot and cold and garden cannot be secured without effort, but it is one of the first conditions of success.

Twas Ever Thus.

The youth made eyes at the farmer's maid,
She blushed with glance cast down,
He thought that her shock was pluck pump and full—
She thought that he came from town.

And all the ways as he rode along
When he left the farm house door,
He thought of the smile of the girl
yellow curls.
He longed to return once more.
She sat and sewed in the shady porch
When the youth had left the girl,
And thought how broad his shoulders were
And mused on Love and Fate.
But memories fade in time's strong light—
Fresh scenes the old ones dim.
The youth has forgotten the country maid,
And she has forgotten him.

WHEN AND WHAT TO READ.

If you are impatient, sit down quietly and have a talk with God.

If you are just a little strong-headed, go to see Hosea.

If you are getting weak-kneed, take a look at Elijah.

If there is no song in your heart, turn to David.

If you are a policy man, read Daniel.

If you are getting sordid, spent a while with Isaiah.

If you don't really get the beloved disciple to put his arms around you if you failed to believe par, read Paul.

If you are getting lazy, watch James.

If you are losing sight of the Saviour, climb up to Revelation and get a glimpse of the promised land.

SERMONS DELIVERED AT THE CHURCHES LAST SUNDAY.

AT ST. PAUL'S.

The Sons of England attended divine service in a body in a church yesterday morning, in a body. Over seventy-five members were in attendance and listened to an impressive sermon by the Rector, Rev. G. H. Harris. The subject of his sermon was "Isaiah's Vision. For his text he chose the first five verses of the sixth chapter of the Prophecy of Isaiah's vision of the glory of God, his vision of, as and of grace. After seeing these visions, Isaiah heard a voice saying, "Whom shall I send, and who will go for us?" Isaiah answered, "Here am I, send me." The Rector dwelt on the fact that God needed men and women to go and witness and work for Him.

The speaker congratulated the Sons of England Society on the work they were doing, although a young society in action. They had given nearly $20,000 for funeral benefits, over $30,000 for sick and medical benefits, in the past year, and $31,000 for sick benefits since 1891. Among their charities they also support a cot in a Toronto hospital.

In conclusion the members of the Order and congregation were urged to live godly lives. The following beautiful hymn was composed:

Oh, do not doubt that it matters not
How you live your lives below;
It matters much to the freedom of a crowd
That you see go to and fro.
For all that is noble, and high and good
Has an influence on the rest,
And the world is richer for every one
Who is living at his best.

AT ST. ANDREW'S

Rev. Jas. Wallace occupied the pulpit at St. Andrew's yesterday, after an absence of over a month. The sermon was practical and based on the text: "There were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word in all readiness of mind, and searched the scriptures daily whether those things were so." The minister contrasted the treatment of Paul by the people of Thessalonica and the Bereans. The former rejected God's word and set all the city in an uproar against St. Paul and his teachings. They were prejudiced to Christ and would not receive his word. The Bereans, on the other hand, readily received Paul and listened to his words. They verified them by searching the scriptures. We should open our lives to christian influences and become teachable like little children and receive the truth. Many are prejudiced against christianity because, perhaps, one with whom they come in contact professes christianity, but fails to live a good life; it is unfair to judge christianity from this standpoint. It is the man who seeks who finds, and it one as to have advantages for great accuracy in the study of the Bible, and reading of the bible is neglected by a large number of the present age. The gospel remains with us always, and its life-dominating and ennobling power of the life that is in course. The attitude in the morning was "The Splendors of Thy Glory," by Woodward. In the evening Dr. Gray rendered a solo, "Thy will be done," and as the conclusion of the service "Saviour, breathe an evening blessing," formed a fitting close.

CAMBRIDGE-ST. METHODIST

At the Campbellford Methodist church yesterday morning (Hospital Sunday), the Rev. Dr. Bishop preached from Acts 13:36, "For David, after he had served his own generation by the will of God, fell on sleep and was laid unto his fathers." Among the many good thoughts brought out in the interesting sermon, was the duty of every citizen to bear his share of the general responsibility for the welfare and economy of which he is a part. He thought the duties of the Board of Management of the hospital were doing a service for the community that was commendable. Through their efforts the hospital worthily institution were placed within the reach of all, and the increased number of patients, it was plain, fully justified their outlay. Being enjoyed by all classes of citizens—independent, indigent, benefited, suffering relieved, and in many cases living prolonged. It was our duty as citizens to support the institution to the best of our ability, and their appeals for financial assistance should meet with a ready response from all quarters. The sermon was very convincing, and contained many of the small comforting one.

Our Eighth Anniversary.

Having now done eight years of successful business, we intend celebrating our anniversary June 1st by giving to any of our customers and friends who will call on us that day a FREE SITTING and one Cabinet PORTRAIT. MISS MORTON, Photo-artist.

Empire Day in the East Ward School.

Empire Day was very slightly observed in the east ward school, where a program consisting of patriotic songs, drills, recitations and essays, prepared by the pupils, was admirably rendered. Master Howard Clarke performed the duties of chairman creditably. The occasion was made more attractive to the school by the presence of Mr. Stewart, chairman of the Board of Education, and Dr. White, another member of the same board of whom gave instructive and pleasing addresses on the patriotism and loyalty to the British Empire. A hearty vote of thanks to the visitors was brought to a close a very profitable afternoon.

An Earnest Appeal.

(The Port Hope Guide-Visitor.)

We have reason to believe Rhetorically speaking, the Province of Ontario is one of the most attendant institution, but who should be doing so. We are desirous of obtaining the names and addresses of parents of all such children, and we earnestly appeal to the readers of these lines to assist in securing the information. Clergymen of all denominations, physicians, assessors, inspectors of schools and public school teachers are in an especially favorable position to assist in this direction, and by so doing they would be conferring an inestimable boon on those silent members of the community. Our desire is to enter into correspondence with the parents of deaf children with the hope of inducing them to send them to our school at Belleville, where they may receive such physical and instruction as will fit them to become useful, self-supporting and respectful citizens. It is a lamentable thing that any deaf boy or girl should be deprived of the opportunity of such an education when it is freely provided for them by the people of the Province. We earnestly hope the newspapers throughout the Province will call attention to this matter and thus secure the results we desire.

LAKE AND RIVER JOTTINGS.

MANY YACHTSMEN ENJOYED FIRST OUTING ON HOLIDAY.

Sturgeon Point Notes and Other Matters of Interest to Past Readers.

Evening Post of May 25th.

Mr. Jos. Brown's yacht made a trip to the Point yesterday. Mr. Brown says that bad luck comes in bunches when it starts—in some way while at the Point, he upsilipped his rudder, so that he was forced to run slow all the way to town. Then, about the first load below town he struck a stump or water-soaked log and broke his propeller. However, he managed to limp up on two blades.

Mr. G. H. Hopkins has had his cottage open for the last week, and says it is just nearly as cold at the Point as upstairs.

Mr. H. J. Clarry has launched his steel boat, and keeps it in the boathouse owned by his brother.

Mr. John Dickson is keeping his Lake Scugog at the Point. He has a fine thing of the same type as Mr. Jesse Harris, of Iowa.

Mr. Rube Morgan made a trip to Pleasant Point yesterday in his yacht, and gave his friends a trip around the lake. He visited the new resort, "Thursloms."

Mr. Jesse Perrin yesterday visited "The Fort," Balsam Lake, in his new automobile launch, the engines of which are contained in a bonnet and managed from the steersman's seat.

A couple of sails were seen yesterday on the lake, although there was very little wind.

Mr. Fred Knowlton had his launch out on Victoria Day, and enjoyed a run down the lake.

Mr. A. B. Terry was trying Mr. Boggs launch yesterday, and Mr. A. J. Begg was trying Mr. Terry's. Both parties report a good time and Mr. Boggs's boat is believed to have made a record.

Mr. Ab. Cottrelan gave the launch he has been building a trial run as far out as Bass Island, and who saw him give a burst off speed on the down run, declared he is going to steer the fastest craft on the lake after this summer. The boat is well fitted for speeding, being a good, speedy model. The engines are English compounds, and the whole outfit should surprise most of the boats on the lake when everything is working smoothly.

Mr. Stewart's fine new launch was in use on Scugog lake yesterday. Mr. Stewart likes the sport very much better for yachting than the lake.

There was quite a crowd at Thursloms', Sturgeon Lake's new resort, yesterday. A large number of tents dotted out with their families for a day's enjoyment. Cool drinks and refreshments were served from a booth centrally located, swings were in constant use, and a few eggs and boats could be had. Games of all kinds were carried on and everybody seemed to be enjoying themselves. "Thursloms" bids fair to be a very popular resort, as there is said to be a fine beach at all times and there is a nice sleeping beach for boating and bathing.

OBITUARY.

Richard Kellett, Carlyle, Man.

The Carlyle Herald, of May 9th, noted the death there of Mr. Richard Kellett, father of Mrs. C. Mitchell, of this town, whose husband is Grand Trunk bridge inspector for this division. The Herald says:

A western pioneer and one of the best known men of the Carlyle district passed away on Tuesday afternoon of this week, in the person of Richard Kellett. Deceased was born at Mourlbrook, Longsleddy, Westmoreland, England, in 1831 and had reached the ripe old age of 76 years.

Coming to Canada as a young man, he settled on the Niagara frontier, at Fort Erie, Ont., where he engaged in railroad work, which he followed for nearly fifty years, during which time he held many responsible positions, such as superintendent and president on the Great Northern. Later he was connected with a constructive work at many points on the line, east of Winnipeg, and was known as one of the best track layers in the service of the Company. He came to the Prairie Province twenty years ago and located at Carberry Plains and later at Carlyle, where he came to Carlyle five years ago and engaged in the lumber and implement business.

He enjoyed good health until about a year ago when a general breaking up of his system began, and since October last he had been confined to his home.

Deceased was a man of sterling worth and of kindly heart, though but few words. His life was one of usefulness and by industious habits he had earned a competency. He was a lifelong member of the Anglican church and a member of the Masonic Order. He position he was a life-long Conservative.

He leaves behind him a widow, five sons and two daughters, twenty-eight grandchildren and five great grandchildren. The sons are Thos. H., of Winnipeg, Richard, of Carman, John, and George, of Carlyle, Charles of Boissevain. The daughters are Mrs. J. Revell, Winnipeg, and Mrs. Chas. Mitchell, of Lindsay.

The funeral took place on Thursday afternoon to Mountain View cemetery, a large crowd showing their esteem for respect to a worthy citizen.

A Free Trader's Sarcasm.

But it would seem that Canada feels herself strong enough among the nations to dispense with an impregnable Chinese wall. That, of course, would be too much to ask of the infant nation of 80,000,000 people to the south.

Accused of Theft.

Evening Post of May 25th.

A gang of about 20 youths from Peterboro came up to Lindsay on "a time" yesterday. One of their leaders was charged with a quantity of souvenirs and other goods in the Mr. J. Biggs, store. Mr. Boggs discovered the loss of the goods immediately after the boys had left, and informed County Constables Proctor and Nelson, who followed the gang. Pieces of the stolen articles were picked up on Lindsay-st. opposite the Academy, and on York and Kent-sts. Some of the boys were apprehended and taken to the Chief's office, where they were asked to turn out the stolen property. None owning to thieving, they were allowed to go. They returned to Peterboro's fast evening.

VICTORIA COUNTY EDUCATION

would remark that a teacher should know that what is taught in his school is only a part, and sometimes only a small part, of a good education, and that there are other responsibilities awaiting the arrival of the pupil at home after the closing of the school day. There are chores to be done, messages to be taken, music lessons to be taken, organ or piano practice, if the child is fortunate enough to have it, or if the child of very religious parents the Sunday school lesson or the catechism must receive attention. So that there are so many conditions and circumstances bearing up the child life that the amount of home work should be under rather than over the mark.

In giving out the home work the teacher should be systematical, and not deal it out indiscriminately, but should keep a record of what he gives the class so that he may refer to it the next day. It has an injurious effect upon a class to have home work given fairly regularly every day and never asked for the next day. And that same thing is not unfrequently practised by some teachers — not in East or West Victoria, but in some other counties in Ontario.

The home work should be in the nature of a review of work gone over recently or somewhat recently, and always work which has been thoroughly dealt with previously, and one of the most important subjects should in rotation occupy a place amongst each day's home work. By the most important subjects, I mean those which would the most benefit the pupil if he were taken out of school for good, at any time—spelling, reading, writing, the fundamental rules, multiplication tables, tables of weights and measures, sandwiching them with other subjects less important, and so on in the higher rooms.

Then in brief;

1. Home work is useful in helping the pupil to obtain knowledge.
2. Home work helps the parent in directing the life of the pupil, the teacher occupying an unseen position of guardian.
3. Home work cannot be regulated to suit all the pupils of one form, because what would be much for one, might be little for another.
4. Teachers should size up the members of the class as to age, constitution, mental and physical development, and special needs owing to to circumstances.
5. It is better to be under than over the mark in the amount of home work. Better give too little than to make what ought to be the simple child life a life of early worry by giving too much.
6. Home work should generally be review work and should be such that the pupil might accomplish without the assistance of others.
7. Teachers should systematically keep a record of the home work in order to know how to deal with it next day.
8. It is a mistake to give home work and not take it up next day, as the neglect is demoralizing to the class.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

In the afternoon the President gave an address on "Physiology," which he stated ought to be called "Hygiene". He asserted that to know how to use the nose and the lungs as their structure recommend, that breathing exercises should be taught the pupils, laying special stress on the benefits of breathing through the nose instead of the mouth.

The election of officers for next year resulted as follows;

President—Mr. Broderick.
Sec. and Treas.—Mr. J. C. Harstone
Auditors—Messrs. D. R. Anderson and C. D. Barr.

Mr. J. H. Knight was elected to the Lindsay Library Board.

The different sections met during the afternoon and transacted much important business.

Mr. Walks, before a union meeting of the East and West Victoria teachers, read a very interesting and valuable paper on the methods of teaching composition.

TUESDAY'S SESSION.

Dr. White, at the morning session read an able and instructive paper on "Medical Examination of Pupils."

AFTERNOON.

The subject of 'Grammar' was taken up by Messrs. T. C. Birchard and D. McFadden. Mr. Birchard, in his paper, advocated that the subject aught to be taught in junior classes.

Mr. McFadden concurred in much of what had been said in the previous paper — he considered grammar one of the most important subject on the program of studies. It teaches the pupil to think and question himself. This subject should teach the essential use of speech, so that a pupil will know when he has written or spoken correctly. How should this subject be taught? It should be taught inductively, and thus bring the pupil's knowledge learned, into use in the studios of literature and composition.

The following took part in the discussion: Messrs. Knight, Jardine, McDougall, McDonald, Stevens, Harstone, Rogers, Rosevear, Walks, Bramfitt, and Misses Wilson, Thomas, Fanning and Walker.

WATER COMMISSIONERS MET

A BATCH OF ACCOUNTS PASSED—OTHER BUSINESS.

Complaints Discussed—Waterworks System to be Flushed Out.

The usual routine business was done by the Water Commissioners in their meeting on Monday afternoon. A couple of complaints were discussed, and the laboring men in the employ of the waterworks, will, in all probability, be allowed a nine-hour day on Saturdays. They will be paid for ten hours.

There were present at the meeting, Mr. J. D. Flavelle, chairman, Messrs. J. R. McNiellie, Thos Brady and Mayor Vrooman. After the minutes had been read by Secretary Ray and confirmed, the following accounts were passed;

The Dean Steamfitting Co......	$ 5.01
McLennan & Co.	5.92
W. Lownsborough	5.80
H. Mullen & Co.	14.31
Men's wages	23.35
T. Bryant	1.34
W. S. Armstrong	7.00
Men's wages	25.80
J. Mitchell	1.40

And application from Mr. D. Eagleson for an ordinary service was granted.

A communication was read from Alex. Milne, third vice-president of the Waterworks Association of America, asking the Lindsay Commissioners to join the association. The rate is an initiation fee of ten dollars, and three dollars for each subsequent year. The Commissioners would be benefited by the advice of expert sanitary engineers on troublesome matters. Conventions are also held, and matters of general interest discussed. The communication was then laid on the table.

Mr. Steers wanted a rebate on his account because of his not being able to use the water for two months owing to a frozen service. Mr. Beall also complained his service was inefficient. Regarding the latter, Supt. Hammond stated that half-inch pipe was used, and it wasn't large enough to give force. The Superintendent was instructed to examine into the case. Mr. Hammond then requested that the men be allowed to quit on Saturday evening at five o'clock. The majority of laborers, he said, were allowed this privilege.—Left in Secretary Ray's hands, with power to act.

Mr. Wescott asked for a rate for a service in his pasture in the south ward, for watering ten cows. The rate was fixed for the summer at six dollars.

Superintendent Hammond reported that he had the filters cleaned out and had placed four inches more of sand in them. The whole waterworks system would be flushed out in the course of a few days.

The meeting then adjourned.

CANAL OFFICIALS VISIT OMEMEE.

That Village Formally Declared to be a Port of Call on the Trent Canal.

Omemee was, on Victoria Day, declared to be a port of call on the Trent Canal system. The event was marked by much enthusiasm and pride. Superintendent J. H. McClellan and several canal officials left Bobcaygeon on the steamer Sovereign and sailed up Pigeon Creek, but were unable to get any further with the boat than Cowan's bridge, three miles from Omemee, as the structure is not high enough, being only eighteen feet above the water, whereas an overhead bridge should be thirty. The bridge will have to be raised before boats can sail up the stream. At the floating bridge, nine miles from Omemee, the party was met by Reeve Beattie, of the village, and Reeve Wm. Lowes, of Emily, and many others. As the Sovereign could not get under Cowan's bridge, Mr. McClellan and party proceeded in a gasoline launch to the village, where they were tendered a luncheon.

Reeve Beattie presided and the canal president formally declared the village a port of call on the Trent Canal system. Speeches were made by Reeve Beattie, Reeve Lowes, Mr. J. D. Thornton and others, and there was great rejoicing.

Mr. McClellan stated that with very little dredging a six foot channel could be had. The channel will be marked out by buoys and piers, and cleared of weeds. The expense will not be heavy, and the work will likely be done this year. Omemee will then be able to get in its supplies of coal, cement, tanbark, etc., by water, which will mean much to the village and its business interests.

Mrs. J. McDermid, William St., Lindsay, says:—I am seventy-nine years of age and have suffered the tortures of Rheumatism for over ten years. After all other treatments had failed I was advised to try Perkins' National Herb Tablets about four years ago and after taking them regularly for some time I was completely cured and have been enjoying good health ever since. I will consider it a pleasure to meet anyone or answer any inquiries.

Free sample sent to any address upon request. Price 25c, 50c and $1 a box at all Druggists and Dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The National Herb Company, Limited, Toronto.

WRECK AT WAUBAUSHENE.

Engine Ran Into Open Switch—Auxiliary From Lindsay.

On Sunday evening at about 11 o'clock an engine with a water transport widener and rapid unloader attached, ran into an open switch at Waubashene, while going at a speed of about 20 miles an hour. Both were ditched, but the crew escaped uninjured.

The switch was left open by a train in charge of Conductor Riddle, that was shunting in the locality. Conductor Handsford was in charge of the wrecked train.

The auxiliary was dispatched from Lindsay and the track was cleared in a short time. The Midland to Blackwater train was delayed one hour and a half.

Safety For Children.

Baby's Own Tablets contain no opiate, nor narcotic, no poisonous drug. The mother who uses these Tablets for her children has the guarantee of a government analyst as to the truth of these statements. This medicine can therefore be used with absolute safety, and it always cures such troubles as indigestion, sour stomach, constipation, diarrhoea and colic. The Tablets cure simple fevers, break up colds, destroy worms and make teething easy. Mrs. W. H. Young, Roslin, Ont., says: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets as needed for more than a year and would not be without them in the house. They are just the think for teething babies and other minor ailments." The Tablets cost only 25 cents a box and may be had from medicine dealers or by mail from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A QUEER SITUATION

Fish and Game Warden in a Predicament—Found With Five Ducks.

Evening Post of May 23.

"He carried a gun for protection against those whom he had caused to be fined for violating the fish and game laws." Such was the reason advanced by Guide Nicholls, game warden at Bobcaygeon, when questioned by a magistrate concerning five ducks seen in his possession. It leaked out that in his three year term of office he had prosecuted only one law-breaker.

Information had been laid before County Police Magistrate Moore against Nicholls for personal violation of the fish and game laws, a man named Parker, who had been fined for illegal fishing, having retaliated with the counter charge. Nicholls had been caught with the "goods" in the shape of five ducks; three of those he claimed to have picked up after being shot by others —he had found them floating; the two were Mergansers caught in traps set for muskrat.

Whether Mergansers are ducks or not is, in the opinion of some, an unsolved problem, and Magistrate Moore gave Nicholls the benefit of the doubt. The charge was dismissed without costs, but his Worship did not forget to dwell with emphasis on the peculiar circumstance of Nicholls invariably carrying a gun. It suggested the thought that occasionally the quiet shepherd is more to be feared than the ravening wolves.

OUR MONEY FLOWING BACK!

CANADIAN BANKERS ARE WITHDRAWING FUNDS.

Government Statement Shows an Encouraging Change in Conditions.

In view of the recent discussion in these columns in reference to the practice of Canadian banks sending their surplus to New York on call loans, the statement issued by the the Government the other day showing a decrease in the amount held in the United States on call loans, will be of interest. The Toronto News, referring to it, says;

The Government statement of the condition of the thirty-five Canadian chartered banks on April 30th, '07, as is to hand. It shows a note circulation of $72,849,909, a shrinkage of about $3,500,000 for the month, but an expansion of about $6,300,000 over the same date a year ago. The liquidation in stocks is reflected by a decrease during April of $2,309,326 in call loans in Canada, and of $3,-000,000 in call loans elsewhere, i.e., in the United States. Current loans in Canada increased about $7,000,-000 during April to $586,149,738. Current loans elsewhere, ie., in the United States, decreased $4,400,000. In is thus seen that the Canadian banks are still pursuing the policy of bringing funds home to meet the requirements of business in Canada. The value to the country of these bank reserves abroad is thus again proven.

Ashamed of the Sports.

(Toronto Globe.)

No. The Globe did not start the Longboat fund. It saw the fund had reached the splendid sum of $30 after ten days' effort, and made an appeal, as the result of which the fund is now over $180. The Globe is a little bit ashamed of the "sports" of Toronto, but they don't seem to be worrying about that.

Obituary

The funeral of the late Samuel Reazin, who died on Friday morning last took place on Sunday afternoon to Riverside cemetery, under Masonic auspices. The local Faithful Brethren Lodge attended in a body, and Mr. Dickson Jewett, Dr. Bingham, Mr. Mann and other prominent Masons from Cannington and other points, were also present. The Masonic funeral service was conducted at the residence of the deceased, and a large number followed the remains to the cemetery.

ONTARIO BANK REAL ESTATE

Valuers Appointed to Ascertain Work of Properties of Defunct Bank.

It is understood that Messrs. Pearson Bros., real estate agents, of Adelaide-st. east, Toronto, have been appointed by the Bank of Montreal and the liquidators of the Ontario Bank, to adjust all the real estate properties of the defunct Ontario Bank, which the Bank of Montreal are taking over. The adjustment includes the ascertaining of the values of all properties, whether freehold, or only on lease, and, as the Ontario Bank had property in a great many places, throughout Canada, the work of valuing will probably be an extensive one.

Died in Toronto.

The many friends of Mr. Herb. Little, harness-maker, a former citizen of Lindsay, but lately of Toronto, will hear with regret of his death in that city of consumption. The body will be brought to Lindsay for interment. Deep sympathy will be felt for the bereaved family.

LITTLE BRITAIN.

(Special to The Post.)

Rev. Herbert Moore, of Michigan, preached in the Methodist church on Sunday to an appreciative audience.

Mr. John Wickett raised his concretions and upholstered his barn Friday.

Our villagers are daily preparing for summer by beautifying their residences.

Mr. Chas. Langdale has erected a C. H. Lapp, our popular teacher, attended the convention at Lindsay this week.

Mr. J. E. Dix sold two carloads of export cattle last week, and is stocking his ranch with young cattle.

Farmers are busy preparing seed land. They report alsike, clover, red clover and fall wheat improving, although the weather keeps cold.

OMEMEE.

Winter weather has set in and everyone has donned heavy clothing.

The village is quiet since Victoria Day.

John Mallock, one of the oldest G. T.R. section men is confined to his home with inflammation of the lungs.

Jas. Keith, senior, was the guest of his son, Dr. Keith, and passed in the sports as much as most of the youthful boys.

Victoria Day celebration passed off to the satisfaction of the large number of people present. All claim they never go away disappointed with one of our celebrations.

A move is now on to have regatta here on July 1st, when yachts will be able to reach here after the government dredging.

The township council meets to-day under most friendly relations, everything going on agreeably.

The Trent Valley engineers arrived here on Commodore Beatty's boat about noon, and were entertained at the Commercial house. They expressed themselves as pleased with the trip by water from Buckhorn and look on our city as a valuable tributary to the canal. Operations will begin right away. They left at 2 o'clock well pleased.

We regret to hear of the illness of Rev. Mr. Roberts, a former respected pastor here in the Methodist church, but now resides in Toronto.

BLACKSTOCK.

(Special to The Post.)

Mr. Thos. Crawford has been very ill with nervous prostration. Her mother, Mrs. Woodley, of Lindsay, is at the home.

Mr. Jas. Startridge, of Toronto, was home for the 24th.

The weather has been cold and backward, and we are longing for the fine warm days. Sunday night's rain was welcomed, and good weather is now expected.

Dr. McKinnon, of Toronto, spent the 24th at Blackstock, and was well comed.

Rev. Mr. Forster's children have the measles just now. The little daughter was quite low for a few days, but is now out of danger.

Mr. A. VanCamp is contemplating a trip to the West.

On Friday afternoon a fine game ball match was played between Lindsay and Blackstock teams, the latter winning. Dr. Harris officiated as umpire very satisfactorily. Racers and contests of various kinds were run off by the scholars for various prizes. A splendid tea was served in the basement of the church. Rev. Mr. Henderson, of Port Hope, preached to a full house on "Mothers, Leaves and Crookers". Everyone enjoyed this highly entertaining and intellectual feast, and pronounced it magnificent. The pastor, Rev. A. Dafoe, occupied the chair and the church choir furnished five selections. Proceeds amounted to $110. This is the best anniversary the Methodists have had yet as far as finances are concerned.

The anniversary of the Methodist Sunday school was held on Sabbath, May 19, and Friday, 24th. Beautiful weather graced the occasion, and everything was favorable. On Sunday Rev. Father Bowles, of Toronto, preached inspiring sermons and very large crowds attended the services. Excellent music was provided by the S. S. choir, composed of about forty scholars.

KING'S WHARF.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Mr. Wm. Curtin, who has been poorly for some time, is now able to be out.

Mr. Alex. Millage is home from the drive. He says the water this spring was very cold.

Farmers around here are about finished seeding, and through backward, the prospects are good for a bountiful crop.

The people around here will ask the Postmaster-General for a mail three times a week. This is an old established office, and it is necessary that we should have our mail at least that often.

The Rev. Dr. McGuire visited our school last week. We are always pleased to see the rev. gentleman, as he is taking a great interest in the welfare of our children.

Wm. T. Morrisey, who has been poorly for some time, is now on a trip to Lorneville.

Mr. M. J. Harrington is beautifying his place by planting trees on his farm. You have only to look around Michael's place to be convinced that there is some taste at King's Wharf.

Mr. Neil Herlihy will soon move into his new house, and it is a daisy.
